Do You Use Gas?

House Cleaning Time is Almost Here

IN recognition of that impending calamity we are making a surprising Spring offer to induce you to have your house piped for fuel and lights—one or both—while the confusion is around. In economy and comfort it will repay you four-fold in one seasons use. Then why delay? ¶ It will give us pleasure and satisfaction to show you our 1908 Gas Ranges, Gas Fixtures and Lamps. ¶ Let us estimate at once on piping your house.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 25, 1908

How will Governor Johnson of Minnesota reconcile his assertion that no man has a right to go outside the constitution for any purpose, however beneficent, with that admiration which every true Democrat is supposed to entertain for Thomas Jefferson? Mr. Jefferson went far beyond the constitution when he made the Louisiana Purchase, if we recall our history correctly.

It is somewhat ludicrous to hear Senator Bailey, of Standard Oil fame, condemning President Roosevelt in the Senate. Mr. Bailey, speaking of the President, recently, said "He's:

"Too bad for a blessing,
Too good for a curse,
I wish in my heart
He were better or worse."

When, after some terrible disaster such as occurred in the Collingwood school, the authorities make inquiries regarding local conditions, there is always some one to say, "Oh yes, lock the barn door after the horse is stolen". And yet is it not better to profit by such an experience than to wait until one occurs nearer home?

Ex-Chief Engineer Stevens announces publicly that the Panama Canal, for the supervison of which he formerly drew $30,000 a year, will prove a failure; that it will be of no use to the United States when completed. Poor John Stevens will probably never get over the President's accepting the resignation John didn't mean.

An exchange remarks that, "We must not let the President know that colleges act as a deterrent to matrimony or he may abolish education." Never fear, brother, the President will simply impose a tax on you for stating so unfounded a fact.

It is no use for Emma Goldman to complain that she is not allowed to speak her mind. She has had four years in which to do it without interruption from the police and if that has not sufficed she should go where there is no time.

The late Senator Ingalls once said that the difference between Senator Chandler of New Hampshire and a wasp was that a wasp had only one stinger. Ex-Senator Chandler is now trying to live up to his reputation.

An Indiana old soldier has been arrested for writing "Uncle Joe" Cannon that he does not "own the earth." We admit that the old soldier is wrong but, we did not know that it would be construed as lese majestie for him to say it.

The President's opposition to docked-tail horses has had its effect in Washington, where there are some of the finest equipages in the country. A docked horse is rarely seen on the streets of the national capital.

Most Americans will rejoice if it prove true that the death sentence passed upon General Stoessel has been commuted to a year of imprisonment. And yet it would probable have been more merciful to have shot him.

In the "Coaching" Days.

An amusing story is told of the coach which used to run between Edinburgh and Berwick. A passenger complained bitterly that the cushion on which he sat was wet. It appears that there was a hole in the roof, and through it the rain was pouring copiously. The passenger called the guard and in great wrath reproached him. All the satisfaction he got, however, was the quiet and typical Scotch reply, "Ay, mony a ane has complained about that hole."—St. James' Gazette.

Gentle Play.

His Mother—What are you moping about the house for, Tommy? Why don't you go over and play with Charley Pinafore? Tommy—'Cause I played with Charley Pinafore yesterday, and I don't s'pose he's well enough yet.

WON AND LOST.

Oh, she was the belle of her toney set, a winsome and ravishing young brunette, with a pair of eyes that could read your thoughts and tie your affections all into knots. There wasn't a fellow in Big Bug Street but had laid his heart at her shapely feet, but she kept them guessing those hearts a-thump, which way the kitten would some day jump. But one there was, a scheming chap and he set for his game an enticing trap in the shape of an auto, a rig and horse that skimmed o'er the ground by electric force, and his rivals were wallowing in dismay when they saw the couple one balmy day spin forth like a streak for a country ride, on her face a picture of new-born pride, and his rivals muttered in worst of moods: "Our name is Dennis; he's got the goods."

And on o'er the country roads they went
In high grade rapture spinning,
Both in a dream of sweet content
Spasmodically grinning.

They talked of this and they talked of that, she through her bonnet, he through his hat; he whispered lies of the genus white, she swallowing them in her new delight. Upon the lever her hand he placed to guide the auto, and around her waist his arm like a noiseless serpent crawled and closer to him her form he hauled. He breathed in her ears the usual words the lovers toss to the dickey birds, and she responded in tones so sweet each sugared sentence seemed good to eat. He'd won the prize, and his soul was filled with joy till the foam o'er the edges spilled, and she was happy to think she'd caught a handsome fellow who owned an auto, and the jay-bird chattered and rustic cows bawled hoarse hooraws to their fresh sealed vows.

And on they sped their sense bereft,
So tightly did Cupid bind 'em,
That ere they knew it the town was left
Some seventeen miles behind 'em.

Then the clouds came up and the rain came down and sprinkled its tears on her new spring gown, then changed from a drizzle to falling flood, and the road was a channel of slush and mud, and the auto stopped in rebellious mood—like a balky mule in the roadway stood. And there they sat in the worst of storms with no umbrella to shield their forms, and they got as soaked on their auto perch as a new convert in the Baptist Church, and their love was chilled by the rainy slush till it grew impassive as cold fried mush. 'Twas full two miles to a railway town, and with scowling features he helped her down, and off they trudged through the muddly lane in the pitiless pour of the blawsted rain, her eyes all chafed with the tears she shed, his lips calcined with the things he said, and they learned at the station with souls aghast that the last dummed train for the day had passed.

And his rivals chattered with merry lip,
And approached with new endeavor,
For the language used on that soggy trip
Queered him with her forever.

Noah and Genoa.

In his "Rambling Recollections" Sir Henry Drummond Wolff tells the following story of Bulwer Lytton:

"A lady one day remarked to the famous novelist and politician how odd it was that a dove (derived from the word columbe) should have been sent to find the Old World and that Columbus (Columbe) should have found the new. Sir Edward replied:

"'Yes, and the one came from Noah, the other from Genoa.'"

Her Dear Friend.

"Yes," said she defiantly, "I admit that I kissed him."

"Did he put up much of a struggle?" inquired her best girl friend.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

About the first thing that would strike a dead hero could he return to earth would be the great number who try to answer his name at roll call.—Atchison Globe.

MARRIED

Mr. George C. Andrews, assistant engineer on Barge Canal work was united in marriage on Wednesday, March 18, with Miss Smith of Buffalo. Mr. and Mrs. Andrews are enjoying an extended wedding trip and will reach Fulton on Monday next.

DIED.

Eva L. Painter, aged 12, died yesterday at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Painter, 92 Worth street. Interment at Ballston Spa.

On Wednesday at her home in West Granby occurred the death of Carrie Kelsey, aged 42, wife of Mr. William Gates, after a long illness. The funeral services were held on Sunday from the late home and interment was made in Mt. Adnah. The immediate surviving relatives are the husband, two sons, Glenn M., and William; one brother, Mr. Fred Kelsey, Fulton, and one sister, Mrs. William Fairchild, Rochester.

William W. Palmer, a lifelong resident of the town of Granby, died at his home one mile north of Jacksonville Wednesday, March 18, at the advanced age of 88 years. He was for many years actively identified with the business and political interests of the town, having held the office of Justice of the Peace for several terms. He is survived by three sons, E. W. Palmer and C. D. Palmer of Granby, and Fred W. Palmer of Rochester, and one daughter, Mrs L. B. Russ of Lysander. The funeral was held at his late home on Saturday, March 21, Rev. O. L. Fisher officiating. Interment at Jacksonville cemetery.

Board of Public Works.

The regular meeting of the Board of Public Works was held on Monday evening, President Bradley and Commissioners Howe and Thomson being present. Several bills were audited and one was disallowed. A complaint was received from James Carroll relative to a drain near his premises in need of reconstruction. Superintendent Flynn was instructed to look into the matter. A number of bills considered not collectable were ordered not to be placed on the new books. City Attorney Guile was also authorized to collect some water bills from an individual who was previously empowered to collect them and who, it is alleged, did so but failed to pay the money over to the city. The clerk was authorized to notify the bonding company that the amount of defalcation of former Clerk Richard Carr had been paid the Board.

The matter of apportionment of the cost of construction of several cement sidewalks was settled by a resolution which provided that the cost of constructing cement sidewalks in front of property owned by the Fulton Paper Company, Foster Brothers & Chattilon Company, F. H. Jennings and S. F. Merry be apportioned as follows: S. F. Merry, city's share $12.43, owner's share $24.95, total $37.38; F. H. Jennings, city's share $12.73, owner's share $25.46, total $38.19; Fulton Paper Company and Foster Brothers, Chattilon Company, city's share $7.63, Fulton Paper Company's share $7.64, Foster Brothers, Chattilon Company's share $7.63, total $22.90. This apportionment will be certified to the Common Council.

Before the Mirror.

He is one of those persons with a mad passion for figuring out "How much," "How long," etc., and was waiting for his wife, who was adjusting her hat before the mirror. They were going to the theater and had ten minutes to catch their train. Presently a sparkle came into his eye, and he fished a pencil and paper from his pocket. That kind of man always has a pencil and paper even in his evening clothes.

"Do you know," he said presently, looking up at his wife, who had finished adjusting her hat, "that I figure, basing my figures on observation, that a girl from six to ten spends an average of seven minutes a day before her mirror, from ten to fifteen a quarter of an hour, from fifteen to twenty twenty-two minutes. A woman of seventy will have spent 5,862 hours, or eight solid months, counting day and night. Now, a woman of your age has spent"—

"Never mind what I've spent," she said coldly, removing her hat. "You have spent fifteen minutes figuring it out, and we have missed that train."—St. Louis Republic.

Variety.

Visitor—Why do you make some of your pies round and some of them square? Wife—Because my husband has been complaining of sameness of his diet lately.

Jesters must be content to taste of their broth.—Latin Proverb.

Making "Cinnamon" Canaries.

"Cinnamon canaries are the best known of a mere handful of instances where it is possible to change the color of a bird or animal by food. The trick has long been known to fanciers, and each claims to have his own secret for working the miracle, but the process is really simple and consists in abundantly sprinkling the birds' food with red pepper. It is a troublesome process for a large number of birds either refuse to eat or suffer from deranged digestion. Even of those who take the diet not more than a third or a half will show the color effects. The only inducement to the fanciers to produce this curious change is that once so altered these birds have an artificial value. Dealers will tell you that in addition to the red pepper they give other red articles of food, such as tomato skins, slices of beet and the skins of red apples or cranberries. But this is merely an innocent fallacy, based on the idea that the coloring matter of the food is transferred bodily to the feathers.—Collier's Weekly.

Partial Lapse.

"Did you cry, Ethel?"

(Doubtfully) "N-no, ma'am."

"Are you quite sure?"

(With sudden illumination) "I booed, but I didn't hoo."—Puck.

Straws show which way the wind is blowing, but not how soon it may change.

A Pulaski Hero.

In the fall of 1862 I had a pass down town from Camp Patterson Park of the 110th Regiment, above the City of Baltimore, and fell in company with W. B. Butler, Orderly Sergeant of Co. B and he gave me his confidence. He was a noble, ambitious fellow and by profession a civil engineer who had planned and executed two maps of our camp, the last containing correct photographs of all the field officers. He said his Captain had promoted a private from the ranks over his head to Second Lieutenant and that he shouldn't stand it, and was going to apply to Colonel Littlejohn for a transfer to the Corps D'Afrique as Second Lieutenant. He did so and was successful and in a few months after was shot through the head in an assault on Port Hudson. The G. A. R. Post at Pulaski was named J. S. Butler Post in honor to his memory.

The attention of Times readers is respectfully called to the advertisement of J. H. St. Louis & Co., in this issue. The firm during its sojourn in Fulton has established an unassailable reputation for honesty and fair dealing and the growth of their business has been phenominal. Mr. and Mrs. St. Louis are most estimable people and their willingness to place an article before a customer is a guarantee of their own belief in its worth. The Times extends congratulations to the two-year old firm and wishes them many years of prosperity in the city of their adoption.

A busy local physician recently made a call in a family with whom he was well acquainted. After prescribing for the patient he took a book, which he had once commenced to read, from a stand and opening the leaves at the place where he had left off some weeks previous, he became lost to the world. When he had concluded the story he went to his carriage. The next day when starting out on his ride, his driver inquired if he would visit this particular patient again, remarking, if so, he would take along some bedding for the horse. The physician heartily enjoyed the joke which seemed to have been on the driver who sat holding the horse the day previous.

Mr. Ray Loveless, one of Fulton's greatest automobile enthusiasts, has taken the local agency for the famous Buick automobile and it will give him the keenest pleasure to respond to a telephone call, No. 1381, or a postal card request from you and tell you all about styles, merit and prices of the cars which he represents. If you are at all interested in the fascinating subject let Mr. Loveless arrange a demonstration of these peerless machines for you. His advertisement on page 1 will introduce three of the latest models to you with their prices. There are others of greater or less price but all of real value.

Pulaski Democrat: Not in a long time have we been more surprised than we were when an honorable and esteemed gentlemun came in and ordered his paper discontinued on the ground that the editor had not recognized him on the street. Now, if there is a man, woman, child, horse or dog in God's world whom we know and have not tried to be friendly with we want them now to speak or forever after hold their peace. It has always been our aim to know the whole world, regardless of age, color or previous condition of service or social relations. We have tried never to forget the humble birth and hard struggle we have had for life.

LOW RATE TO NEW YORK.

$8.40 round trip via New York Central from Fulton April 9th and 10th, good until April 13th. Six trains. Grand Central Station.

The Baptist Mission Study class will meet this week at the home of Miss Hazel Gardner, Oneida street, when the annual banquet will be held. Miss Hountoun, a returned Missionary from China, will be present and deliver an address.

Mr. Horace N. Gilbert has sold to Mr. E. J. Penfield, his very desirable property, corner of fifth and Academy streets. Mr. Penfield also purchased additional ground at the rear of the house on which he will construct an automobile house.

Postmaster Hughes has arranged neat time table cards containing all information relative to incoming and outgoing mails from the two local offices, for the benefit of business men throughout the city. If you have not received one, call at the post office, either side, and one will be given you.

Matters looked a bit more roseate to the employes in the woolen mill and to the local business houses on Monday when a small portion of the No. 2 drawing department, a few spinners and some of the yarn department commenced work, calling back a few hands who had not expected to return before April 15.

A benefit for Mrs. Kittie Hogan has been arranged for the last three days in this week. Anyone desiring to contribute toward the cause will please notify Mrs. J. B. Birdsall, who will call or send for the articles for a Rummage sale. Mrs. Hogan's health is rapidly failing in Denver, Col., and her demise is a question of but a short time.

Just received. A lot of Men's tan and black W. L. Douglas low Shoes for wear. 15 First street.

DISCHARGE THE ASHMAN; COOK WITH GAS.

With gas comes comfort. Saves time and lessens labor. No coal to carry up; no ashes to carry out. Saves dirt. A great deal of coal isn't burned, anyway, it's carried away by the ashman--and that's just so much waste.

Burn Gas Instead of Cash.

Gas saves money. Don't have to waste it in getting up heat. It's ready in a jiffy. Don't have to waste cash AFTER the cooking is done, as you do with coal. Turn off the Gas and you turn off waste.

Gas is better in every way--saves time, dirt, work, worry and money, besides giving a wonderful amount of comfort, which folks never dreamed of before.

CHAPTER XVI.

UPON this eventful Friday, which might justly be termed "black" by the various persons connected with this narrative, two more gentlemen mentioned herein had occasion to use the telegraph lines vigorously.

The first was the Hon. Mr. Frank Kinwait, member of the upper house of the Texas legislature and chairman of the state improvement committee thereof. Contrary to Mr. Renwyck's positive statement, the distinguished legislator had not gone back to Austin. Instead he had quietly stopped over in Washington, held close communication with several mighty officials, then wired frantically to his most trusted lieutenant, the vice chairman of the state improvement committee at Austin, in a cipher code. These communications were imperative orders concerning the passage of a certain deep water harbor bill.

The Hon. Mr. Kinwait while in New York had held several conferences of a delicate nature, including that luncheon at Sherry's and other meals of a similar character elsewhere, and now deemed it expedient to be far away from the capital of Texas during the passage of the said harbor bill; therefore he gave the matter absent treatment, so to speak, though his meek associates on the committee carried out their leader's instructions to the letter. They had enjoyed no dinners in New York, but they were confident in a certain hope of at least partaking of the dessert vicariously through Mr. Kinwait.

The other person interested in telegraphy was the heavy hearted Mr. Bill Williams, himself en route for New York. Half a day before he reached Buffalo he received a dispatch from his son Richard, and for a quarter of an hour he was radiantly happy; then he received a second one couched in the same words, and it puzzled him, especially in the earnest warning to return to Texas at once and watch his harbor scheme. At Buffalo he received a sheaf of yellow envelopes which resembled a fine poker hand, in that there were four of them—all of the same kind.

In highly ornate language the cattle king expressed his belief that a trick was being played on him by his enemies, so he left the train and sought the nearest telegraph office. His friend, Mr. Loger, had failed to state the name of the hospital in which the son lay dying, and Mr. Bill Williams had not seen in the San Antonio papers the dispatch about his son, so the father wired all the hospitals in New York for information and lost three hours' time in waiting for answers. He received a number of replies from various institutions, eight of which disclaimed all knowledge of the patient, while the ninth advised him that Mr Richard Williams of San Antonio Tex., was truly confined in St. Luke's hospital and that his condition was not so favorable, owing to an increase of fever. Bill Williams was convinced some crafty trick was being hatched but he hoped later on to settle with the hen. Meanwhile, whatever happened, he must go to his boy. He sent one more telegram and then hastened on to New York by the next train.

This telegram, addressed to Mr Richard Williams, was received at St Luke's hospital, and a pretty, fresh cheeked nurse took it to Lord Croyland's room.

"A telegram, Mr. Williams. Shall I open it for you?"

"Please," said the earl, with the listless indifference of a very sick man "I dare say it is some beastly business matter. Read it."

The girl complied, reading as follows:

Buffalo, N. Y.

Mr. Richard Williams, St. Luke's Hospital, New York:

Cheer up, Dickie. Will be with you tomorrow morning. DAD.

Lord Croyland stared at the uniformed young lady while he fumbled fruitlessly for his monocle among the folds of his nightshirt.

"Bot!" he observed in languid disgust. "Haven't got a dad, you know. Some silly ass is trying to come a cropper."

The nobleman then turned on his pillow and closed his eyes, while the fair attendant looked thoughtful, took the patient's temperature and made a memorandum to the effect that his mind had begun to wander.

Meanwhile matters at Irvington were dragging along unsatisfactorily. The last rehearsal of the play had resulted in a spirited quarrel between Miss Imogene and her dismal fiance. Mr. Van der Awe was a champion of realism, even on the stage. He considered it the height of absurdity for a passionate lover to imprint kisses upon his adored one's theatrical wig near the region of her left ear.

"But, good gracious me," stormed the indignant bird, with a dangerous snap in her big blue eyes, "don't you have enough realism when we are alone? If you think I'm going to let you kiss me before all those people you are very much mistaken. Now, one more word and we'll leave out that part altogether, sir! No, don't speak to me! Don't come near me! I think you are perfectly hateful and ridiculous. How I was ever weakminded enough to engage myself to you at all is more than I can understand. So don't tempt me!"

The argument had become somewhat one sided, so the dismal one retreated from the field of action, crestfallen, but unconvinced on matters pertaining to realism. He was a practical young man, however, and decided to kiss the wig in the region of its wearer's left ear for the present. Later—ah!

Richard had made several desperate attempts at a tete-a-tete with Miss Harriet, but found her nervous, distrait and unsympathetic to his advances. She acted as though some shadow of impending trouble lay upon her mind, so the Texan gave up in despair, took a short lesson in British etiquette from the much subdued Bills and then went for a solitary horseback ride.

His deception could not be kept up much longer, for troubles were gathering above him like Longfellow's soaring vultures, and he fancied he knew one sick and wounded bison that would shortly be pecked to pieces, hoof and hide. And yet, no matter what happened, he would brazen it out to the bitter end. If he could only win the girl before the inevitable crash, then nothing else would matter—nothing!

Shortly after dinner the final preparations were made for the evening's entertainment. A tiny stage had been constructed at one end of the double drawing room and was provided with handsome plush curtains designed to slide upon a wire—when they worked properly, which was infrequent—which when opened revealed a dainty interior scene. The drawing room was arranged with chairs to accommodate the guests, who began to arrive shortly after dinner, and Restmore soon became a sparkle of lights and laughter. A gong announced the opening of the theater doors, and the audience crowded in, took their seats and waited with a flutter of excitement.

Mrs. Renwyck had agreed to speak the prologue, but at the last moment her courage forsook her, and she vowed she would sink through the floor if forced to face her guests. Arguments and encouragements were alike in vain, so Richard was prevailed upon to take her place, which he did, scrambling through somehow, assisted by a British drawl and his ever faithful monocle. To judge by a flattering chorus of feminine approval, he made the hit of the evening, though in describing his stage fright afterward he used a most un-English simile.

"'Pon my word," he confessed, "I felt as if I had swallowed a live jack rabbit that was trying to bolt eleven ways at once. Fancy!"

The play went off without a hitch, except for one trifling incident which came near spoiling it altogether. The dismal Mr. Van der Awe, true to his principles on realism, forgot about the wig and committed the indiscretion of kissing the bird plump upon her tempting lips, whereupon the ruffled ingenue gave him a most realistic box on the ears, forgot her lines and started in on an impromptu but spontaneous denunciation. This, in a measure, made Miss Renwyck's subsequent part fall flat, but no one in the audience seemed to know the difference, while both the man and bird agreed afterward that it improved the play.

If Miss Renwyck failed to be impressive in the great denunciation scene, the same could not be said of her personal appearance. She was dressed in an evening gown of soft, dull black which brought out the snowy whiteness of her throat and arms. In her thick dark tresses a great tiara glowed and sparkled, rivaling, it seemed the riviere of splendid gems about her neck, while at her breast blazed a mammoth brooch. Fashioned in the form of an eagle with outstretched wings, a shimmering blaze of light, the proud bird stood as an emblem of its country's wealth and daring, perched on the bosom of a princess of the free.

To Richard, in his present state of mind, Harriet seemed the most radiantly perfect creature yet produced since the world began. As she bowed behind the footlights for the second time to an enthusiastic encore a large bouquet of American Beauties was tossed upon the stage, and Miss Harriet blushed as she stooped for this most apposite tribute to her own charms. When safely behind the curtains she glanced at a card attached, which bore two words, "An American." This signature was vague, yet somehow Miss Renwyck picked the donor out from myriads of gentlemen who might better have claimed the title, and again she blushed as she buried her face among the fragrant buds.

"How splendid of him!" she whispered to her roses. "If only he had been my cowboy perhaps—perhaps"—

But the rest was a secret which the roses never told.

One by one the guests departed, but not till the last of them was driven away on the gravel road did Richard find an opportunity for a word alone with his ladylove. He was seated in a darkened nook on the front veranda sheltered from the light by thick wistaria vines. He had lighted a cigar and was dreaming, as he smoked, of how beautiful she was, when suddenly he caught the swishing sound of skirts, and she took a wicker rocker by his side.

"Lord Croyland," she murmured softly, "I knew it was you by the smell of your cigar."

Richard was not a connoisseur as regards tobacco, and he wondered idly if the real Lord Croyland's favorite brand was up to the standard of this doubtful compliment. Miss Harriet continued:

"I'm glad I found you alone, for I want to thank you for these." She held her sheaf of roses toward him. "It was dear of you to send them, and it pleased me more than I can say."

"Nousense," he laughed. "No flower that ever grew is worthy of you. That sounds foolish, I suppose, for many people must have said the same before, but I mean it simply, honestly."

"Thank you," she said softly, and both for a time were silent.

"Miss Harriet," he ventured presently, "you are beautiful tonight." He checked her pleased laugh and continued earnestly, "I don't mean that you are not beautiful always, but I have never seen you in black before, and"—

"How absurd!" she smiled. "I shall soon begin to think you like all the rest, a flatterer—just a flatterer"—

"No, no," he protested warmly; "it is more than that, believe me. I want to carry away with me forever the memory of you as you looked tonight. I must leave soon. I'm going home."

"Back to England?" she asked, a tremor in her voice.

"No, to Texas."

"What?"

Richard caught himself just in time.

"Well—er—well, you see," he stammered, "you have turned me into such a good American that I think of your country now as being quite my own. I lived down there for nearly a year, you know, and now—and now business calls me back again."

Once more they were silent for a little space.

"And are you not coming north again?" she asked him nervously.

"It depends," said Richard the Brazen, smiling into the wistaria vine. "Listen, Miss Harriet. I want to ask you something. No, it isn't a question. It is only a flower. I would like to take just one of those roses to a cowboy down in Texas. I will find him if I can, and I know it will make him happier than anything else in all the world. May I have the rose?"

His tone was sad and low, but Harriet's tone was lower still when she answered haltingly:

"No; you need not take it to my hero of the plains. No doubt he has forgotten me—if he ever thought of me—as I shall cease to think of him. What should a cowboy do with a flower? And yet—I will not be ungenerous. To me you have given all these. Take one and keep it for yourself."

With a trembling hand she laid a rose upon his lap, but Richard forgot the flower and caught the hand.

"You mean," he whispered eagerly, "that I might one day take his place; that I"—

"No, no," she protested, striving for release; "I—I gave a flower, no more!"

"No more!" he echoed. "Only that when I ask for—all?"

"Don't, please," she faltered.

"I must speak! I will!" he cried, swept away by the hour and the chance. "I had hoped to teach you to love me for myself—to realize that we do not belong to different lands and climes—for I am not"—

"Harriet!"

Mr. Renwyck was calling from the doorway, and Richard swore bitterly beneath his breath. It was outrageous to be interrupted just then!

"Oh, there you are!" laughed the financier. "Do you know, my dear, your tiara shines out in the darkness like a constellation on a moonless night? Come; it's time for little actresses to be in bed."

The Texan was given no more chances with Miss Harriet, for the rest of the ladies now came out, and his final good night was spoken only by a pressure of the hand, but a pressure which left him happy, for the girl did not fail to return it with something more than mere courtesy.

Richard watched in silence while she took the jewels from her hair and throat and breast and handed them to her father, and somehow she seemed more beautiful still when unadorned, for to him she was a gem more precious than her weight in glittering diamonds. With a heart more buoyant than [illegible] his steps he bounded up the [illegible] tomorrow would decide his fate—tomorrow! She had given a rose—more—but she had not refused when he asked for all. Tomorrow!

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Criminals in New South Wales.

New South Wales has a novel system of dealing with habitual criminals. A man is sentenced to a term for his particular offense and to an indeterminate term because he is an "habitual." When he has served the definite term, if he is well behaved, he can rise from grade to grade, each step being accompanied by various concessions. One feature is that he may earn wages, which may be sent to his family, spent on luxuries or credited to him for the day of release. A committee examines his progress from time to time, advising the minister when he may be released. No release is absolute till after a year's probation under modified restraint.

Very Like a Bull.

Congressman Seedgraft was very green when he first came to congress. He began his maiden speech thus: "Mr. Speaker, I cannot sit still here and keep silence without rising and saying a few words."

When a distant relation becomes rich he is apt to become still more distant.

Behind the Screen.

At a particularly dainty little restaurant a lady with a sense of humor chooses the seat nearest the serving room, from which vantage point she notes and records, somewhat after the manner of Miss Beatrice Herford, the squabbles and comments of the dainty waitresses. Here are some of her curious transcripts from reality:

"I told you six soups, not desserts—the beginning of the meal, not the finish! Can't you hear straight?"

"Here, Birdie, take back this coffee! It's so cold it gave the woman malaria!"

"Great Scott! This lettuce isn't fit for a horse! I'd sooner eat grass!"

"Oh, gee! Hurry up! It's for an old maid, and her temper's worse'n mine!"

"Say, you're the limit! I asked for fat meat, and you've given me a joint—nothin' but bone! Wake up!"

Behind a screen, my correspondent tells me, they often imitate certain of the guests—mimicking their walk, even their table manners. And as for the remarks she overhears, she marvels less at their content than at the way they are uttered. "Such voices!" And so she expresses astonishment that at table, while waiting on the people, "these young women are ever quiet and demure and patient—soft tones and a cheery but dignified manner."—Boston Transcript.

Did He Refuse?

They were alone in the conservatory. He turned to her. His voice was low, but passionate.

"You know," he said, "why I have asked you to come here. Will you be my wife?"

She looked at him intently.

"No," she answered, and she uttered the monosyllable as if she loved it.

No doubt she expected him to reel and clutch at something, but he did nothing of the sort.

"Very well," he briskly said. "That's all I want to know. Shall we go in and finish our dance?"

She stared at him in wonder.

"Are—aren't you hurt by my refusal? Don't you intend to do something desperate?"

"Desperate? Certainly not—unless you call tackling the lobster salad desperate."

Her pride was sorely wounded. She had meant to hurt him. It would have been a proof of her power. Now she hungered for revenge. There was only one way to get even with him.

"George," she said, "I have reconsidered my decision. I will be your wife."

And the two scrawny rubber plants and the three yellow palms quivered with suppressed laughter.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Lace Dressers.

Lace dressing has been considered a necessarily unhealthful occupation on account of the intense heat required to be maintained in the room. In some cases the temperature exceeds 100 degrees F. and much moisture is evaporated from the wet fabric. The evidence brought forth at a recent investigation in England, however, shows it to be an exceedingly healthful pursuit. New workers are often temporarily upset at the beginning by the high temperature, but no cases could be found where health had broken down. On the contrary, some ailments—colds, for instance—were found less prevalent among lace dressers than among the workers in other branches of the industry. Time keepers' books showed few absences from illness. No special tendency toward lung diseases could be found, notwithstanding that most of the workers lived in poor and insanitary localities and led irregular lives. Many lace dressers now enjoy vigorous old age after doing this work from childhood.—Indianapolis News.

The Insect and the Net.

It has been known for a long time that an insect will not fly through a net with meshes three or four times as large as its body, whereas a bird will go through a mesh of corresponding size without hesitation. The insect cannot tell us why it stops and lights on the net without trying to go through, and its peculiar action puzzled observers until the scientists took the matter up, as they do all things of that kind. They say that the eye of the insect is made up of many facets, so that the net looks to it like a continuous opaque surface, the meshes not being apparent. Therefore it stops or turns back before it discovers that it might have gone through the net without stopping. To the eye of the bird, however, the meshes are plainly visible, and it goes through without hesitation.

Confession of Mouth.

A city dentist, defending his profession as a whole from the double charge of charlatanism and "graft," made this interesting declaration:

"While such things exist in dentistry, as in all businesses, there is far more of it among gilt edged practitioners than along the modest level where, for example, I work. Some men enjoying the most fashionable clientele are the rankest frauds either in ability or in representation of work done.

"But a dentist never can fool a dentist. Often a patient will get into my chair for the first time, and in a casual conversation I will ask who last treated the teeth. The name always comes, and a glance tells me whether the man has worked honestly or dishonestly. I have sized up some of our 'best' dentists in that way in half a minute, and many a reputation has crumbled in my estimation.

"A dentist can fool the people, but he can't fool a dentist."—New York Globe

Precious Stones and "Paste."

Glass, or "paste," as it is called, is made which cannot when new be distinguished from diamonds by any one but an expert armed with the necessary tests.

And the same is true as to paste imitations of all precious stones excepting the emerald (whose beautiful green tint cannot be exactly obtained), the cat's eye, which has a peculiar fibrous structure, and the opal. The real value and quality of precious stones as compared with glass depend on their durability, their hardness, their resistance to scratching and "dulling" of face and edge.

Even our Anglo-Saxon ancestors made gems of glass and paste. It is only in modern times that the art of making artificial "precious stones" has reached a degree of perfection which, so far as decorative purposes are concerned, leaves the natural stones no claim to superiority.—London Telegraph.

What He Got.

He was addressing a lowly but intelligent audience somewhere in the vicinity of Whitechapel, and he had selected for his discourse "Rhymes and Rhyming," so that he might illustrate to those rough and rugged minds how the charms of poesy can brighten the poor man's hearth. And, touching upon the difficulties of rhyming, he said:

"It is easy enough, my friends, to get a rhyme for so simple a word as 'sea,' but what can you get for 'burglary?'"

"Well, guv'nor," exclaimed one of his hearers, "it all depends on the judge. My Bill got seven years!"—London Sketch.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

"Frenzied Legislation" Is the Latest Thing In Lawmaking.

SOME SUGGESTED REMEDIES

Each Bill That Becomes a Law Costs $750—Open Season For Senate Booms In Assembly—The Proposed Investigation of Attorney General Jackson.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

Albany, March 25.—Last year was a record breaker in the number of bills introduced in the legislature, but if the present session continues any considerable period the accomplishment of 1907 in this line will fade into mediocrity.

A wave of "frenzied legislation" has been sweeping over the capitol. Everybody seems to be trying to introduce more bills than anybody else. A man who has put but a meager little three or four or five bills in the "bill box" is looked on as a legislative cripple, as an idler, an incompetent or a person lacking in brain power—that is, he is so looked on by a majority of members, those who are proponents of frenzied legislation. The fact that he is in favor among sensible people, a minority, is a disqualification that should be urged against him in his next campaign.

There is far too much legislation at Albany and at every state capitol, in fact. Governor Hughes has succeeded in limiting it in some respects, but in too few, however. The policy of ignoring every bill that savors in any way of special legislation is an effective deterrent. Then, too, the creation of the public service commission has done away with the necessity of many bills affecting street railways, lighting companies, etc.

Each Passed Bill Costs $750.

Some idea of the waste of effort, time and money in the lawmaking machinery each year at Albany may be had when it is known by actual calculation that, as a general rule, every bill that passes senate and assembly and finally becomes a law costs the state $750.

This figure is arrived at in the following manner:

By taking the total annual cost of the legislative session and dividing it by the number of bills that are actually signed by the governor in the particular year, the answers for almost any given number of years will average about $750.

Many solutions have been offered for the problem of decreasing the amount of legislation, particularly the faulty and injudicious kind. One scheme that is said to be held in high favor by Governor Hughes is to hold legislative sessions every two years instead of yearly. Another is to increase the salaries of legislators and encourage more men of ability to seek election. Another is to have all bills scrutinized by a competent revision committee or department before introduction and subjected to whatever changes or amendment the committee recommended.

Government by Commission.

"Government by commission" is another suggested remedy, but some of the evils of this system are seemingly greater than those sought to be corrected. "Government by commission" in New York state has of late assumed such great proportions that should it increase the real value of the legislature would be difficult of ascertainment.

Let Everybody Be a Senator.

Now has arrived the gladsome time of the year when every assemblyman launches his official senatorial boom. Every assemblyman is a senator in the spring if at no other time. It is amazing how many senators are defeated for renomination in the spring, but successful in the fall when the convention occurs.

The average senate district includes parts of three assembly districts. In this case there are three assemblymen clamoring or conspiring for the seat of the senator. He is in much the same position as the czar of Russia.

A poll of the assembly shows that all of the 150 assemblymen know they are to be senators next fall. All the fifty-one senators know they are to be re-elected. Consequently there are only 201 men who are to be given the fifty-one senatorships. Evidently senate nominations will have to be actually forced on people this year.

Assemblyman Bradford Lansing of Rensselaer is known as the human megaphone. He has a voice that could well be used in battering to pieces a Japanese fleet in case of war. Mr. Lansing is thin and baldheaded. He looks as frail as a hothouse flower. But when he turns loose on the assembly a volume of oratory on the canal or barge question the foundations of the capitol tremble.

Probe For Jackson.

The demand for an investigation of the office of Attorney General Jackson and his operations made in the senate through a concurrent resolution offered by Senator Martin Saxe of New York has aroused considerable conjecture as to the outcome. A well defined impression has obtained that the leaders of the legislature are opposed to any investigation of any one or of anything this spring, because the length of the session would be increased. Every one wants to get home to prepare for the onerous political duties now threatening and which culminate in the presidential and gubernatorial election, in the fall.

It has been authoritatively stated that the leading leaders considered the subject of an investigation of Jackson's department, but decided against it for the reason stated. One report that has persistently bobbed up is that Charles F. Murphy, head of Tammany Hall, would be a willing witness against Jackson in case an investigation occurs.

The concerted attack on the banking department bills in both senate and assembly evidenced the versatility of the Democratic representations, for some of the arguments bore all the earmarks of expert knowledge. However, the onslaught was ineffective, merely delaying immaterially the passage of one or two of the measures and not retarding the others at all.

The amount of oratory expended by the minority members in both houses was enormous. The futility of it, however, caused one Republican senator to state to a Democratic colleague: "That's right. Get all the fun out of this situation that you can. You fellows do the talking. We Republicans will do the voting."

Assemblyman Robert S. Conklin of New York city has had a kaleidoscopic career. Now he is known as "the ladies' champion" because he introduced the schoolteachers' bill increasing salaries of women teachers. He has been in turn a book agent, a deck hand on a dredge, an editor and publisher of a trade magazine, a policeman, a lawyer and now a member of assembly.

Dr. Mary Walker.

Dr. Mary Walker appeared before the codes committee of the assembly a few days ago. She was quite feeble, but her voice was spirited and determined. She appeared in favor of Assemblyman Cuvillier's bill providing for the doing away with capital punishment for murder and substituting life imprisonment instead. After talking to the committee for an hour without any sign of a letup Assemblyman Smith appeared suddenly on the scene and said to Chairman Murphy, "The governor sends word that he wants to meet the codes committee forthwith in the executive chamber."

The committee rose in a body and literally rushed from the room, leaving Dr. Walker talking to the walls, empty chairs and fresh air that usually fills a committee room.

Dr. Walker asked to have her regards conveyed to the governor, little realizing that Mr. Hughes was in New York city and had no part in the rescue of the committee.

Dr. Walker in her man's clothing is very amusing for a few minutes, but after that even a veteran legislator finds it hard to listen attentively.

Long Assembly Calendars.

Long calendars each day now evidence the large amount of work that the legislature is doing. Some days more than fifty bills appear on the assembly schedule for consideration. Consequently the sessions are long and the lawmakers feel that the state is getting a lot of expert work for comparatively little money. "If these long calendars keep up," said Chairman James Francis of the assembly banking committee a few days ago, "we will get away by April 10 without much trouble."

The late Speaker Nixon was a great hustler when it came to getting early adjournments. A year or two before he died the legislature adjourned in the last week of March.

McCarren Leads Anti-race Bill Fight.

Senator Patrick McCarren of Brooklyn is looked on as the hope of the race track people in their fight against the Agnew-Hart bills. McCarren, aided by Minority Leader Grady, is showing consummate ability in delaying the bills in the senate. All hopes of defeating the bills center in the senate, owing to the favor in which the bills have been held in the assembly.

It is widely rumored that considerable money will be spent in the senate to defeat the Agnew-Hart bills if no other resource is left open to the opponents of the measures.

Message Expected From Hughes.

It is the expectation in legislative circles that Governor Hughes will have something to say to the public in the next few days on the subjects of proposed amendments to the utilities law to take in the supervision of telegraph and telephone companies and on a proposed direct primary nomination bill. Whether the governor will convey his ideas in the shape of one of his famous "appeals to the people" speeches or in a special message to the legislature cannot be learned.

New State Fair Building.

The bids for the construction of the manufacturers and liberal arts building to be erected on the state fair grounds at Syracuse will be received at the office of the New York state fair commission in Syracuse up to March 30. The contract will provide that the building shall be completed on or before Aug. 15, the contractor to furnish a surety company bond of $100,000.

The Citizens' Union.

S. M. Clement, O. P. Letchworth, R. R. Hefford, J. N. Scatchard and A. J. Elias are among the directors of the Citizens' Union of Buffalo, which has filed incorporation papers with the secretary of state.

The union, long centered in and confined to New York city, where it has been a political and secondarily reform organization, has also established a branch in Rochester.

Rivalry Among Lawmakers.

Rivalry between up state and New York city and Brooklyn legislators occasionally reaches a high pitch. When a New York representative cannot get a bill out of a committee he sometimes says: "Those up state men control everything. Whatever legislation New York gets it has to literally take by force—if it can do so. Pretty soon we will have to come up state in the summer to see if we can get permission to run for office in New York in the fall."

A FILIPINO CLUB.

One Founded by E. B. Villafranca In San Francisco Is Flourishing.

It may surprise quite a few people that there are enough Filipinos on the mainland of the United States to form a club and build a clubhouse. There is such a club in San Francisco, and it is in many respects a remarkable institution. The first Filipino club in the United States is called the Rizal club, is in a good residence district of the city by the Golden Gate and has forty rooms. The most unique thing about it is the fact that it was built entirely by its members. Its president, E. B. Villafranca, seeing the need for an organization of his countrymen, called them together and suggested a plan whereby they might pool their interests and have a co-operative home of their own. They were told off into squads, and under the direction of Villafranca and others versed in constructive work the clubhouse grew with surprising rapidity, considering that the most of the workmen had little if any knowledge of building. Even the plumbing and decorating were done by the members. When the structure was done, a commercial agency was organized and employment secured through it for many of those belonging to the club. The rooms in the house are rented to members, who are required to keep them clean and sanitary. There are an assembly room, library, dining room and other apartments needed in a club.

Quick Wit.

Napoleon was pacing up and down one day before his quarters, planning probably some new scheme of conquest. He dropped his glove, and a common soldier happening along picked it up and returned it to him.

"Thank you, captain," said the emperor absentmindedly, not thinking that the man was only a private.

"Of which company, sire?" put in the soldier promptly, taking Napoleon at his word.

"Come to me tonight and you shall receive your commission," said the great commander.

He knew that that common soldier had the presence of mind necessary to make a good officer.

Official Precedence.

The Chicago Inter Ocean tells of the daughter of a well known representative who on her tenth birthday had a party, and one of the guests was the daughter of a senator. The birthday cake shone gloriously with ten candles.

A few weeks later the senator's daughter reached her eighth milestone, and a party was in order. Just before the guests arrived the small celebrant betook herself to the dining room to take a look at the festal board. High on its pedestal of crystal stood the birthday cake, and circling its snowy circumference were eight tiny candles, one for each year.

"One, two, three, four, five, six, seven—eight!" ejaculated the small hostess. "Mamma, mamma, please come here quick. They've only put eight candles on my birthday cake, and my father's a senator! Now, Mary had ten candles on her birthday cake, and she's only the daughter of a congressman."

The Deaf and Dumb.

In early times it was an opinion, maintained even by philosophers, that the education of the deaf and dumb was impossible. It was then believed that language could be acquired only through the medium of the ear, as shown by the couplet of Lucretius:

To instruct the deaf no art could ever reach,
No care improve them and no wisdom teach.

The first mention of instruction for the deaf and dumb is found in Bede, A. D. 685. No other case is met with for some centuries. Rudolfus Agricola of Heidelberg makes mention of an educated deaf mute in his "Dialectica," 1480. It was not until 1620 that instruction for the deaf and dumb began to be general.—New York American.

Curiosities in Wedding Rings.

Among the curiosities of wedding rings it is on record that in the early days rings were made of rushes. Perhaps the most curious material used for rings required on an emergency is the case of one being hurriedly made by cutting it out of the finger of a glove and another cut out of a visiting card. Many cases are on record of rings made of brass and iron being used, as also curtain rings and door keys being pressed into service at weddings.

"Well, it ain't exactly dat, mum, but when a dog hasn't any tail I can't tell by de wags if he is in a good humor or not, and it makes me skeery about approaching de house."—Chicago News.

DIANA TELEPHOTOED.

Camera Man's Snapshot From Her Own High Level.

Telephotography opens new and fascinating possibilities in the photographic art. This is illustrated in the picture of Saint Gaudens' "Diana," herewith reproduced. The famous statue is a conspicuous feature of the landscape in the vicinity of Madison square, New York, poised as the goddess is at the topmost point of the cupola of the Madison Square Garden. Until recently it would have been difficult if not impossible to take a snapshot of Diana in her lofty altitude which would have represented her as this picture does. But now there has arisen on Madison square the tall tower of the Metropolitan Life building, which will be forty-eight stories in height when completed. A photographer climbed into the top of the steel framework of the tower and went as high as he could go at the present stage of the construction work upon it. There he took the first photograph of Diana ever obtained from her own level—at least since she was hoisted into her present airy position. The telephoto snapshot is magnified fifteen times over what would have been obtained through an ordinary lens.

Telephotography may be described as taking pictures by attaching a telescope to the camera. Photographs magnified 500 diameters or even more have been obtained by use of the new camera. Telephotography is likely to prove useful for scientific and industrial purposes and in warfare. By it photographs of dangerous natural phenomena like volcanic eruptions can be taken without danger. Photographs of inaccessible points in the Alps and the Yosemite valley have been obtained in this way. In the latter region Mount Florence has been photographed from a point sixty-five miles away, and spots on mountain tops where no camera has ever been and where no human being has set foot have been taken.

Not the Kind He Wanted.

"But he didn't find any until his father had finished with him."—Harper's Weekly.

Ungallant.

"My face is my fortune, sir," she said.

"Well," he replied, "poverty is no disgrace, but it's awfully inconvenient at times."

The Wicked Husband.

"Why does a man lie to his wife?" asks a woman writer. Dear me, does he?—Duluth Herald.

A moral, sensible, well bred man will not insult me. No other can.—Cowper.

Frederick the Great.

Frederick William I., father of Frederick the Great, was a most brutal old fellow, treating his son almost as badly as they treat the exiles in Siberia. Unable to endure such barbarity on the part of his father, Frederick resolved to run away and seek refuge at the court of his uncle, George II. of England. Ready to assist him in his attempt were his two young friends, Lieutenants Katte and Keith. By the imprudence of Katte the secret was found out, and Frederick was placed under arrest. Keith escaped, but Katte was tried by court martial, sentenced to death and executed. Frederick also was sentenced to death and would have been shot but for the earnest expostulations of the kings of Sweden and Poland.

More at Home.

A young fellow being asked by a recruiting sergeant if he wished to enlist in a Scottish regiment, replied:

"Not likely. I'd rather go to a lunatic asylum than enlist in a Scottish regiment."

"Ah, weel," said the sergeant, "I've nae doot ye'd feel mair at hame there."—Dundee Advertiser.

HOSPITAL BENEFITED

Fort Stanwix Canning Company's Generous Proposition.

The Fort Stanwix Canning Company is one of our most highly prized industries and every resident of this city should take the keenest pride in the excellence of the output of this factory. Only the highest grade of fruit and vegetables are accepted for preserving and the result is that no better goods can be procured anywhere. The company pay their producers and their employes living prices and yearly they expend immense sums in this immediate vicinity.

This spring they have inaugurated a novel charitable scheme in which the Fulton Hospial is to be the beneficiary and every person in this vicinity who use canned stuffs at all may become a party to the splendid scheme. On every can label of their goods prepared for the local consumption they have a monogram imprint which is worth one cent to the local hospital. The company will furnish anyone who asks for it, with a card large enough to hold fifty of the monograms cut from the labels and when filled it will be redeemed by the Fort Stanwix company and the money will be paid to the Hospital. The monograms are not worth anything to the individual, but if you will call exclusively for Fort Stanwix brand goods and save the little monograms they will aggregate considerable for the hospital in a year.

Already several cards are being filled and it is a very common occurrence in the H. P. Allen grocery store where the Fort Stanwix goods are handled in full line and almost exclusively, to hear the order given with great emphasis by young and old, for "Fort Stanwix brand with the monogram." Mr. Allen informs a Times representative that the price of the goods has not advanced, consequently this contribution from the manufacturers comes directly from their pockets.

Aside from the benefit to the local institution, it is a public spirited move to demand the Fulton manufactured article exclusively. Mr. Allen has practically cut from his order list all other brands and now it is up to the consumers to refuse all others.

Start with April 1, 1908, and let us see how much may be collected for the hospital from the canning company before July 1, 1908. As soon as you fill a card leave your name with the bookkeeper at the H. P. Allen store and the Times will the first week in July publish the names of all who have thus contributed to the cause.

Board of Public Works.

At the regular weekly meeting of the Board of Public Works held on Monday evening considerable business was transacted. The Clerk was instructed to find whether or not Division and Lyon streets had ever been accepted by the city, prior to the Board considering petitions for the improvement of these streets.

The following bills were ordered paid: From the water fund; David Chetney, $26.18; Republic Rubber Company, $9.60, and water rebates $34.20. From the light fund, Fulton Light, Heat and Power Company, $688.09.

An alleged dangerous walk in North Fourth street was ordered investigated.

Fulton Hero Number One.

Clinton H. Sage a government contractor, in August, 1862, was occupying as his residence the building which is now used as a Town Hall on First street. In 1867 he disposed of it to William G. Gage. At that time in raising the 110th. Colonel Littlejohn chose him as Lieutenant Colonel. He became Colonel after Littlejohn resigned, and remained until the summer of 1863, when he left us to go on a plantation on the Mississippi. He was my choice of the three colonels we had. In him I found a staunch friend and I never asked him for a favor but what he granted it. After he resigned I was walking the streets of New Orleans, having been sick unto death, 3000 miles from home without a cent, and met him in citizens clothes. I said Colonel, we hated to lose you. He says Sergeant, the war has been prolonged so I could endure it no longer. What can I do for you? I asked him if he could let me have some money? He says, how much do you want? I told him $20 and he handed me a $20 bill. My father paid him a few weeks afterward in Fulton. He was of strong, compact build and had great energy and decision of character, weighing 200 pounds. Not one of the men could pull him up pulling sticks on the old transport, Erriesson. He was also the crack shot among the officers with a revolver. He died a year or so ago in Norwich and was interred here in Mt. Adnah.

S. D. GARDNER,
Sergeant Company F, 110th.

Board of Fire and Police.

A meeting was held in the City Hall on Monday evening and the monthly reports of Chiefs Ross and Waugh were received and placed on file. The resignation of Fireman Fred Fuller was also accepted.

A resolution was adopted regulating the supervision of firemen employed as drivers of the fire teams while doing public work which was as follows:

"Any fireman in charge of a team doing public work is hereby directed to take his orders at all times from the Superintendent of Public Works, except in the case of fire, and any fireman refusing to follow the directions of the Superintendent of Public Works will be liable to suspension or dismissal."

Schroeppel Republican Caucus.

At the Republican caucus held in Phoenix on Friday the following delegates to the District Convention were elected: Frank L. Smith, Jackson Abbott, A. C. Parker, Frank N. Decker, W. W. Merridith, C. A. Larnard, C. K. Williams, James Nelson, L. E. Prior, D. J. Mullin. Mr. Smith, who heads the delegation is a candidate for Member of Assembly to succeed F. G. Whitney.

Securing Rights of Way.

The Fulton Light, Heat and Power Company last week filed thirty-three consents allowing them to place poles on property in the towns of Granby and Oswego Town. This gives them a right of way down the West side of the river to Oswego. They already have the rights on the East side.

DIED.

Mrs. James R. Whitman, a former well known resident of this city, died on March 20, at Atlantic City, N. J., where she went a year ago in quest of health. The deceased had been an invalid for several years and death was not unexpected. The remains were taken to her old home in Louisville, Kentucky, for interment. Beside the husband, one daughter, Helen, and a son, Henry, survive. Mrs. Whitman and daughter spent the summer two years ago in this city occupying a suite of rooms in Mrs. Mary Butler's home, and her friends recall with pleasure the hours spent with her at that time.

The death of the Rev. John N. Fulford, for many years an active Methodist divine, at his home in this city on Monday, came as a surprising shock to his host of friends and acquaintances. He was 71 years old and had lived in this city for years, being prominent in church and G. A. R. circles. He was commander of Post Schenck, G. A. R., during 1907.

Mr. Fulford is survived by his wife, three daughters, one son, two sisters and one brother.

The funeral services will be held Sunday at 2 o'clock from the house, and at 2.30 o'clock from the State Street Church. All the ministers of the city are to be present and take part in the service.

Man and Plants.

M. Camille Saint-Saens says: "I do not pretend to adduce irrefragable evidence in support of my theory that man began his earthly career as a plant. I do maintain, however, that an impartial examination of my theory must allow that my assumption and hypotheses are sufficiently plausible to be considered justifiable."

The Losers.

"To what do you attribute your success in acquiring money?"

"Partly to the success of other men in letting go of it," replied the great financier.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Very Handy.

Closefist—It cost me over $5,000 to give Harry that course in industrial arts. Herdso—But he must be quite handy with his tools now? Closefist—Yes, and the first job he did was to put up awnings on the shady side of the house.

He conquers twice who restrains himself in victory.—Syrus.

Could See Too Much.

A fine, robust soldier, after serving his country faithfully for some time, became greatly reduced in weight, owing to exposure and scanty rations, until he was so weak he could hardly stand. Consequently he got leave of absence to go home and recuperate. He arrived at his home station looking very badly. Just as he stepped off the boat one of his old friends rushed up to him and said, "Well, well, Pat, I see you're back from the front."

Pat looked worried and replied, "Begorra, I knew I was getting thin, but I nivver thought you could see that much!"—London Tit-Bits.

A Comparison.

The old gentleman was very angry. There could be no doubt about that. Threatening the other with his fist, he shouted, "If your brain was put in a mustard seed it would have as much room as a shrimp in the Atlantic!"

"One should always breathe through the nose when asleep," says a physician. If you awake and find your mouth open, get up and shut it.

CURRENT EVENTS CLUB.

"Guest Night" Proves a Memorable Event—An Excellent Program Rendered.

"Guest night" proved a memorable event in the annals of the Current Events Club. The assembly room of the Public Library building was crowded last evening by the members of the club and invited guests, who had met for the purpose of listening to a lecture on art and artists by Miss Helen Parmenter, a member of the High School faculty. The officers of the club, with their wives, formed a reception committee and extended a hearty welcome to the guests as they arrived.

Prof. Fairgrieve, president of the club, arranged a program which included vocal solos by Mrs. E. J. Penfield and Mrs. M. S. Powell. These were rendered in a most charming manner. A recitation by Miss Vola Pritchard, entitled "The mallet's master-piece," won the applause of the assemblage.

The lecture was illustrated by lantern slides which were thrown on a screen by a stereoptican. The slides were loaned by the Department of Education to Prof. Fairgrieve and included photographs of world-renowned paintings which are held in European galleries, some of which are displayed in galleries in this country. As a prelude, Miss Parmenter gave a most comprehensive and instructive description, not only of the artists and their productions, but of the remarkable periods of time to which they belonged.

Music was furnished by Webb's Orchestra.

The next and final meeting of the club for this season will be held at the residence of Mrs. M. S. Powell on Rochester street, next Monday evening, April 6. The leaders will be Mrs. Thomas Hunter and Miss Mary Dugan. Officers for next season will also be elected.

Fulton Savings Bank

Fulton, although not a wealthy city, is a very active one. Our well-to-do citizens have their money invested in manufacturing and other business enterprises. Very few individuals have money to loan except in small amounts, and capital is in constant use. Most people have found that for various reasons it is more satisfactory to borrow money of the Fulton Savings Bank than to borrow of individuals, this has given it the opportunity to loan a larger amount of its funds on first mortgages on real estate than most Savings Banks are able to do, and they are the safest and most profitable investments for Savings Banks. The affairs of the Fulton Savings Bank have been more economically administered than many Savings Banks, and their investments have been very carefully selected. That this Bank has the confidence of the public is evidenced by the fact that its deposits are now at the highest point, when most Savings Banks have been losing. Having held its deposits to the maximum amount, this Bank has been able to secure some of the high class bonds at panic prices. These are some of the reasons why this Bank has been able to pay 4 per cent when other banks could not do so. The Fulton Savings Bank has never paid less than 4 per cent on accounts of $100 and under, and up to January, 1904, never paid less than 4 per cent on accounts up to $500.00. The Albany Argus very recently published a list of the forty best Savings Banks in this State, and the Fulton Savings Bank headed the list.

MEN'S BIBLE CLASS BANQUET.

Excellent Menu and Entertaining Toast Program Presented.

The banquet of the Men's Bible Class and their friends, last Friday evening in the church parlors, was a most pronounced success. A reception at 7 o'clock, when the guests received a royal welcome, preceded the more strenuous part of the program.

Covers for 125 had been laid by the ladies of the church and the four long tables conveniently arranged in the parlors were resplendent with damask, china, cut-glass and flowers. A neatly-printed four-page leaflet contained the program for the evening. This included the following menu:

Bouillon
Saltines Olives
Radishes
Fricassed Chicken Biscuit and Gravy
Stuffed Ham
Mashed Potatoes Peas
Rolls Jelly
Egg and Cucumber Salad on Lettuce
Brown Bread
Cheese and Nut Sandwiches
Neapolitan Ice Cream Angel Cake
Bon-Bons
Coffee Great Bear Spring Water

A corps of very efficient waiters was drafted from among the young men who are members of the junior classes, and they performed their arduous duties with the intelligence and alacrity of seasoned veterans.

Professor Wilson had charge of the musical program during the banquet and his efforts were repeatedly encored. Mrs. Sawtelle was the accompanist.

Mr. Sawtelle was toastmaster and introduced each speaker in a very happy vein. Mr. Arvin Rice was heard to advantage in "Reminiscences" of local church work and workers, embracing laity and clergy; "Notes from the Capitol," was a condensed report by Mr. Cameron Benedict of the recent hearing before the Legislative Committee on the Local Option bill; Mr. Van Wagenen spoke on "Christian Finance;" Resident Engineer Ripley delivered a most interesting and instructive address on Barge Canal work; Mr. Theodore Webb contributed to the pleasure of the occasion by playing a selection on the French horn.

The Rev. Mr. Magary of Oswego had kindly volunteered to give a talk, illustrated by lantern slides, of the destruction of San Francisco, and time alone proved a barrier. Mr. Margary, however, made a ten-minute address to the assemblage which was so unique and original as to cause a feeling of keen disappointment that the program was not carried out.

The singing of "America" by the assemblage brought the excellent program to a close.

The officers of the class are: President, William Hunter; secretary and treasurer, Harry L. Stout; teacher, Rev. William L. Sawtelle.

Mill Resumes Operations.

The local mill belonging to the American Woolen company called back the employes on Monday who were discharged two weeks ago. Others were called in this Wednesday morning and it is hoped and expected that the worst has transpired in the matter of a shut down and that normal conditions, when the company was paying $12,000 a week in wages, will soon prevail.

Our residents appreciate the value of our industries when one or more of them close down for any cause. They are certainly entitled to full consideration and appreciation for they make or break Fulton's prosperity. Whenever the income of the employe is cut, it is safe to say that the finances of the employer are more seriously affected.

Semi-Annual Meeting.

To Members Oswego River Watershed Association, and to all those interested in the conservation and use of water whether for purposes of power, navigation, control of spring floods, irrigation or domestic and municipal supply:—

You are notified that the regular semi-annual meeting of the Oswego River Watershed Association will be held at the City Hall in Fulton on Saturday, the 4th of April, 1908, at two p. m.

A full attendance is desired. Our mailing list is still incomplete and trust you will make sure all interested in your neighborhood have notice of this meeting.

G. C. WARNER,
Secretary to the Association.

Health Officers Vigilant.

The Board of Health have adopted a strenuous campaign to be waged against microbes and the "sick bug" in this city. Our death rate is low but they propose to keep it low and place Fulton on the high water line for healthfulness. To that end they have ordered the occupants of premises to remove all ashes, garbage, or rubbish from alleyways, cellars, and out-houses on or before the 10th of April. The penalty for non-conformity to this order being a fine of $10 and $2 per day additional fine for each day the nuisance is not abated.

The board is also preparing to enforce the ordinance against expectorating upon the sidewalks or upon the floor of public conveyances, public buildings, etc. The penalty for violating this law being arrest and $10 fine.

Local and Personal

April first. Did you bite?

Miss Mary Nichols of Syracuse spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Forsyth.

Messrs. Elmer Taylor and Roger Slater are in Chicago, Ill., purchasing a carload of horses.

Mr L. E. Taggert underwent an operation at the hospital last week. He is regaining his health.

Mr. Peter Boigeol and daughter of Central Square spent Monday with Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Boigeol in this city.

Attorney and Mrs. W. S. Hillick have taken a suite of rooms at the home of Optician and Mrs. W. P. Hillick.

Mrs. Ida Ives Foster, who has been spending the winter with her parents, Mr and Mrs. Ira P. Ives, of Mt. Pleasant, left on Friday for her home in San Francisco, California.

Ex-Supervisor W. D. Streeter of Richland, a month ago purchased a furniture business in Carthage. Last week he sold the business and will continue to reside at Richland.

Senator F. H. Gates has decided not to become a candidate for renomination and Madison county has a candidate in the person of Assemblyman Robert J. Fish of Oneida.

William Springer, who lives in the vicinity of Fulton, has discovered in his possession a fine hand made map of Oswego city which is traced back as far as 1707.—Oswego Times.

Whitaker & Lovejoy have sold to Irving Galusha the modern home of Charles Wilcox at No. 422 Cayuga St. They have also sold to Fred Lavenburg of Oswego the farm of Frank Mack in the town of Scriba.

The authorities of the village of Clyde have received notice that State school moneys will be withheld from them this year on the ground that their buildings did not meet the approval of the State Department of Education, so far as their light and ventilation was concerned.

Clarence E. Pitts may be sued by the Oswego Liquor Dealers' association for libel in calling the liquor dealers "thieves," "murderers," etc., in a recently issued pamphlet. Mr. Pitts has a cheerful way of calling one who does not exactly agree with him in every particular, names which do not look well in print. It is safe to wager that some day he will meet a man who will resent this little habit of his and use his fist to emphasize his distaste for the treatment.

Mr. Earl Rowlee, R. F. D. 2, Fulton, is the local agent for the Harder Patent Round Silos, which are giving such excellent satisfaction in this section. Mr. Rowlee has sold a number to the most progressive farmers and they are all loud in their praise of them. Mr. Rowlee has many testimonials from well-known residents of this county who have purchased silos from him, and they are eloquent tributes to the worth and merit of the articles. Mr. Rowlee would be pleased to hear from any one at all interested in the subject.

Mr. George Washburn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Washburn, left on Tuesday for Carthage, where he has accepted a position as timekeeper and bookkeeper for the contracting company who are installing a water system in that city. Mr. Washburn has held a similar position for two years with the Fulton Contracting company, resigning to accept the present very desirable position. Mr. Washburn's friends in this city regret that he will leave Fulton but they congratulate him upon his present appointment and the future outlook for him.

There are a very few subscribers upon The Times list who have not paid up their subscription as is demanded by the new postal regulation—perhaps twenty. With some of these it is a matter of carelessness we are sure and take this opportunity to remind them that unless the amount of arrears is settled at once the paper must be discontinued; not because we choose to do it but because the law says it must be done. The only alternative would be for the publisher to place a one cent stamp on each copy mailed or a yearly sum of nearly half the regular subscription price. If you are in arrears and cannot pay just at present, notify the Times office when you can pay and undoubtedly some arrangement can be made which will be satisfactory to the three parties interested—the subscriber, the government and the publisher. The time limit granted by Uncle Sam expired this Wednesday, April 1. Will you attend to it at once? Dropping a name from the list does not cancel the back indebtedness. That must be paid in full.

Getting Even.

"No, I don't believe in expensive practical jokes," said a SanFrancisco business man, "except by way of retaliation."

"Now last year I received a telegram from a friend who was traveling in Italy. It came collect and cost me seven dollars; and when I opened it, all I read was, 'Thank you, I am well.'

"Then I sallied forth and sought me out a cobblestone—a nice, large cobblestone weighing about eleven pounds. And I wrapped it in excelsior, pink cotton and white paper, and I boxed it up in a handsome box and I sent it by express, collect, to my facetious friend far across the bounding billows.

"And when he had paid his little fifteen dollars, and had opened the box in St. Petersburgh, if I remember rightly, he found in addition to the precious contents a note from me that exwlained, 'This is the load that rolled off my heart on receipt of the news of your good health.'"—Woman's Home Companion for April.

A Curious Rescue.

Two officers hunting wolves on the Dry mountain, in central Servia, lost their way in a fog. After wandering for fourteen hours one of them lay down in the snow and speedily became unconscious. His comrade bound him with cords, placed him in a sitting position and then rolled him down the mountain. He glided down the slope at terrific speed and reached the bottom safely, being found an hour later in an exhausted condition by a peasant.

What Then?

In a cemetery at Middlebury, Vt., is a stone, erected by a widow to her loving husband, bearing this inscription: "Rest in Peace—Until We Meet Again."

Where is the man who will pretend to call himself a philosopher and lay down no rules of duty?—Aristotle.

Of Interest To Fulton

It has developed that serious consideration has been given to a scheme to dam up Ox Creek, near its mouth, and carry the waters from a large area to Lake Neahtawanta by means of a ditch; this would require that the Lake level be lowered to an extent such as to practically drain it and its outfall would have to be correspondingly deepened. The relative elevations of the Ox Creek watershed and the Lake would seem to render this scheme rather impracticable but not impossible. The State seems to have recognized this possibility.

The effect on the two Fulton dams would be to pass the water from this considerable area, around them and rob water users and owners of that amount of water. Accurate knowledge of what is contemplated should be in the possession of all interested.

"The Blood is The Life."

Science has never gone beyond the above simple statement of scripture. But it has illuminated that statement and given it a meaning ever broadening with the increasing breadth of knowledge. When the blood is "bad" or impure it is not alone the body which suffers through disease. The brain is also clouded, the mind and judgement are effected, and many an evil deed or impure thought may be directly traced to the impurity of the blood. Foul, impure blood can be made pure by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It enriches and purifies the blood thereby curing, pimples, blotches, eruptions and other cutaneous affections, as eczema, tetter, or salt-rheum, hives and other manifestations of impure blood.

In the cure of scrofulous swellings, enlarged glands, open eating ulcers, or old sores, the "Golden Medical Discovery" has performed the most marvelous cures. In cases of old sores, or open eating ulcers it is well to apply to the open sores Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve, which possesses wonderful healing potency when used as an application to the sores in conjunction with the use of "Golden Medical Discovery" as a blood cleansing constitutional treatment. If your druggist don't happen to have the "All-Healing Salve" in stock, you can easily procure it by inclosing fifty-four cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, 663 Main St. Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post. Most druggists keep it as well as the "Golden Medical Discovery."

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine of KNOWN COMPOSITION having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, the same being attested as correct under oath.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels.

Philosophy of Descartes.

Turning the mental vision inward, as Bacon turned it outward, Descartes watched the operations of the soul as an object in a microscope. Resolved to believe nothing but upon evidence so convincing that he could not by any effort refuse his assent, he found as he inspected his beliefs that he could plausibly doubt everything but his own existence. Here at last was the everlasting rock, and this was revealed in his own consciousness; hence his famous "Cogito ergo sum" (I think, therefore I am). Consciousness, said he, is the basis of certitude. Interrogate it and its clear replies will be science, for all clear ideas are true. Down in the depths of the mind is the idea of the infinite perfection—the mark of the workman impressed upon his work. Therefore God exists.—New York American.

Kodol for Dyspepsia has helped thousands of people who have had stomach trouble. This is what one man says: "E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago, Ill.—Gentlemen: In 1897 I had disease of the stomach and bowels. I could not digest anything I ate and in the spring of 1902 I bought a bottle of Kodol and the benefit I received from that bottle all the gold in Georgia could not buy. I still use a little occasionally as I find it a fine blood purifier and a good tonic. May you live long and prosper. Yours very truly, C. N. Cornell. Roding, Ga., Aug. 27, 1906." Sold by all druggists.

Caddies.

The term "caddies," or "cadies," or "cawdies," is akin to "cad" and "cadet" and means messengers or unattached male servants. Caddies, in fact, were originally a class of men found in every Scotch town of any size who were at the beck and call of everybody who wanted an odd job done; hence they were at the beck and call of everybody who was starting for a game of golf, and now they are employed solely by the golfer.

Keeps Him High Strung.

Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup—the cough syrup that tastes nearly as good as maple sugar and which children like so well to take. Unlike nearly all other cough remedies, it does not constipate, but on the other hand it acts promptly yet gently on the bowels, through which the cold is forced out of the system, and at the same time it allays inflammation. Always use Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup. Sold by all druggists.

"And I am the very first you have loved, Bertha?"

"Of course you are. How tedious you men are! You all ask the same question."—London Opinion.

Volney Caucus.

The Republican caucus for the town of Volney was held on Saturday at which time delegates as follows were elected to the district convention to be held in Pulaski on Tuesday, April 7, at 11 o'clock a. m.: Gerard F. Taft, William Kellogg, Warren S. Gardner, Fred Jewett, Eugene Rowe, Robert Simpson, Clarence Johnson and George A. Rappole.

Pet Poisoning a Trade.

"Every town has its pet poisoner if you know where to find him," said a druggist. "These men keep my stock of alkaloids on the move. There is a demand for the pet poisoner. Suppose your favorite dog breaks his back. What a relief, then, to summon the pet poisoner and have the animal slain without pain. Cats and birds, dogs and even fish come within the province of the pet poisoner. He charges usually a dollar a case, but if you are rich he won't object to charging you $5 or $10. Some folks in their wills leave directions that their pet dogs or cats be poisoned, fearing that the animals would find life too harsh and sad after their loving owners' decease. Some folks, too, if they are going away for a long time—making a tour of the world, say—have their pets poisoned rather than trust them to servants possibly careless. Mistaken kindness I call such doings, and that, I bet, is what the pets call it too."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Science and Sound Fact.

"The workings of the human mind when asleep are full of wonder," remarked a scientist who was paying a visit to an acquaintance. "Have you ever started up from a sound dreamless sleep, with every sense on the alert and with your whole being thrilled with a vivid yet indefinable feeling that something was wrong and instant action required?"

"Often," replied his hostess, "and in nearly every case I have found that I was awakened by the fumbling of my husband's key at the front door!"

Could See Too Much.

A fine, robust soldier, after serving his country faithfully for some time, became greatly reduced in weight, owing to exposure and scanty rations, until he was so weak he could hardly stand. Consequently he got leave of absence to go home and recuperate. He arrived at his home station looking very badly. Just as he stepped off the boat one of his old friends rushed up to him and said, "Well, well, Pat, I see you're back from the front."

Pat looked worried and replied, "Begorra, I knew I was getting thin, but I nivver thought you could see that much!"—London Tit-Bits.

I do maintain, however, that an impartial examination of my theory must allow that my assumption and hypothesis are sufficiently plausible to be considered justifiable."

His Narrow Escape.

"Why, a friend had advised me to put my money in it and"—

"And you took his advice?"

"No, but I would if I'd had any money." Philadelphia Ledger.

Proving a Rumor.

During one of the Mardi Gras festivities at New Orleans a couple evidently from the provinces wandered into one of the numerous little French restaurants. The lady scanned the menu.

"Here's entrée," she said. "What is it? Shall I order it?"

"Good heavens, no!" replied her companion. "I've always heard that the French eat it, but not for us. You'd better order ham and eggs. An entry's a race horse."—Harper's.

THE FULTON TIMES

[Entered as second class matter, April 12, 1882, at the postoffice at Fulton, New York, under the act of Congress of March, 3, 1879.]

E. K. HUGHES, Editor
W. E. HUGHES, Proprietor

Issued Every Wednesday at No. 66 South First street, Fulton, N. Y.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 1, 1908

Within one week death claimed the oldest and youngest United States Senator. When Senator Whyte was called away the sorrow of his friends was softened by the knowledge that he had been permitted to go beyond the allotted time of man, but Senator Bryan is taken at the mere beginning of what promised to be a splendid career. Senator Bryan, a native of Florida, was in his thirty-second year, and his service began only last January.

Ways of the Dressmaker.

A curious dressmaking custom was revealed in a case tried in London, and it would be interesting to know if similar practices prevail elsewhere. A woman ordered a dress from a dressmaker and then refused to pay the bill on the ground that the dress did not fit—a very common excuse among those who have changed their minds. The bill was for $50 for material and making, and the dressmaker in defending her charges explained that she had two establishments, one at Putney and the other on Manchester street. The dress in question had been made at Putney, but if it had been made at the Manchester street establishment she would have charged about $75, although there would have been no difference whatever in material or workmanship. Prices, she said, were regulated by locality, and, although Putney is socially irreproachable, it is not quite equal to Manchester street. The price of a dress is therefore indicative of geographical location rather than of quality, and for this side light on feminine manners and customs we may be duly grateful.—Argonaut.

Perjury Penalties.

Perjury, besides being one of the oldest of offenses in the catalogue of crime, has always been very severely punished. With the advance of civilization, however, fiendish punishments have been replaced by more humane if still severe penalties. In the days of the Roman empire any one who committed perjury was thrown from a precipice, while the Greeks branded their false swearers. It is interesting to note that when the latter embraced the Christian religion the punishment was altered to that of having the tongue cut out, a sort of punishment which was considered to fit the crime in the early centuries. In the middle ages some countries adopted the system of giving the perjurer the punishment for the crime he falsely accused another of. Thus if he swore a neighbor had committed murder and the charge was disproved the perjurer would be sentenced to death, and the other penalties of the penal code were exacted for the particular crime alleged.

A Well Kept Murder Secret.

That the identity of the man who killed Campbell of Glenure on May 14, 1752, should still be handed down from father to son a solemn trust among a few members of the Stewart clan is one of the curiosities of history:

The mute trees know who fired that shot,
But the secret well they're keeping.

The highlanders refused it to Robert Louis Stevenson. Andrew Lang says that, like William of Deloraine, "he knows, but may not tell." Mr. Mackay, the author of this most complete and interesting account of the crime and trial, leaves us a little doubtful whether he is among the initiated. "I should be the last," he writes, "to make public a secret that has been so well kept. Its antiquity makes it sacred."—London Spectator.

Unselfish.

"Why don't you go to work?"

"Work?" rejoined Meandering Mike. "Look at de thousands of poor fellows dat is lookin' fur work an' feelin' miserable widout it. Now, work ain't necessary to me, an' I ain't goin' to butt in an' reach fur it merely fur de sake of havin' somethin' to brag about."—Washington Star.

Albany Argus: Senator Cobb is willing it is understood, if the county of Oswego is willing, to return to the Senate. Of course there will be no trouble about Senator Cobb getting Jefferson's delegates, but with a new county in this district and new political business to be arranged, there is just a shadow of a doubt as to the Republican nomination, but Senator Cobb's friends are firm in the belief that he will have no difficulty when the time comes of getting the nomination.

The firm has grown by close attention to business and by honest and courteous treatment of their patrons. The Times congratulates them upon the many evidences of their growth and prosperity.

Mr. and Mrs. William P. Wallace on March 24, celebrated the sixty-first anniversary of their marriage in a quiet, happy manner in the society of their sons and their grandchildren at their home in this city. The groom of many years ago is 82 years of age and his bride is 77, but they are in full possession of all their faculties. There has not been a death in the family which numbers four sons and eleven grandchildren. The sons are W. P. Wallace, Oswego; Willard, Palermo; W. S., Phoenix; and William G. of Fulton.

The Citizen's Club gave a most unique and thoroughly enjoyable entertainment on Monday evening in the club rooms. Douglas E. Petit, Esq., a prominent Syracuse attorney, was the guest of honor, and gave several recitations and readings in the French-Canadian dialect which were so clever and inimitably droll as to captivate the entire assemblage. A buffet luncheon was served, the Webb Orchestra furnished delightful music and Mr. Albert Kraus' rich baritone voice was heard to splendid advantage in a solo. Billiards, cards and social conversation filled in the remaining evening hours.

Their Fears Realized.

A noted English statistician was discussing in New York the statistics of marriage—marriage statistics are his specialty.

"The last statistics," he said, "show us one pleasant change, one grand improvement. Aged men of wealth are no longer marrying beautiful, mercenary young women as frequently as they used. In fact, these hideous marriages are becoming in this country so rare that the newspapers don't hesitate to comment very forcibly upon them. I approve of these cruel comments. They keep such mockeries of marriage down. If a little town in Herts last month," he said, "a millionaire of seventy-nine years married a young and pretty milliner of twenty-two. The local paper printed the next day this editorial paragraph on the matter:

"'Six months ago, when Mr. Blank's venerable wife died, his children and grandchildren feared that he would go crazy over the sad bereavement. Their fears have now come true.'"

STATE LEGISLATURE.

Vast Expenditures Wanted For New and Improved Roads.

ALL SORTS OF GOSSIP.

How Some Advocates of Bills Actually Harm Their Cause—Opposition to Saxe-Wainwright National Guard Reorganization Bills—Insurance—Local Option.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

Albany, April 1.—The forthcoming development of roads and road systems throughout the state will doubtless assume imposing proportions. The state engineer, Frederick W. Skene, aided by able authorities, is continuing the work for a practical regeneration of the road systems of the state along general lines laid down by his predecessors.

Engineer Skene asks for a sum of money deemed much too large for the projects immediately in view. The most experienced judges of what the situation requires agree that the engineer's demands are inflated. He asks for no less than $7,500,000 for use in the construction of highways during the present year. This amount is called for in a bill introduced in senate and assembly by Senator Grady of New York, minority leader, and the Democratic leader in the lower house, George M. Palmer of Schoharie county.

Big Appropriation Unwise.

The state engineer's department has already contracted for 1,000 miles of new or improved roads. Work on additional new contracts cannot be done

SENATOR ALBERT T. FANCHER OF CATTARAUGUS COUNTY.

[Senator Fancher is one of the leading Republicans in the upper house. He is chairman of the committee on insurance and is an acknowledged authority on all legislative matters relating to insurance in its many branches. He is also a member of the committees on commerce and navigation and railroads. Senator Fancher's home is in Salamanca.]

until the completion of the present contracts, and these will not be finished in much less than a year. Therefore it is reasoned that it is unwise to appropriate money now for work that cannot be undertaken short of a year.

The demand of Mr. Skene is based on the total amount that would be required to build all the new roads that have been asked for by the various counties. The total length of the new roads applied for and which Engineer Skene's appropriation bill calls for is 8,977 miles. The total cost of these roads is estimated at $9,692,755. The difference between this sum and the amount asked for in the Grady-Palmer bill represents the sum that will be paid by the various counties.

Vast Sums For New Roads.

Few people realize what vast sums have been spent in New York state on new roads during, say, the last ten years. Since 1898 no less than $11,500,000 has been spent out of the state treasury for new or improved highways. Under the "improved highway law" the state has completed about 1,000 miles of new roads and over 1,000 miles of new roads are now under construction.

Will Lead the Union.

It seems certain that at the completion of the gigantic scheme of highway improvement, which was given its start several years ago, New York will rank as the leader of the entire Union in the matter of good roads.

So far as the Grady-Palmer bill is concerned, the likelihood is that it will not receive the support of enough Republicans to pass it unless the amount desired is reduced two or three million dollars at least.

The Anti Race Track Bills.

The passage of the anti-racing bills through the assembly was expected on all sides, but not by such an overwhelming majority. The bill repealing the Percy-Gray law went through 126 to 9, and the second Hart bill 126 to 7. Minority leader George Palmer and Robinson of Chemung, caused considerable merriment by making elaborate speeches denouncing the bills and then voting in favor of them. Only one Republican voted against the bills. The Democrats who voted against the bills made scathing attacks on them and on the governor.

It is in the senate that the fate of the measures will be determined. The opposition to them is more powerful than supporters of them like to see, though both Senator Saxe and Assemblyman Hart express themselves as confident of the ultimate passage of the bills. Rumors of a vast corruption fund for attempted use in the senate are freely circulated about the capitol. Keenest observers state unhesitatingly that the bills will not pass the senate.

Gone, but Not Forgotten.

The judiciary committees in both senate and assembly seem likely to prove the consecrated burial places of several bright and youthful reform measures, cut down in the full flush of immature exuberance and expectancy. For instance, no signs are seen or heard of the direct nominations bills nor the Massachusetts ballot bills, nor the primary reform bills. And where oh, where, are the initiative and referendum measures? To an impartial observer it looks as though the time for floral pieces, broken columns and the chanting of requiems had almost, if not actually, arrived.

A Timely Warning.

Still, the fate of reform measures is not always to be deplored when one is on the spot here in Albany and thus has opportunity to observe the methods and procedure of some of the advocates of these bills, highly desirable though the bills be. The average man who appears in favor of some radical reform measure is so much in earnest, so sincere, that he can hardly be persuaded to stop talking when once he is started. As a result, when limited to, say, twenty minutes he invariably (not frequently, but INVARIABLY) talks for forty minutes or an hour. No one likes to interrupt him, so on he talks needlessly, tiring the members of the committee and causing them to wreak deadly vengeance on the unfortunate bill in question. The writer has very frequently seen delegations of speakers before committees accept gracefully a time limit of one hour and then deliberately take up two hours by pleading with the chairman for "just a few more" minutes and by stating that "some of our speakers, who have not been heard, came all the way from Buffalo" or from New York, as the case may be.

The gentlemen who bring about these delays, though gaining more time for their speakers, really do their cause more harm than good, according to the frequent observations of the writer. The brief, snappy speaker is the man who wins votes in committee for his bill.

National Guard Reorganization.

The question of the reorganization of the state national guard is one that is daily assuming larger proportions. The Saxe-Wainwright bill, introduced as a result of the findings of the Wainwright investigating commission, is deemed too radical by many of the officers of the national guard. These latter advocate a compromise, such as is afforded by the Cobb-MacGregor bill, and have voiced their approval of this measure, which is considerably milder in its reforms than the Saxe-Wainwright bills.

At the recent public hearing given in the senate chamber by the senate and assembly committees on military affairs many of the leading military officials of the state were present and made addresses.

The principal argument against the bill was made by Colonel W. G. Bates of New York. He argued that the designation of a regular army officer to act as an official inspector would work great injustice to the guard. Frequent changes of inspectors made frequent changes in ideas, to the detriment of the guard service. Colonel Bates said the age limit in the Wainwright bill was the worst slap that could be given officers of the guard and the best means of Osslerizing them. Colonel Bates opposed the proposed military council as unnecessary, favored definite terms of enlistment and advocated adding the comptroller of the city of New York to the armory commission.

Can't Make a Soldier In Three Years.

Brigadier General Lloyd of the Third brigade spoke in opposition to the bill, especially to the provision for three year enlistments. He said it was impossible "to round out a soldier in that time."

A careful poll of the members of the two military committees indicates that the Saxe-Wainwright bill will be passed in largely its present form, though possibly some slight amendments will be accepted by its sponsors. Apparently the Cobb-MacGregor bill will be cast aside by the military committees of both houses.

The insurance companies have been urging radical changes in the new laws made as a result of the Armstrong investigation and must now admit defeat in their ambition. At a conference recently held in the governor's office at the capitol it was decided that, while moderate "relief" should be given the companies, not much of what they demand would be allowed. Present at the conference were Governor Hughes, Senators Hooker, Armstrong, Fancher and Tully and Assemblyman Hamn and others. Messrs. Fancher and Hamn have introduced the most important insurance bills of the session.

All the legislators present agreed that the companies should not be allowed any legislation that would in any way tend to restore the notorious conditions that previously existed.

The advocates of local option have had their field day at the capital and are now anxiously awaiting the action of the members of senate and assembly. The public hearing held last week was the largest of the year except those relating to the anti race track betting measures. Congressman W. S. Bennet traveled all the way from Washington to deliver an address before the assembly excise committee in favor of the Gray local option bill and the Whitney bill, the latter being introduced at the instance of the state excise department.

Pet Poisoning a Trade.

"Every town has its pet poisoner if you know where to find him," said a druggist. "These men keep my stock of alkaloids on the move. There is a demand for the pet poisoner. Suppose your favorite dog breaks his back. What a relief, then, to summon the pet poisoner and have the animal slain without pain. Cats and birds, dogs and even fish come within the province of the pet poisoner. He charges usually a dollar a case, but if you are rich he won't object to charging you $5 or $10. Some folks in their wills leave directions that their pet dogs or cats be poisoned, fearing that the animals would find life too harsh and sad after their loving owners' decease. Some folks, too, if they are going away for a long time—making a tour of the world, say—have their pets poisoned rather than trust them to servants possibly careless. Mistaken kindness I call such doings, and that, I bet, is what the pets call it too."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Painting a Yawn.

A picture by Miss Maud Earl, who has been called the lady Landseer, entitled "The Vagabonds," is a marvelous portrait of two decidedly bohemian Irish terriers, one of which is yawning widely at the spectator. Miss Earl found that her canine model would not yawn, so she had to sit in front of him and yawn herself for a long time. Suddenly he took the hint and proved an admirable sitter. But when the picture was exhibited it made all the people who came to see it yawn themselves, and Miss Earl used to mingle with the crowd and watch with intense amusement the yawns running round the company.—London M. Science and Sound Fact.

"The workings of the human mind when asleep are full of wonder," remarked a scientist who was paying a visit to an acquaintance. "Have you ever started up from a sound dreamless sleep, with every sense on the alert and with your whole being thrilled with a vivid yet indefinable feeling that something was wrong and instant action required?"

"Often," replied his hostess, "and in nearly every case I have found that I was awakened by the fumbling of my husband's key at the front door!"

CHAPTER XVII.

MR. JACOB RENWYCK, dismissing the new butler who had waited for his master, after having assured himself that all the other inmates of the house had retired for the night, carefully placed the family diamonds in his private safe, which stood in a corner of the library, set the burglar alarm and went into his room. For years he had attended in person to the closing of the house, except upon rare occasions when business called him from the city, at which times he left elaborate instructions with the trusted and time tried major domo, whose position on account of illness was being temporarily filled by the new man. The alarm once set, not a door or a window could be opened without a clamorous uproar from a big brass gong in the upper hall, and therefore Restmore might repose in peace and earn its name. Had Mr. Renwyck known, however, that one Woolsey Bills had departed earlier in the evening without consulting his master, perhaps his nightly prayers might not have been put forth in such a spirit of pharisaic complacency.

Therefore for an hour in the Renwyck home reigned heavy silence, which was broken only by the ticking of the great antique clock in the hall or its soft melodious chime as it struck the quarter hours. Outside a night wind sang faintly as it tossed a scudding rack of clouds across the moonlit sky and the ancient elms of Restmore swayed and nodded to its soft caress.

When Richard reached his room he found himself in no mood for sleep. He laid aside his dress coat, donned a house jacket, extinguished his lights and seated himself in the morris chair before an open window. His thoughts were in a whirl. Tomorrow, which promised to be a busy day for him—just how busy even he fortunately did not realize—would find him disgraced or blessed, according to the manner in which Miss Harriet would accept his confession. That she had already begun to suspect his real identity he was morally sure, and no time must be lost in revealing it himself before her doubt was changed to a certainty. In the morning he would make a clean breast of everything to her—the deception and its righteous cause—his love, which had stooped to subterfuge to win her heart, in despair of other means and under the stress of sudden suggestion. Then he would hasten back to the St. Regis, where he knew his dad would seek for him, tell him the whole truth and run the gantlet of parental ire. After that a third confession must follow—to Jacob Renwyck. This, he felt, would be harder than the other two, for, since the episode of the foreign draft, the manner of his host, while still polite, had undergone a decided change. A certain coolness, not to say a certain suspicion, had been engendered in the mind of the financier. It was unnoticed by the balance of the household, yet to Richard far more perturbing than an open, honest avowal of dislike.

The deep water harbor speculation, too, ran through his tangled thoughts, but the final crash he was powerless to avert. It was probably too late now, anyway. It hung above him like some hideous nightmare, the end of which he could only know when he wakened to a grimmer reality than he dreamed.

Meantime in another wing of Restmore two fair but frightened young women, who had exchanged their evening gowns for comfortable lounging robes, clung to one another, whispering in the dark. As the hands of a tiny bedroom clock slowly crept around toward the hour of 3 they began to realize the rashness of their undertaking. Miss Harriet, the more courageous of the two, was less inclined than even to meet this unknown man and but for her promise to her younger friend would have declined point blank to take the risk.

"Imogene," she murmured earnestly, "it is not too late to change our plans. We still have ten minutes left. Why not let me call father and tell him everything? He and Lord Croyland and Mr. Van der Awe could meet the man, overpower him and get your letters back, and nothing would ever come of it."

At this sensible suggestion Miss Imogene again exhibited symptoms of hysteria.

"Oh, Harriet, darling, please," she quavered, "you've promised me! And you can't refuse when it's nearly time. I'm not going to faint or scream or anything like that. I'll be just as brave as a—a—lion—no, not a lion, maybe, but some other kind of animal that isn't so terribly afraid. You needn't be scared. I'll take care of you, Hattie, dear. Now, do be sensible. Isn't it time to go?"

Miss Harriet looked at the timepiece nodded, sighed and took the other's hand. They opened the bedroom door, peeped out and listened. Nothing could be heard but the ticking of the hall clock, the sound of the wind outside and a mellow snore that oozed from Mr. Renwyck's room across the hall.

"I—I wish he'd stop it," whispered Imogene; "it makes one's hair rise up. Don't let go my hand, darling—please."

"Hush," breathed Harriet and led the way along the silent upper hall.

Slowly the two gentle conspirators tipped down the gloomy stairs, starting at a cracking step beneath their feet, fearful of dangers unknown, but menacing, that seemed to lurk at every turn. In safety they reached the lower hall at last, paused, then drew aside the heavy portieres which masked the entrance to the library.

If the hall outside was gloomy, the room which they entered was darker still. By a sickly light which filtered through the draperies of the window opposite they could see the shadowy outlines of the desk, the top of a silver inkstand and a ghostly high backed chair, while in an angle of the wall they descried the metal disk of the combination lock on Mr. Renwyck's safe.

They waited in silence till the clock in the hall behind them boomed out the hour of 3 in solemn, measured cadence, and as the last echo died away they heard a cautious tapping on the window pane.

"Oh, Lord, it's him!" gasped Imogene, forgetting grammar and all else, indeed, except her human terror in the situation, while she clung to Harriet's arm and shook from head to heel. "Don't tremble so, Harriet, darling. You—you make we want to scream."

"S-s-s-h!" her friend admonished. "Don't speak above a whisper now. Leave it to me. There; I'm not afraid."

Miss Renwyck, having once keyed her nerves to the point of meeting a stranger in the dark, was not a woman to falter in the crucial moment. A sense of calm was settling upon her, and, though her heart beat faster than was its wont, she was now in possession of her every faculty and could face the danger without a tremor of her voice or hand.

"You keep the purse," she whispered to Imogene. "Stand where you are and don't speak a single word. Really, dear, there isn't much danger, after all. Yet remember," she smiled, "you have promised to be a little lion, and the man is only 'Roddy-poddykins.'"

She wondered afterward at this flash of humor, yet it chanced to be the saving grace, for the terrified Miss Imogene was crouched in the library doorway, striving at once to be the king of beasts and to keep her teeth from chattering. In both efforts, alas, she failed.

Miss Renwyck crossed the room, fumbled an instant for the electric switch, then turned off the burglar alarm. She dared not make a light, lest it be noticed if any one came into the upper hall. Then, breathing an inward prayer, she unlatched the window, raised the sash and stepped backward to a point of vantage beside the desk.

At first she saw nothing, but presently found herself enveloped for an instant in a flash of light from a small bullseye lantern and heard a low exclamation of surprise from the darkness outside. Harriet rose to the emergency.

"Mr. Fitzgeorge," she began in a guarded undertone, "I am Miss Renwyck. Besides Miss Chittendon and myself, there is no one here."

There was silence for a moment.

"Do you give me your word on that?" asked the voice.

"I do."

"On your honor as a lady?"

"On my honor."

The light flashed out, and the head and shoulders of a man appeared above the window sill.

"Wait!" commanded Harriet. "Are you alone?"

"Sure," said the man; "you can see for yourself, Miss Renwyck," and thereupon he climbed cautiously into the room.

He turned his bullseye carefully about, cursorily inspected the hall outside, appeared satisfied and slipped his lantern into his pocket.

"Ah!" said the visitor as he caught sight of Miss Imogene's bloodless face. "You didn't go back on me, my dear. I didn't think you would, and I am much obliged to you."

"Stop!" said Harriet. "You must conduct this transaction with me. Imogene, is this Mr.—Fitzgeorge?"

"Y-e-s!" faltered the shivering young lady. "It's—it's he."

"Very well." Miss Renwyck began again. "Then we needn't waste further time. If you have the letters you spoke of"—

"Yes," the man interrupted. "We can't talk in here; it's too near the front of the stairs, and I don't want to run any unnecessary risks either for you ladies or for myself. What room does that door lead to?"

He pointed to the left, while Harriet, following his shadowy gesture, wondered if he were up to some crafty trick.

"Mr. Fitzgeorge," she said, "I prefer to transact this matter where we are. I see no reason"—

Again the man interrupted her.

"All right," he answered carelessly; "it isn't my risk, you know. If your father came down those stairs suddenly I might have to shoot; that's all. I don't want to injure him, of course, but"—

"Oh, Harriet, please!" moaned a shrinking voice at her elbow, and Harriet, seeing the wisdom of the move, gave in.

"That is the billiard room," she answered, "but it also connects with the hall. Stand where you are, and when you hear me call you may follow me. Come, Imogene."

This room was lighter than the library, having a large transom window, through which the sickly moonlight forced its way, and possessed an additional advantage to the girls by reason of the billiard table, which could be kept between them and their visitor.

At Miss Renwyck's low call the man dashed his lantern twice across the library window and stepped into the billiard room, carefully closing the door behind him.

"Now," he began immediately, taking a packet from his pocket, "we can get down to business. But before I take the money which Miss Chittendon is kindly going to lend me for a month or two I want to make an explanation of my act."

"Sir," whispered Harriet, "I do not consider that at all necessary. You exhibited yourself in your letter, and neither Miss Chittendon nor I desire to go further into your motives. Please be good enough to bring your extraordinary business to an end."

"But, my dear Miss Renwyck," the visitor persisted, lowering his voice to match her own, "you must admit that something is due me. I present myself in a very bad light before both of you, and I want to clear myself before I go. Appearances are against me, I know, but"—

"What's that?" demanded Harriet, sharply starting at a slight noise which at first she fancied was in the hall.

"Nothing, I think," Mr. Fitzgeorge answered hurriedly after listening for an instant. "Ah, this is it!" he went on, swiftly stooping and apparently picking up something from the floor. "I stepped on a stray piece of billiard chalk. As I was saying just now, I've got to leave for the west immediately to join my regiment"—they could feel his mocking smile even if they could not see it—"and, to be absolutely truthful, which I prefer, some of my friends, the police, are on my trail. That's why I am obliged to come at night. I hope I haven't frightened you ladies, and I beg to assure you that I wouldn't harm a hair of your pretty heads for any price whatever," continued this extraordinarily loquacious rascal.

"Yes, yes," said Harriet impatiently, "we know all that. Give me the letters and go."

"Pardon me," said the specious Mr. Roderick Fitzgeorge, with a gallant bow, "but I haven't quite finished yet. I want you to understand my position clearly, so that you may know I'm dealing squarely, though a harsh world outside is dogging my innocent heels."

The much abused gentleman plunged into a rambling tale of his misfortunes, speaking so rapidly that neither of his auditors at times could follow him even if they had not been in a state bordering on collapse, although Harriet, the cooler of the two, wondered why the villain did not take the money and go.

Had a watcher been concealed in the library he might well have understood the motives of Mr. Roderick Fitzgeorge, or Mr. Jack Bibbs, for both names, among many others, chanced to appertain to the same attractive gentleman. No sooner had the door of the billiard room been closed when another form rose stealthily above the library window sill, stepped noiselessly inside, crossed the room and dropped on his knees before Mr. Renwyck's safe. The man was of medium height and slender build, wearing a mask over the upper portion of his face. But his chin and jaw appeared beneath the band of black, showing a pale, putty-like complexion.

In his work upon the safe this second nocturnal visitor did not resort to force or violence. He was far too old a hand to use such primitive means, nor did he wish to arouse the household by any sudden noise. He pressed a practiced ear against the iron safe door, then turned the dial slowly with a feather touch till at last he was rewarded by a faint metallic click as the delicate tumbler dropped into its slot. By the aid of his electric flash lamp he made a mental note of the number, indicating his starting point. Then he replaced his ear and reversed the dial as carefully as before. Again he heard the warning click.

"Left to sixty, right to thirty-five," he murmured to himself and bent to his work once more.

He tried four numbers, that being the usual combination of smaller safes, then confidently turned the dial to the right. He scored a blank. The work must now be done again, though not from the beginning, for three at least of the numbers were known to him. Twice more he tried and failed both times, but at the third attempt the dial locked and the outer door swung open when the nickel plated handle was softly turned.

The rest was simple. The burglar produced a bunch of skeleton keys and in less than two minutes had forced the lock of the inner door, which opened with a rasp of protest to the pilferer.

The man with the putty-like complexion overhauled the contents of the safe by the aid of his dark lamp, selected such valuables as seemed to be the least bulky, but most important, and stored them in several capacious pockets. This done, he carefully closed and locked the inner doors of the rifled safe, pressed upon the outer door, adjusted the nickel handle in its proper place and spun the dial of the combination lock.

For a moment the burglar listened to the low murmur of his confederate's voice in the adjoining room, smiled sardonically and slipped stealthily through the open window. Outside he crept to a point beneath the window of the billiard room, cried out in imitation of a vagrant cat, then, crouching, fled in the direction of the river, with the cases of the famous Renwyck diamonds tapping deliciously against his ribs.

"I know a German editor," said a newspaper man, "who found himself one night when the paper was about to go to press without any editorials. What was he to do? It was too late to write any himself, too late to have any written. Like a flash an inspiration came to him, and, dipping his pen, he wrote hurriedly:

"'After carefully reading the editorials written for the morning's issue by four of the ablest and most brilliant members of our staff we have come to the conclusion that they might be misinterpreted by the authorities and regarded as an attack on the government. We ourselves consider them perfectly innocent, but as we have no desire to see our newspaper confiscated we have very unwillingly, though, as we think, prudently, resolved to withhold the articles in question. This must serve as an apology to our readers for a blank editorial page.'

"Imagine this editor's shock when his secretary telephoned him the next morning that the paper had been confiscated.

"'But—but on what ground?' the editor gasped.

"'For malicious ridicule of the governmental authorities by the omission of the editorials.'"—Los Angeles Times.

"Either" and "Neither."

There are two or three things about these two words that one should remember. In the first place, they should never be used in connection with more than two things—as: "It was either Tuesday or Wednesday," nor "either Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday;" "it was neither Tuesday nor Wednesday," not "neither Tuesday, Wednesday nor Thursday." Then, either should not be used in the sense of each, as "they walked on, one on either side of the road." It should be one on "each" side of the road. The third caution is about the pronunciation. Some persons insist that they should be pronounced "i-ther" and "ni-ther," with the "i" long. But this is more an affectation perhaps than anything else. The best authorities agree that the right pronunciation is "e-ther" and "ne-ther."—New York World.

The Making of Diamonds.

It is quite possible to manufacture diamonds. Indeed a famous Frenchman of science, Moissan, made very large numbers by means of his electric furnace. His process was to dissolve lumps of sugar in molten iron, subjecting the solution to enormous pressure. Lump sugar may be said to consist simply of water and diamond. It is the case that the diamond is merely crystallized carbon. There are three kinds of carbon—plumbago, graphite and diamond—the composition of all of which is identical. When charcoal is dissolved in molten iron, graphite is formed. All the diamonds found in Borneo, Brazil, India and South Africa are made in much the same manner—that is, by the action of great heat and enormous pressure. Charcoal formed from wood has been baked into diamonds, the enormous heat and pressure of the earth's interior causing the beautiful white stone to crystallize out. Although artificial (distinct from imitation) diamonds have been made for some time, the cost has been prohibitive, while the stones have been of but insignificant size and value.

HUNTING DOWN THE ACTIVE ANARCHISTS

Roundup of "Reds" in Several of the Large Cities of the United States—Chicago Plots.

The Attack on Chief Shippy and the Murder of Father Heinrichs in Denver — Assassins From Abroad.

ROBERT WATCHORN.

THE anarchist hunt is on in several of the large cities of the United States, and it is a somewhat dangerous as well as exciting game. Its danger consists in the fact that any one who makes himself conspicuous in the pursuit of the devotees of the red flag becomes a possible target for a pistol shot or a subject for a dynamiting experiment. Nevertheless the authorities of the country—federal, state and municipal—have responded to the call that they do their duty in the preservation of peace and good order under the law of the land.

Anarchistic activity seems to possess a spasmodic character. One assassination or attempt at such crime is usually followed by several others in close succession. It is regarded as more than a mere coincidence that the slaying of the Roman Catholic priest, Father Leo Heinrichs, at the altar in Denver and the attack on Chief of Police George M. Shippy of Chicago came so close together. Chief Shippy, as it happened, was able to attack his assailant, killing him instead of being slain himself, although his son and his driver were seriously injured by the red handed intruder in their efforts to save Chief Shippy from harm. This tragedy was followed by a supposed attempt on the life of Captain D. P. O'Brien, chief of the Chicago detective force. It is believed in Chicago that anarchists had planned to murder the mayor of the city, Fred A. Busse; Chief Shippy and Captain O'Brien.

The anarchist threats against dignitaries of the Roman Catholic church have included Archbishop James E. Quigley and Chancellor K. M. Dunne of Chicago. It was just after the murder of Father Heinrichs in Denver that Chancellor Dunne said: "The Denver murder will be duplicated in Chicago in less than a month. Archbishop Quigley and myself are the most logical ones to be murdered."

It has been said that the action of anarchists in this country is directed more or less from Vienna, the headquarters of their central executive committee. It is believed that the cult is not spreading among natives of America. But many of the importations from Europe bring with them germs of the anarchistic disease or else it has already broken out on them before their arrival here. The latter cases are not so difficult of recognition. It is to round them up, to deport them and to prevent the landing of more immigrants who are so infected that the federal immigration authorities are displaying special vigilance. For the second time since the passage of the immigration law of 1903 details of immigration inspectors have started out to take a census of the prisons, insane asylums, reformatories and charitable institutions to collect statistics relating to the number of aliens in these institutions who have become public charges. It is expected that immigration legislation of a radical character may result from the reports made by the investigators. It was found through a similar investigation conducted about four years ago that there were 835 alien murderers in our penal institutions and 378 aliens charged with attempted murder, and 44,985 persons were in reformatories and charitable institutions who had criminal records in the countries from which they came.

Interesting revelations were made as to the concert of action between anarchist groups through the statements of one of the members of the anarchist executive committee in New York, who some time ago "peached" on the other members and supplied information to the authorities. This man, who was an Austrian and a graduate of Heidelberg, received pay for his work, and he had to leave the country to escape the wrath of those whose plans he had betrayed.

A question arises as to what is the best method of conducting the contest in this country against the reds and their theories. In foreign countries where there is despotism or suppression of the rights of the people it is often hard to draw the line between out and out anarchists and those who simply aim at gaining for the people the rights they enjoy in countries like our own, where every man stands on an equality before the law. In the United States, where the ballot box provides the means of ultimate redress of every grievance, anarchy does not ordinarily make many recruits except among those who have come from outside and have not been here long enough to understand the true nature of American institutions.

The federal authorities act on the principle that the best way to keep anarchistic ideas from spreading in this country is to exercise vigilance in enforcing the immigration laws designed to keep out exponents of a philosophy which condones and advocates bomb throwing, shooting and stabbing as agencies of reform. That was the purpose of the order issued recently by Secretary Oscar S. Straus of the department of commerce and labor directing commissioners of immigration at the various ports of entry to confer with the police and other local authorities of their respective jurisdictions with regard to ridding the country of anarchists. Secretary Straus says this action was not inspired by the murder of Father Heinrichs in Denver or the assault on Chief of Police Shippy in Chicago, but was in pursuance of a policy he had had under consideration for some time. Under the new immigration laws the department has the power to order the deportation of immigrants who have been in the country less than three years and who in that time have committed offenses against our laws, state or federal, and whether felonies or misdemeanors. It also possesses the power to order the deportation of immigrants of less than three years' residence who advocate the overthrow of the government by force. In parts of the country remote from ports of entry it has no agencies for ascertaining facts as to persons who might be deported under the law and must depend for the enforcement of the latter on the co-operation of local authorities. Robert Watchorn, commissioner of immigration at the port of New York, says that fewer criminals are entering the country from abroad than ever before and that investigation shows that most of those who now figure in the court calendars got in before present methods of excluding such arrivals were employed. He favors a law like the proposed enactment introduced in the house of representatives by Congressman William S. Bennet of New York calling for the expulsion from the country of any alien sentenced to a penal institution upon the completion of his term regardless of the length of time of his residence in this country.

As to the policy of arrest and prosecution of reds, it is the opinion of many that it is best to avoid giving them notoriety, if possible, as they subsist upon that and are always looking for opportunities to pose as martyrs. That is the view taken of the matter by Bishop Charles C. Colton, who succeeded as head of the Roman Catholic diocese of Buffalo the Most Rev. James E. Quigley when the latter was elevated to the post of archbishop of Chicago. Bishop Colton says:

BISHOP COLTON.

"Ignore the presence of Emma Goldman and the sensationalism she glories in will be robbed of her. Deny anarchists the grewsome joy of having their murders flashed across the country with the murderer's name in the first paragraph, refuse from the pulpit to appease their vanity by deploring the existence of such people and in all ways treat them as poor, deluded murderers of the commonest mold who are inspired by nothing but ignorance, vanity and a supreme love of sensationalism, and anarchism will be short lived."

"Pinched."

The humor of school and college examinations is perennial. One specimen was contributed by one of the high schools where a girl in the department of history was required to write a brief sketch of Queen Elizabeth. Her paper when turned in was found to contain the following sentence: "Elizabeth was so dishonest that she stole her soldiers' food." The teacher who conducted these examinations was puzzled to know just whence this particular information had percolated into the girl's mind. So, calling her up, she asked the question.

Why," was the ready answer, "that's just what it says in the history."

The book was sent for and the passage examined. It was found to read, "Elizabeth was so parsimonious that she pinched her soldiers' ration."—Bookman.

To have perfect health we must have perfect digestion, and it is very important not to permit of any delay the moment the stomach feels out of order. Take something at once that you know will promptly and unfailingly assist digestion. There is nothing better than Kodol for dyspepsia, indigestion, sour stomach, belching of gas and nervous headache. Kodol is a natural digestant, and will digest what you eat. Sold by all druggists.

Impertinent.

Speaking of a man noted for his impertinence, an acquaintance said:

"Blank's impudence was second only to that of a waiter I heard about the other day.

"'Look here, waiter,' said a guest, 'this fish is not cooked properly.'

"'I know it, sir,' said the waiter, 'but you told me it was for your wife.'

"'Well, what of that?' asked the surprised guest.

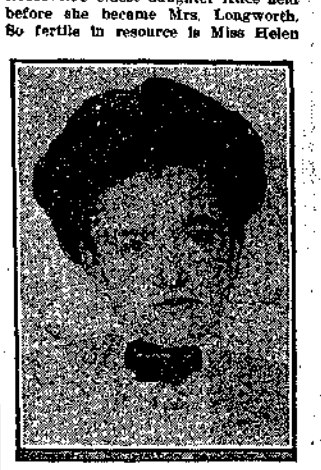
"'Why,' said the waiter, 'I knew that if the lady was your wife she couldn't be very particular.'"

The kidneys are delicate and sensitive organs and are very likely at any time to get out of order. DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills are prompt and thorough and will in a very short time strengthen the weakened kidneys and allay troubles arising from inflammation of the bladder. Sold by all druggists.

Odd Use For Bread.

Perhaps the most novel use to which bread is put may be seen in one of our great watch factories, where more than forty loaves of fresh bread are required each day. An official of the watch factory is quoted as saying

"There is no secret regarding the use of bread in this factory, and I am willing to tell all I can concerning it. From the earliest times in the history of watchmaking it has been the custom of watchmakers to reduce fresh bread to the form of dough. This is done by steaming and kneading. They then use this dough for removing oil and chips that naturally adhere in course of manufacture to pieces as small as a part of a watch. There are many parts of a watch, by the way, that are so small as to be barely visible to the naked eye. The oil is absorbed by this dough and the chips stick to it, and there is no other known substance which can be used as a wiper without leaving some of its particles attached to the thing wiped. This accounts for the continued use of bread dough in the watchmaking industry."—American Food Journal.



Fastidious Smokers.

"Did you know," asked one member of a group in the hotel lobby, "that an Indian is much more fastidious than a white man in the matter of smoking? I saw when I was in Montana several of their war dances and the councils afterward. You know, they sit in a circle on the ground and pass the pipe of good fellowship around in silence. Each man takes two or three puffs and then hands the pipe to his next neighbor. But if you notice you will see that in the whole circuit which it makes the mouthpiece is never wet. The red man merely lays the end of the stem against his lower lip and, keeping his mouth partly open, draws a deep breath. Removing the pipe, he exhales the smoke and then perhaps repeats the process, but he never puts the mouthpiece into his mouth in the common 'paleface' fashion. If he is asked to smoke a peace pipe after a white man, he first wipes off the end of the pipestem where it has been in the previous smoker's mouth."—New York Times.

MISS HELEN TAFT.

The Clever Daughter of the Able and Versatile War Secretary.

Secretary and Mrs. William H. Taft have three children—Robert Alphonso, now an undergraduate at Yale and nineteen; Helen, who led her classes at the Cathedral school in Washington, and Charles P., who is about ten and who loved to play tricks on his good humored father while traveling with him in the now famous Taft journey around the world. Miss Helen is at a very interesting age and is studying hard at Bryn Mawr. In the event of her father's elevation to the presidency she would occupy a position in the social world much like what President Roosevelt's eldest daughter Alice held before she became Mrs. Longworth. So fertile in resource is Miss Helen that if she were a man she would be likely to follow in the political footsteps of her father. When the war secretary returned from one of his journeys to the Philippines, his daughter presented to him a book in which were pressed flowers. "These are from the graves of famous men," said she. She had spent the winter in England, and she wanted her father to see she had profited by her travels. The book had flowers from the country churchyard where Gray wrote his elegy. There also were pressed blossoms from the tombs of illustrious men in Westminster abbey. "But, my dear," expostulated the secretary, "how could you pick flowers from these old tombs?" "Well, I know they don't grow there," she replied; "but, you see, I wanted to get a collection from all the tombs of great men I saw, so I just bought a bunch of marigolds, and when I got close to the tombs I just laid them on for awhile. Then they really came off the tombs, didn't they? I took marigolds because they keep their color so well in pressing."

MISS HELEN TAFT.

Realism in Art.

Two artists were boasting how they could paint. "Do you know," said one, "I painted a sixpence on the ground one day, and a beggar nearly broke his fingers trying to pick it up!" "That's nothing to what I did," said the other. "I painted a leg of mutton on a stone, and it was so realistic that a dog ate half the stone before he found out his mistake!"

All the Gold IN GEORGIA Could not Buy-

Roding, Ga. August 27, 1906.
Messrs. E. C. DeWitt & Co.,
Chicago, Ills.

Gentlemen:—

In 1897 I had a disease of the stomach and bowels. Some physicians told me it was Dyspepsia, some Consumption of the Lungs, others said consumption of the Bowels. One physician said I would not live until Spring, and for four long years I existed on a little boiled milk, soda biscuits, doctors' prescriptions and Dyspepsia remedies that flooded the market. I could not digest anything I ate, and in the Spring 1903 I picked up one of your Almanacs as a poor emaciated Dyspepsia wreck will grasp at anything, and that Almanac happened to be my life saver. I bought a fifty cent bottle of KODOL DYSPEPSIA CURE and the benefit I received from that bottle ALL THE GOLD IN GEORGIA COULD NOT BUY. I kept on taking it and in two months I went back to my work as a machinist, and in three months I was well and hearty. I still use a little occasionally as I find it a fine blood purifier and a good tonic.

May you live long and prosper.

Yours very truly,
C. N. CORNELL.

DISCHARGE THE ASHMAN; COOK WITH GAS.

With gas comes comfort. Saves time and lessens labor. No coal to carry up; no ashes to carry out. Saves dirt. A great deal of coal isn't burned, anyway, it's carried away by the ashman—and that's just so much waste.

Burn Gas instead of Cash.

Gas saves money. Don't have to waste it in getting up heat. It's ready in a jiffy. Don't have to waste cash AFTER the cooking is done, as you do with coal. Turn off the Gas and you turn off waste.

Gas is better in every way—saves time, dirt, work, worry and money, besides giving a wonderful amount of comfort, which folks never dreamed of before.

Siege of Gibraltar.

There have been many sieges of the famous rock of Gibraltar, but the greatest was the one sustained from the combined land and sea forces of France and Spain, 1779-83. For four years all the powers and resources of the science of the time were exhausted by the assailants without success. Under the inspiring leadership of Sir George Eliot the besieged more than held their own in one of the most memorable sieges in all history.

George Long of the West Side was working on a derrick for the Fulton

The Lecturer's Subject.

"I call my lecture 'Glass,'" said the lecturer, "not because it says anything about that subject, but because of the nature of it. To begin with, it is the sort of lecture that anybody can see through. Then I am liable to make a number of breaks in its delivery, after which it will be full of funny cracks. In addition, it requires a lot of sand to produce it, to say nothing of the hot air employed. The agents have blown it pretty much to the committees.

"Another point of resemblance between my lecture and glass is that when cut it is much more valuable. I shan't refer to the subject any more, though it is not a safe one to drop. The principal reason for my selection of this name anyway is my knowledge of the fascination foreign titles have for the American people."

But noticing that the audience had hurried away the lecturer desisted.—Chicago News.

Every One of Them a Bird.

A current newspaper item is as follows: "The wife of a Methodist minister in West Virginia has been married three times. Her maiden name was Partridge; her first husband was named Robin, her second Sparrow, and the present one's name is Quayle. There are now two young Robins, one Sparrow and three little Quayles in the family. One grandfather was a Swann, and another was a Jay, but he's dead and now a bird of Paradise. They live on Hawk avenue, Eagleville, Canary islands, and the fellow who wrote this article is a lyre bird and an interesting relative of the family."—St. Louis Republic.

Too Many Weddings.

"What brought you here, my poor man?" inquired the prison visitor.

"Well, lady," replied the prisoner, "I guess my trouble started in attendin' too many weddin's."

"Ah! You learned to drink there, or steal perhaps?"

"No, lady, I was always the bridegroom."

True Enough.

Origin of Blackmail.

The etymology of the expression "blackmail" is historically interesting. It appears to have its origin on the Scottish border and dating from times when frequent political feuds between the then two kingdoms of our islands tacitly justified a sort of perennial terrestrial buccaneering as between borderers of each realm. Many of these depredators were outlaws on both sides of the border. Their neighboring victims to save their cattle from being lifted sometimes compounded for safety by an annual payment as insurance to the bandits. This fee not only gave them immunity, but entailed them to protect them from rival freebooters. It was their "mail," or "protection." The "mail" coach was so named because it had its armed guard with loaded blunderbuss on the dickey. But the mail paid by border farmers was not for honest royal protection, but for guardianship by thieves and hence was "black" mail, the color of black being typical of what was nefarious, whether in art or in guardianship, while the guardian of this stamp was known as the "blackguard" of the district. The last named latter day term of reproach seems to have obtained its expression originally as here described.—London Field.

A Quaint Compliment.

On Mark Twain's seventy-second birthday a Hartford clergyman said of him:

"No wonder he finds happiness in old age. All the aged would be happy if they were as sympathetic and as kind as he. He is continually going out of his way to please others, and the result is that he is continually pleasing himself. Listen, for instance, to the quaint compliment he paid me the last time he came to hear me preach. He waited for me at the church door at the service's end and, shaking me by the hand, said gravely:

"'I mean no offense, but I feel obliged to tell you that the preaching this morning has been of a kind that I can spare. I go to church, sir, to pursue my own train of thought, but today I couldn't do it. You interfered with me. You forced me to attend to you and lost me a full half hour. I beg that this may not occur again.'"

THE APRIL AMERICAN BOY.

The smiling, satisfied face which looks out from the front cover of the April American Boy is an index to the interesting, instructive and pleasing matter this number contains. Jimmy Jones, Pirate; Four Boys on the Mississippi; and That Dillingham Boy, continue to delight their readers. Mr. Weir's fine serial, Canal and Jungle, is regretfully concluded. Among the shorter stories are: The Poetry of Steeples, which tells of how one man's heart was in his art; How Karl Got Even, is a humorous April 1st story, showing that the biters do get bitten sometimes, and Fooling Father, the moral of which is that fathers are not as often fooled as their sons think. Forty Stunts in Magic for Amateurs and Trapping Hints for Boys contain many things for boys who enjoy mystifying their friends and those who delight in capturing animals. Every one of the regular departments will well repay the reading of them. 82 illustrations. $1.00 a year. The Sprague Publishing Co., Detroit, Mich.

A Woman and a Watch.

"Women don't deserve to own watches," recently remarked a jeweler. "They don't know how to take care of them. A woman bought a watch from my firm recently, and I gave her strict instructions to wind it every twenty-four hours and always at the same hour as nearly as possible. Two days later she came back with it and said it had stopped. Well, I found it had run down. I told her, but she insisted she had wound it. Two or three days later she came back with the same complaint, and again I tried to impress her with the necessity for winding it. Again she insisted she had done so and went away miffed. The third time she came I asked her to show me how she had wound it. Then I made a peculiar discovery. The woman was left handed, and in attempting to wind the watch she had wound it the wrong way. I've had peculiar experiences with customers, but that beats all."—New York Sun.

Might as Well Enjoy It.

Mr. Jackson, who had but recently moved into the suburb, knew his neighbors on either hand by sight only, and consequently on a cold winter's night when his home caught fire he was surprised and pleased by the alacrity with which they came to render their assistance.

"Say," Jackson yelled excitedly to his right hand neighbor, "will you run down to the corner and turn in the alarm?"

"I'm awfully sorry, sir," the man answered, "but I have a lame leg and can't run."

"While I'm getting out some of the things will you yell fire?" said Jackson, turning to the other man.

"Got laryngitis and can't yell," said the other in a stage whisper.

Jackson gasped; but, pulling himself together, he exclaimed:

"Well, both of you go into the house and bring out chairs, then sit down and enjoy the fire!"—Youth's Companion.

Japanese Women.

We do not deny that in the days of old Japan women were taught and trained to hold and did occupy a position inferior to that of man, although as mothers they were regarded with the highest respect and devotion. But those days are gone, and today our daughters are given full freedom to live and act with perfect equality as their sisters of the west, while our mothers retain their old positions of honor and esteem.—Japan Times.

MUNIFICENT GIFT TO FULTON

Mrs. Albert Lindley Lee's Princely Donation of $30,000 to Build and Equip Memorial Hospital in Memory of Husband.

For several weeks there has been a rumor to the effect that some one would soon donate a hospital to Fulton. On Friday Mrs. Albert Lindley Lee, accompanied by Mr. Daniel F. Kellogg, of New York City, became the guests of Hon. and Mrs. Thomas D. Lewis and while here Mrs. Lee notified the Hospital association of her intention to erect a memorial to her husband, the late General Lee, in the form of a $30,000 hospital which she will donate to Fulton, providing a charter enactment permitting $1,500 per year for the maintenance of the institution meets with the approval of a majority of the taxpayers at the Fall election.

The hospital is to be known as the "Albert Lindley Lee Memorial Hospital," and it will be erected upon the site at the intersection of Worth and Gansevoort streets, just over the lower bridge, which was purchased some time ago by the hospital association. Mrs. Lee is desirous that the majority of the wards become charitable ones and that the entire sum of money which she contributes be spent within Fulton and that local workmen have the preference at all times in the construction work. The Hospital association, in the event of the $1,500 being guaranteed, will present the hospital site to the city.

This munificent contribution to Fulton's welfare on the part of Mrs. Lee is deserving of more than a cold word of thanks—a formal acknowledgement of her graceful deed. It is one of the most far-reaching kindly acts this municipality has ever known. It appeals to young and old; to the rich and to the poor. It is a tribute to the memory of her noble husband, which is without an atom of selfishness or self-seeking. It will perpetuate the memory of the man who was truly great in a manner in keeping with his many good deeds.

To the members of the Hospital association it has brought infinite delight. They have labored earnestly to bring about a hospital for this city, but the day seemed so far distant when it might become a reality that they were almost discouraged when the good tidings reached them that the fruition of their ambition was so near at hand.

The officers of the association are: President, H. Lester Paddock; vice-president, Thomas Hunter; secretary, Thomas H. Marvin; treasurer, Dr. C. R. Lee; directors, Thomas Hunter, Dr. E. J. Cusack, Dr. C. R. Lee, George C. Webb and Thomas Marvin.

Messrs. Hunter and Paddock have been in New York city several times conferring with Mrs. Lee relative to the memorial hospital and they have aided her in every way possible to arrange the detail work necessary before making public so magnificent an intention.

Hospital Donations for March.

The Woman's Auxiliary to the Fulton Hospital Association gratefully acknowledge the following contributions for March:

Ladies' Auxiliary—Two vegetable dishes, one enameled teapot, three enameled sauce pans, four bed tins, one dozen dickies, one table cloth, one dozen napkins, three and one-half dozen towels.

Ladies of the Presbyterian Church—Two cans paint, one set dishes for tray, six wash cloths, six pillow cases, four tray cloths, twelve towels, three bath towels.

Mr. McRae—One cookie cutter, one fried cake cutter, one biscuit cutter.

Mrs. Rose Ouderkirk—Two cans fruit.

Mrs. Marvin, Mrs. Morton, Miss Morton, Mrs. Frank Porter, Mrs. B. C. Brown, basket of groceries.

OSWEGO WATERSHED ASSOCIATION

Important Conference Held, Remedial Measures Suggested and Resolution Adopted.

A meeting of the Oswego River Watershed Association was held in the council chamber of the City Hall on Saturday afternoon. There was a large attendance of members and also of representatives of the water-power owners from the cities and villages located within the radius of the watershed. The association has assumed large proportions and will eventually include all owners and users of water-power within the section named.

The Oswego River watershed embraces an area of over 5,000 square miles—taking water from ten counties. There are 175,000 men employed in the various industries and about 1,000,000 people dependent upon the manufactories located thereon.

The State has been engaged for some years in building reservoirs for the storage of water—conserving that of the lakes in Central New York and the Adirondack region—in order to deliver it to the users of power on the Seneca and Oswego rivers during the low-water period. A number of years ago the water-powers along said rivers were considered the most reliable of any east of the Mississippi, but the continued lowering of the levels in the several lakes has proven a serious detriment to the industries depending upon water-power.

The State Engineering Department at the present time contemplates the lowering of the water in the Montezuma marshes at least four feet more. Gates for the purpose of controlling water at the outlet of Seneca Lake were built in 1901, but have never been used as contemplated, although the State erected monuments at various points on the lake showing the height at which the water must be maintained, but the laws governing the operation of the gates have been ignored. What is true of Seneca Lake is also true of all other lakes in the watershed, and the purpose of the organization of the Oswego River Watershed Association is to obtain an increased storage of water in order that conditions will not continue which have been inimical to manufacturing interests.

At the meeting of the association in this city on Saturday the lowering of the water-level in the watershed was the principal topic of discussion and remedial measures were suggested. Mr. Frederick Emerick of Oswego, the president of the association, occupied the chair, while Mr. L. W. Emerick of this city, became secretary. After a general interchange of views regarding what might be considered vital to the vast interests involved, a resolution was adopted instructing the president and Advisory Committee to communicate with the Superintendent of Public Works at Albany, urging the proper operation of gates at foot of Seneca Lake.

The Advisory Board will meet April 11, to formulate a definite policy and plan of action of the association and to map out such lines of investigation as may be desirable to follow in engineering, legal or other departments. The members of the Board are Mayor Smith, S. M. Coon and H. L. Howe of Oswego; C. B. Benson and D. B. Page of Minetto; Thomas Hunter, J. H. Howe and F. B. Dilts of Fulton; M. C. Murgatroyd and T. C. Sweet of Phoenix; J. C. Kenyon and George Campbell of Baldwinsville, and E. J. Rogers of Waterloo.

Those who attended the meeting from out-of-town were:

Oswego—F. A. Emerick, G. N. Burt, S. M. Coon and A. C. Coon.

Phoenix—T. C. Sweet and M. C. Murgatroyd.

Baldwinsville—J. C. Kenyon and H. P. Biglow.

Syracuse—C. W. Tooke.

Ithaca—D. W. Burdick.

Seneca Falls—E. J. Gould, W. M. Roberts, Messrs. Mix and Kendig.

Board of Public Works.

At the regular meeting of the Board of Public Works held on Monday evening, April 20 was selected as the date upon which the Board will hear citizens upon the matter of street sprinkling for the Summer months.

An application was filed by the Fulton Contracting Company for permission to lay a track in First street for the purpose of carrying engines, cars, etc., from Broadway to Rochester street to expedite their work. A petition will be circulated among the residents by the company, requesting their permission. Until this is done, the Board will not take action.

Body Found in River.

On Wednesday noon men employed in barge canal construction work discovered the body of John Ravey in the canal between deep lock and the upper bridge. The dead man had been absent from home since Monday. He was last seen alive in South First street and the supposition is that he became confused in the darkness and walked from the embankment near the Oswego Falls Pulp & Paper mill, the lay of the land at that point having been changed by the canal work. Coroner Marsh was notified and gave his permission to remove the body, his verdict being that death was the result of accidental drowning. The funeral services were held from the Catholic church on Friday morning and interment was made in St. Mary's. The deceased is survived by his widow, and four sons, David, John, James and Francis; four daughters, Elizabeth, Margaret, Mary and Helen, all of this city, and one brother, Patrick Reavy of Poughkeepsie. The family have the sympathy of the community in their affliction.

Whist Contest Decided.

During the Winter a series of games of whist have been played between the Fortnightly club of Oswego and the Citizens club of this city. The "rubber" was played in the Citizens club rooms here on Friday resulting in each team winning four games, causing a tie. The last game played in Oswego between the two clubs resulted in Fulton being ahead one game. The contestants from Oswego were Messrs. H. J. Peebles, Charles Tanner, George Wilcox, O. F. Gaylord, Walter Pulver and Prof. George Bullis. Fulton was represented by Messrs. C. M. Allen, G. C. Webb, F. D. VanWagenen, R. D. Parsons, G. G. Chauncey and Prof. J. R. Fairgrieve.

ASSEMBLY DISTRICT CONVENTION

Delegates Selected to State and Congressional Conventions—Instructed for Col. John T. Mott for State Committeeman and Luther W. Mott for National Convention.

Pulaski, N. Y., April 7.—The Republican Assembly District Convention was called to order this morning in the Court House by Col. John T. Mott, Chairman of the District Committee at eleven o'clock. After the roll call of delegates was over Chairman Mott announced that the District Committee had selected the following temporary organization: Chairman, James H. Cooper; secretaries, W. M. Richardson, Mexico; W. A. Reid, Oswego; tellers, Percy Waugh, Fulton; A. S. Guthrie, Hannibal.

Mr. Cooper in accepting the position of chairman referred to the progress made by the county under Republican administration since the Civil War. He paid a glowing tribute to President Roosevelt for the many great things he had done for his country during his incumbency.

The officers were sworn in by John S. Parsons who also moved that the organization be made permanent.

Hon. W. B. Baker moved the appointment of a committee on resolutions and the Chairman named the following: W. B. Baker, F. D. Corse, Sandy Creek, and M. Prouse Neal, Oswego.

On motion of Charles W. Taft of Williamstown, the following were named as delegates to the State Convention: Colonel John T. Mott, Hon. Merrick Stowell, C. B. Benson, Oswego Town; Hon. Frederick G. Whitney, Richland; Hon. P. W. Cullinan, Oswego; Hon. Thomas D. Lewis and Thomas Hunter, Fulton; Hon. C. I. Miller, Mexico; T. C. Sweet, Schroeppel; W. C. Richards, Parish; C. I. Kingsbury, Scriba; M. C. Worts, Oswego; H. Putnam Allen, Fulton.

These delegates were instructed in the resolutions to support delegates to the National Convention instructed for Hughes.

Alternates—John S. Parsons, Oswego; Fred Jamison, Amboy; F. W. Thorp, Oswego Town; E. E. Frost, Levi Salmon, Oswego; L. D. Beardsley, Granby; C. A. Stone, Scriba; E. A. Howard, Palermo; Thomas Hamer, Boylston; F. A. Looker, Volney; John J. Burlingame, Williamstown; Charles Felkert, West Monroe and F. D. Corse, Sandy Creek.

Instructed for Luther W. Mott.

D. O. Whitney of Albion moved the appointment of the following as delegates to the Congressional Convention at Watertown with instructions to use every honorable means to secure the election of Luther W. Mott, as delegate to the National Convention from this district. This resolution was unanimously adopted amid much enthusiasm. The delegates are: D. S. Burleigh, Phoenix; Hon. W. B. Baker, E. E. Frost, Oswego; H. A. Stacy, New Haven; B. W. Bennett, Fulton; Dr. L. M. Hollis, Lacona; J. B. Alexander, Oswego; J. B. Burt, Hannibal; E. G. Mattison, Albion; J. T. McCaffrey, Oswego; H. D. Coville, Hastings; Ansel W. Brown, Richland; James Smith, Oswego.

Alternates—F. J. Davis, Orwell; Thomas Moore, H. J. Burgess, Oswego; William Barker, New Haven; W. M. Kellogg, Volney; E. A. Blair, Hastings; Dr. J. L. More, Richland; J. R. Chamberlain, Hannibal; Willis White, Oswego; F. D. Cullen, Oswego; H. H. Dobson, Mexico; R. S. Aloan, Redfield; Dr. H. L. Lake, Fulton.

There were repeated calls for Judge Stowell who responded in an excellent spirit, declaring that the Nation is now on the eve of a Presidential campaign and that the Republican party is prepared to go before the people on the magnificent record made by it in the State and Nation. President Roosevelt is great because he has taken the initiative in the great questions of the day, continued Judge Stowell. He has fought against the law-breaking trusts and has checked the railroads in their violations of the law. In a word he has stood for the people in all things. He has treated the laboring men well and has been watchful of their interests.

Referring to Governor Hughes, Judge Stowell said that he had proven himself a great governor, and he urged the delegates to loyally support him in the State Convention, that delegates favorable to his nomination at Chicago may be chosen.

Resolutions were adopted commending Hon. Charles L. Knapp, Hon. Frederick G. Whitney and Col. John T. Mott and the delegates to the State Convention were instructed to vote for his re-election to the position he had so long and satisfactorily filled.

Syracuse Herald: Maurice R. Hiller, formerly a hardware merchant of this city and now living in Fulton, has brought an action against Warren L. Truesdell, a New York Central baggageman, for $25,000 damages for the alienation of the affections of his wife, Mrs. Julia Graff Hiller, who for the last year has lived apart from her husband, and who is now supposed to be in South Dakota seeking a divorce. In the complaint which was served for the plaintiff by Attorney William M. Peckham, it is stated that Mr. and Mrs. Hiller were married in Syracuse ten years ago and that they lived happily together up to a year and a half ago, when Mrs. Hiller made the acquaintance of Warren L. Truesdell, who, it is further alleged, won her affections and made the companionship and society of her husband distasteful to her to such an extent that she voluntarily separated herself from him about eleven months ago, since which time they have not lived together. In consideration of his injured feelings and his broken home, therefore, the plaintiff asks damages to the amount of $25,000.

Story of a Foot Race.

A voluble negro who was discovered pacing a fast beat across the Tenth street viaduct the other night explained his haste to the policeman who arrested him.

He explained that he had been to a swell dance and had paid the sum of $2.50 for the rent of the startlingly correct attire in which he was clad. During the progress of the dance a short yellow man had repeatedly bumped against him in a most offensive manner. He related the story with dignity and unction.

"Thish yere yellow nigger, he kep' a-bumpin' inter me till I ses to him, I ses, 'I'll see you after this dance outside,' I ses to him.

"He ses, 'Very well, suh; I'll see you after this dance.'

"I didn't like the looks of him nohow, and when we gits outside he pulls a big razzer, and he ses, 'I'll ca've you,' he ses, jes' that er-way.

"I thinks of that suit I pays $2.50 fer, and I gethers up all the rabbit they is in me, and I starts to runnin', and I runs fast. I runs like a jack rabbit ontell I gits to the vi'duc', and a big police he hollers to me:

"'Hey, there,' he hollers. 'Whar you-all gwine so fas'?'

"'I's jis' a-runnin' to ketch a cyar,' I hollers back. But he grabs me, and he ses:

"'Ketch a car, nigger! Why, youse passed four cars a'ready!"—Omaha World-Herald.

The Queen's Lesson.

One of the ladies in waiting to the late Queen Victoria had a very bright little daughter about four years old and of whom the queen was very fond. The queen invited the child to have lunch with her. Of course the mother was highly pleased and charged the little girl to be very careful about her table manners and to be very polite to the queen.

The little girl came home in high glee, and the mother asked her all about the luncheon. "Were you a very polite little girl? And did you remember to do all I told you at the table?" asked the proud mamma.

"Oh, yes; I was polite," said the little girl, "but the queen wasn't."

"The queen wasn't!" said the mother. "Why, what did she do?"

"She took her chicken bone up in her fingers, and I just shook my finger at her, like you did at me, and said, 'Piggy, piggy, piggy!'"—Philadelphia North American.

Rarest of Trades.

"Mine is the rarest of all trades," said an Englishman. "I am a maker of instruments of torture. I suppose that at this moment in Siam and China yellow men are bleeding and howling in the clutch of machines of my make."

He lighted his pipe. "Pleasant thought, eh? But we must make our living somehow. In Birmingham mine's made. There for seventeen years I have been turning out racks, hair and nail drawers, thumbscrews, skinners, needle beds, searing irons, bone breakers and what not.

"Siam and China have bought their instruments of torture from Birmingham for generations. Some of these contrivances are very costly and ingenious. There's a water dropper which works by clockwork that costs $500. There's a— But that's too terrible to talk about. Impertinent.

Speaking of a man noted for his impertinence, an acquaintance said:

"Blank's impudence was second only to that of a waiter I heard about the other day.

"'Look here, waiter,' said a guest, 'this fish is not cooked properly.'

"'I know it, sir,' said the waiter, 'but you told me it was for your wife.'

"'Well, what of that?' asked the surprised guest.

"'Why,' said the waiter, 'I knew that if the lady was your wife she couldn't be very particular.'"

Mrs. Lizzie Sperbeck entertained the Larkin Club last Tuesday. Her sisters, Mrs. Jackson and Mrs. Collins were down from Syracuse.

A Mr. Howard has moved his family in Frank Lamson's house.

Some Famous Salt Lakes.

The Dead sea is forty miles long and nine miles wide. The Great Salt lake is seventy miles long and eighty miles wide, the largest body of brine in the world. There is evidence to show that once the Great Salt lake was at least 350 miles in length and 150 in width, nine times its present area. The Dead sea contains about 24 per cent of solids, one-third of which is pure salt, while of the 23 per cent of solid matter in the waters of Great Salt lake nearly all is salt.

His Distinction.

A solemn funeral procession, slowly wending its way up the slope from the church to the grave, was intercepted by the old verger, who, pulling his forelock in the usual rustic style, addressed the clergyman, whispering in a confidential manner:

"Please, sir, corpse's brother wishes to speak to yer!"—London Tit-Bits.

PALERMO.

Mr. and Mrs. George Cornell have gone to Denver, Colorado, where they will make their future home.

Mrs. Maud Ridgeway began the spring term of school at the Grout district, Monday.

Mrs. Alex Pelo is critically ill with heart trouble.

Mr. Rowe of Connecticut was in town last week buying cattle.

Mr. Frank Coville has rented the the Cornell farm for the coming year and taken possession.

Mr. Fred Parsons has sold his team of horses to Mr. Rowe of Connecticut.

Mr. Peter Hart has returned home from Rome where he went for medical treatment.

Mrs. Krusino of Fulton has been spending several days at Alex Pelo's.

NORTH VOLNEY.

The many friends and neighbors of Mr. Perley Brown were shocked and pained to learn of his sudden death on Sunday, from heart trouble, following an attack of quinsy. His family did not realize his serious condition until they tried to awaken him and although they tried at least six hours before his death which occurred at 9 a. m., he never regained consciousness. The deceased was 28 years old and moved to this vicinity two years ago with his bride of a few weeks, his parents and an aunt, they having bought the Mason Bartlett farm. It is a peculiarly sad case, as the deceased was the only remaining child of seven and the sole support of his father in his old age. The immediate family consisted of his young wife, a little daughter, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Brown and aunt, Mrs. Addie Fuller (the latter a second mother), have the heartfelt sympathy of every one in their overwhelming sorrow. The date of the funeral is to be decided when it is learned when Mrs. Perley Brown's parents, who live in Iowa, will be here.

Mr. and Mrs. Jay Potter of Woodville called on friends in town last Sunday. Mrs. Potter will be remembered as Miss Nellie Eaton.

Miss Kate Brown, who has been working in the Oswego Hospital, is home for a few weeks.

Our pastor, the Rev. W. H. Pullen, was here Sunday for the last time before Conference. He was unable to preach, as he is ill with heart trouble. He has been here four years and during that time has won many friends who will miss him if he does not return, which is doubtful.

The last of the series of socials was held Friday night.

The L. A. S. is to meet with Mrs. Alice Sherman of Jennings Corners, Wednesday of this week. Everyone cordially invited to attend.

The Sun From a Balloon.

At the height of two miles the sun shines with a fierce intensity unknown below, where the dust and the denser air scatter the rays, which, thus diffused, lose their intensity while illuminating every nook and corner of our houses. At heights exceeding five miles this diffused light is mostly gone, and the sun shines a glowing ball, sharply outlined in a sky of which the blue is so dark as to approach blackness. At the outer limits of the atmosphere the sun would appear a brilliant star of massive size among other stars, and if one stepped from its burning rays into shadow he would enter Egyptian darkness. At the height of a mile and a half we found it necessary to shelter our faces to prevent sunburn, although the air around us was but little warmer than that of the previous night, being about 45 degrees. As the afternoon wore on and the balloon began to cool and sink we were obliged to throw out much sand, casting it away a scoopful at a time, and just after sunset it was even necessary to empty two or three bags at once.—H. H. Clayton in Atlantic.

In the Dime Museum.

"What did you do with my thermometer?" demanded the doctor who had been called in to attend one of the freaks.

"I swallowed it, doc," answered the glass eater. "Thought it was my medicine."—Pittsburg Press.

MAYOR SMITH SAYS NO.

Whoever wrote that black hand postal card to Clarence Elywn Pitts has scored one point. He has frightened the doughty knight of the water wagon almost into fits. Last week Clarence introduced himself to Mayor Smith of Oswego through one of his characteristic, long-winded epistles and finished with the request that he be permitted to carry a fire arm in self defense. Clarence has an unfortunate habit of "going off half cocked," as the old sportsmen say, and when it was noised abroad that he might carry a gun, right-away orders for suits of armor were contemplated by Oswego's plain citizens

However, Mayor Smith could not think that anyone would be so unkind as to wing Clarence, so he declined to grant the request. Perhaps he will be sorry some day that he incurred the displeasure of the frightened chairman but that is a risk officials must sometimes run.

The words of commendation spoken of District Attorney W. B. Baker by Justice DeAngelis last week were merited by his conduct of many cases during his tenure of his present office. He has prosecuted six murder cases for the people and with such skill that a conviction has been secured in every instance. Mr. Baker has a deep-seated ambition to excel in his profession and he spares no effort toward that end.

There is every prospect that President Roosevelt will send a special massage to Congress in the not distant future, looking to the suppression of anarchy in this country. Some days ago the Attorney General was instructed to institute an exhaustive investigation for the purpose of ascertaining if there is sufficient authority for suppressing anarchy by the executive branch of the government, and it seems that further enactments are necessary so that a special message is imminent. President Roosevelt recommended legislation on this subject in his annual message of 1901, and only limited action was taken, Congress refusing to make declaration that anarchy was an offense against the law of nations, as the message suggested and declining to provide for the arrest and punishment of American citizens professing its principles. All will concur in the judgement that Congress should take some such steps at the present time that will seek, at least, to prevent the reoccurence of such outrages as that at Union Square, New York, and at Chicago, upon the chief of police. Such a course need not and would not violate the liberty of individual speech or of the press but it would suppress that license which induces the weak minded to commit crime.

It is thoroughly characteristic of Secretary Taft that he should have undertaken the trusteeship of the Ann T. Jeanes Fund for the education of the negro race, in addition to his multitudinous duties as head of the War Department, the oversight of the Philippines, the supervision of the digging of the Panama Canal and of the affairs in Cuba, together with the cares that beset a candidate for the Presidency. However, Mr. Taft became a trustee for this Fund at the earnest solicitation of Miss Jeanes, before he was a candidate for the Presidential nomination. This fund of $1,000,000, the available proceeds of which will be probably about $50,000 a year, was set apart by Miss Anna T. Jeanes, a wealthy and philanthropic Quakeress of Philadelphia, to provide rudimentary education for the negroes of the Southern States. Mr. Taft was one of the first of the men suggested for trustees by Miss Jeanes, her selections being guided by a desire to place the administration of the fund in the hands of men whose executive and practical knowledge would guarantee that the money would be wisely expended and whose sympathies were known to be firmly and sincerely enlisted in the uplifting of the negroes.

Obviously Congressional opinion is at last awakened to the necessity of a thorough and scientific revision of our currency legislation. The Aldrich bill has gone over to the House unchanged in its essential features, but improved in several minor details. And now a currency commission is proposed to consider the entire subject, and a measure providing for an inquiry into the changes and reforms required in the banking systems of the country is promised to the Senate by Mr. Aldrich. The idea is not unworthy of adoption as public sentiment on the currency question must be favorably developed ere any reform of a permanent nature can be instituted.

The news from South Carolina that Senator Tillman is recovering from his recent severe illness will be joyfully received throughout the country. Men have always paid tribute to the courage, absolute honesty and sincerity of Senator Tillman, however they may have disagreed with him.

To the man who has nothing but trouble, Mr. Rockfeller's advice to "be content with what you have" is poor comfort indeed.

DIED.

Sophrona A. VanDelinder, aged 85, a resident of Granby Center for 65 years, died on Tuesday. The funeral services were held on Friday and interment was made at Granby Center.

Mrs. James Pitcher, aged 73, for twenty years a resident of this city, died on Saturday at her home in First street after a long illness. The deceased is survived by her husband, three sisters and one brother. The funeral services were held from the late home on Tuesday afternoon, the Rev. F. A. Miller officiating. Interment was made in Mt. Adnah.

The funeral services of the late Rev. John N. Fulford were held from the State Street Church on Sunday afternoon, an immense concourse of friends attending. The members of Post Schenck, G. A. R., of which order the deceased was an esteemed comrade and ex-commander, attending in a body to pay a last tribute of respect to the memory of a loyal friend, a brave soldier and a good citizen. Burial was made in Mt. Adnah. Beside the widow the deceased is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Luella Perkins, Fulton; Mrs. Jessie Newbury, Mitchell, South Dakota, and an adopted daughter and one son, Charles, who reside in the West.

On Thursday, March 12, at her home in LosAngeles, California, occurred the death of Mrs. Ernest Dockstader, aged 20, from consumption. The deceased was well known in this city where as Miss Belle Lyon she had spent the greater part of a year with her sister, Mrs. H. J. Wilson; leaving a year ago for a home in the more genial climate of California in the vain hope that the progress of the disease, which she had been fighting for many years, might be stayed. Her sister, Miss Grace Lyon, resigned her position as instructor in the High School to accept one in California last year that she might be with her sister and she was with her when the dreaded summons came. The deceased had endeared herself to all who knew her by her unselfish, happy nature and that death has claimed her is regretted by her many friends, all of whom extend sympathy to the afflicted sisters.

Frederick Freylinghuysen Chambers, Secretary and Treasurer of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Company, died at his residence at Somerville, New Jersey, on March 28th.

The last two years of his life have been marked by illness and physical pain, and his increasing infirmity prepared his family and friends for the end, which came peacefully on Saturday Mr. Chambers was born in Somesville in 1845, and was the son of the Reverend Talbot W. Chambers, the pastor of the Collegiate Church in New York, and an eminent Greek scholar. His mother was a member of the Frelinghuysen family of New Jersey, and he thus had every advantage of good parentage and the opportunity for good education to assist him in making a successful career. That he made good use of these favorable conditions and his part in the work of the world faithfully and well, must be the decision of those who have been associated most intimately with him.

Beginning his railroad service with the old Hudson River Railroad Company in 1862, when a mere youth, he came to the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Company in 1865, and had therefore completed forty years of the service. In 1872, he was elected secretary and served until 1875, and was again elected in 1878 and served until 1899, performing during these years the duties of general auditor in addition to those of the secretaryship. In 1899, he became secretary and treasurer of the company.

The traits of character which make Mr. Chambers' career a valuable example to the young were his devotion to duty and his untiring industry. His loyalty to his company was complete and unswerving, and it was never too late nor too early for work when there was work to be done and duty to be performed. His knowledge of accounts was very full, and his precision, accuracy and elegance of record have doubtless served to keep up the standard in this department of railroad work.

Mr. Chambers' life was spent between his office and his home, and he found all his pleasures in those places, being devoted to his work and one of the best of husbands and fathers. He leaves a widow and five children. The sympathy of all must go out to Mrs. Chambers, who buried a son in December last, and is now called to morn the death of the husband and father.

Sunday School Convention.

The Convention of the Oswego County Sunday School association held in the Baptist church, this city, last week was largely attended and much interest was evidenced throughout. The program was one of unusual merit and much enthusiasm was created by the different addresses. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Rev. J. G. York of Fulton; vice president, Rev. A. E. Margrey of Oswego; corresponding secretary, H. L. Stout of Fulton; recording secretary, Miss Effie Berry of Mexico; treasurer, J. L. Hutchins of Pulaski; secretary of Home Department, Mrs. Ella Wright of Pulaski; primary secretary, Miss Grace L. Johnson of Oswego; secretary of Organized Classes, Roscoe Sargent of Sandy Creek.

The next convention will be held in Grace Presbyterian church, Oswego, on March 29-30, 1909.

FLAGMAN NEEDED.

One of the most urgent necessities at present in this city, so far as safety to life and limb is concerned, seems very apparent to be a flagman at the Broadway crossing. Almost daily narrow escapes are encountered by individuals. The railroad companies are granted every concession by our city fathers and it should be their duty to protect so far as they are able the lives of all who find it necessary to cross the tracks. The point in question is every whit as dangerous an one as the Cayuga or Oneida street crossings and the traffic is almost as heavy, but practically nothing is done to safeguard the public from danger. Alderman Lockrowe has tried his utmost to improve conditions at this point but he needs the hearty co-operation of the Council and the Chamber of Commerce to accomplish the wresting of justice from the foreign corporations using the public streets of our municipality.

Mr. Verner W. Shattuck is wreathed in smiles these days. Upon inquiry it was found that a son had arrived to gladden the hearts of the genial shoe dealer and his wife.

The Brotherhood class of the First Methodist church on Friday evening elected officers as follows for the ensuing year; President, Amos Z. Wolever; vice-president, Frank W. Austin; secretary, Fred Ure; treasurer, George B. Palmer.

Coroner Marsh was called to West Granby on Tuesday where John Waterman, a well known farmer, aged 65, had committed suicide by hanging himself in his barn. The widow, one brother, John of Cortland, and one sister, Ellen M. Gardner of Fulton, survive.

Allen Foster, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Foster, was the artist who executed the window cards advertising the High school play to be presented Thursday evening. The cards attracted a great deal of admiring attention, as they were cleverly executed and gave evidence of considerable ability in that line.

Traffic Manager J. C. The C. A. C.'s held their annual election of officers on Thursday evening when the following were selected: President, Robert P. Marsh; vice president, Cedric E. Perry; treasurer, Charles Albin; assistant treasurer, Fred Dunton; secretary, William Merton; assistant secretary, Gordon True; press agent, George Snow; chairman, Louis Smith; auditor, Ross Wolever. A baseball team has been organized in the club with Basil Chapman as captain and Dan Waldorf as manager.

Sandy Creek News: District Attorney Baker of Oswego county is engaged in a most laudable undertaking to protect the youth of our large towns and cities from the temptation of breaking into freight cars. It is said that no less than $15,000 has been burglarized from freight cars in Oswego city during the past year. Cars are commonly sealed with simply small lead wafers which can readily be removed. District Attorney Baker is engaged in an effort to secure a more stable lock that will not so readily tempt the youth and those not accustomed to burglary to enter upon a career of crime.

Mr. and Mrs W. W. Hewitt, formerly of this city but now residents of Jackson, Michigan, spent Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Hewitt, the two men being brothers. Mr. and Mrs. Hewitt were enroute to their home after an extended sojourn in the West Indies. Mr. Hewitt is very enthusiastic in his admiration for Porto Rico, designating it as the garden spot of the earth and predicting that in the very near future immense fortunes will be invested there by Americans. He brought with him from our new possessions many interesting and instructive souvenirs of the trip.

The best news for Times readers this week will be found in the Butts shoe shop advertisement on page two of this edition. The public spirited proprietor says that he intends to sell more shoes this Spring than ever before even if he does not make a penny, and an investigation of the quality of the shoes he is showing with the sale prices attached will prove a revelation to the shoe wearing public. Foster says we will have a cold Spring and you cannot go bare footed, so just take your shabby or uncomfortable feet into Butts shoe shop and let him show you how to secure satisfaction and save money before Easter.

The removal of the local lodge of Odd Fellows from their former quarters in First street to their temple in Oneida street was accomplished on Wednesday evening. The three-linkers marched from their old home to the new to the tune of "Moving Day" played by their own band. The procession was headed by "Dad" Mead leading the traditional "butter." After the business section had been encircled by the brothers, proud, and with a right to be proud, a social and business session was held in the temple, the band striking up "Home, Sweet Home," as they entered the porch. Addresses were made and a general welcome home enjoyed.

CURRENT EVENTS CLUB.

The final meeting of the season of the Current Events Club was held on Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Powell. There was a large attendance of members, indeed, no abatement of interest has been shown by the members in any of the meetings, which have proved not only entertaining but instructive, and the meeting on Monday evening was equally enjoyed.

The leaders of the evening were Mrs. Helen B. Emens and Miss Dugan. Mrs. Emens presented some valuable and interesting statutes regarding public library and educational matters; also interesting data concerning historical events which were to be commemorated this summer in Canada.

Miss Dugan dwelt upon the Revolutionary movements prevalent in Asia. The development of this sentiment in India and the danger involved to the British Indian Empire. She next discussed the Austro-Turco-Russian political embroglio and the many complications involved. The subject was handled in a most comprehensive and intelligible manner.

CHAPTER XVIII.

UPSTAIRS the music of Mr. Renwyck's sonorous slumbers still oozed through the chinks of his bedroom door, while at the farther end of the hall another closed on the sleepless Mr. Richard Williams.

The young man had heard the clock strike 3 and was still pursuing his train of tangled thought when it occurred to him that perhaps if he read for half an hour his mind might become composed enough for sleep. He remembered a partly finished book which he had left in the billiard room and started downstairs to get it. With a natural disinclination to disturb the household, he tipped very cautiously through the hall, down the flight of carpeted steps and approached the billiard room, which, like the library, was separated from the lower hall by heavy curtains. These he was about to draw aside when his outstretched hand was suddenly arrested by the sound of a voice within. It was masculine and belonged to no inmate of the house that he could recognize; also it was subdued, as one who feared to be overheard. What he heard assured him that some rascality was afoot.

"It's money I'm in need of," the voice was saying, "and that's why I took the risk of coming here alone in the middle of the night."

Richard's hand slid instinctively to his hip before he remembered the absurdity of fashionable clothes. Clearly there was some one in the room who had no business there. Yet to whom was he talking? If a member of the household, why this secrecy? He must investigate, of course. But first he had better arm himself, as he did not know who or how many he might have to deal with.

His mind once made up, the Texan removed his slippers, crept softly up the stairs to his room, then down again, pausing once more outside the billiard room, but this time listening deliberately.

"Mr. Fitzgeorge," a woman's voice was saying, "my patience is exhausted. Why all this talk? Your scheme is blackmail—nothing else. Give me the letters, take your pay and go."

With a stab of pain the Texan recognized the voice as Miss Renwyck's, and it came with a double pang at the thought that she was meeting some unknown rascal in the dead of night—that she was buying letters from him.

"What letters?" his heart questioned jealously. He longed to rush in and kill the miscreant in his tracks, yet wisdom held his mad design in abeyance for the present. He peeped through the heavy portieres and spied two female figures on one side of the billiard table, while that of a man was on the other side, with his back toward the library door, but with his face half turned toward the spot where the Texan waited.

"Very well," whispered the man again. "I guess you are playing fair all right." He took a package from his inner pocket. "Here are your letters. Have you got the money?"

"Yes," said Harriet softly; "I have. But wait. I must see that the letters are all here. Imogene, look over them as quickly as you can. I am afraid to turn on the light, but perhaps Mr. Fitzgeorge will be kind enough to lend us his lantern."

"Well, say," chuckled the visitor quietly, "you've got your nerve with you, all right! I'm sorry I didn't meet you before." Again he laughed noiselessly, produced his bullseye and threw a blaze of light on the pile of letters which he laid upon the table. "Look 'em over, Imogene, my dear," he continued, with unblushing familiarity. "That's every one you ever wrote me."

With a thrill of pleasure the Texan caught this last remark. The letters, then, were not Harriet's, after all, and she, brave girl, had dared to face this scoundrel in order to shield a friend. He could wing the fellow as he stood. But no. That would alarm the house and undo everything which this splendid woman had striven to hide. He could wait, and if the fellow offered no affront he would let him go rather than mortify Miss Renwyck by his own appearance on the scene. When the man was safely gone the Texan could then slip quietly to his room, and these two courageous girls would never know that a sentinel had stood guard outside the door.

Miss Imogene opened each letter to make certain that it was there, counted the pile and looked up timidly.

"They—they are not all here," she faltered. "I—I wrote fourteen, and here are only twelve."

"That's all I got," said the burglar shortly. "You never wrote but twelve."

"But I did," protested the trembling Imogene. "You know I did, Rod—er—I mean Mr. Fitzgeorge. Oh, Harriet won't you make him give me the other two?"

"Yes, I will," said Harriet firmly. "Mr. Fitzgeorge, we have acted in good faith toward you and expect at least a fair return. You demanded $100. I have the money here in my hand, but I tell you once for all that I shall not pay you unless you surrender all the letters to this child."

"I haven't got any more," the burglar answered sullenly. "And, what's more, I"— He paused at the sound of a cat call from without and began fumbling in his pockets. "Why, here you are!" he exclaimed in well feigned astonishment, producing the missing letters. "I didn't know I had 'em, I swear I didn't. Take 'em, my dear. Pay up and we'll call it quits."

"And—and you won't publish the copies?" quavered Miss Imogene as though terrified at the sound of her own whispers.

"No," said the man; "I give you my word as a gentleman," with a singular misapprehension of the meaning of the term. "Hurry with the dough. It's getting late."

Assured that the letters completed Miss Imogene's indiscreet list, Miss Harriet tossed a roll of bills in the circle of light which was made by the bullseye lantern.

"You would better go now," she said in a tone of disgust which she made no attempt to disguise. "I will close the window after you."

The man counted the money hurriedly, slipped it into his vest pocket and closed the slide of the lantern.

"Thank you," he murmured, with a most elaborate bow. "I'm much obliged to both of you. Rich people like you won't ever miss a little sum like this, and it will make me remember you for many a day, even without the recollection of your pretty faces. You've been square by me, and I'll be square by you. And now one kiss all around, and we'll say good night."

"You scoundrel!" breathed Harriet, furious to her finger tips. "Go instantly or I will call for help."

"Oh, no, you won't, my beauty!" laughed the man. "I'll bet you've kissed uglier men than me before, and I'm going to take you down a peg. You holler once and I'll shoot the man that comes to help you."

Miss Renwyck, with the limp and whimpering Imogene clinging to her waist, moved slowly around the billiard table, while the burglar watched her, breathing hard and following with a catlike tread. He had taken perhaps six steps, and his back was now turned toward the door which led into the hall. Suddenly he felt a savage grip about his neck and found himself with outflung arms, his mouth and nose smashed flat against the table, while a tiny ring of cold steel was pushed behind his ear.

"Steady, you hound, or I'll give you a shot that you never saw in billiards!"

The tone was low, but masterful, and Mr. Jack Bibbs was far too prudent a gentleman to jeopard his health by futile disobedience. Therefore he made no immediate attempt to move.

On Harriet's brain, even in that dreadful instant, flashed a vivid, insistent memory. Again she was perched on the quivering broncho's back, pressed onward in a reeling, dizzy pool of death, while in her ears rang words of sweet encouragement. And as then she had exercised her force of will, so now she saved herself once more by clapping her hand over the mouth of fair Imogene. This time it was muscle combined with common sense, and a healthy shriek was throttled in its infancy.

Richard released his grip on the nape of his prisoner's neck.

"Stand up!" he ordered, and the man obeyed. "Hands up too! Ah, thank you! Perhaps you also have a gun. Allow me to relieve you of its weight." He ran his free hand over the person of Mr. Fitzgeorge and secured a short, ugly looking pistol and a pair of brass knuckles, both of which he promptly pocketed. "Good!" he chuckled. "And now, Miss Renwyck, will you please be good enough to throw some light upon this gentleman?"

"Yes," whispered Harriet; "I think I can explain in"—

"No, no!" the Texan interrupted. "I don't mean words. I refer to the bullseye lamp. Just turn it on him, please, and we'll look him over."

Miss Harriet complied. The light revealed the countenance of Roderick Fitzgeorge, alias Jack Bibbs, alias twenty other names which have no bearing on this comedy. His clear cut but dissipated features were distorted and sullen in his rage against the women whom he thought had laid a trap for him.

"My, what a prize package!" observed the Texan softly. "You have a bad eye, my friend; but, after all, I'm rather glad to know you. Miss Renwyck, do you think you could find me a rope or a piece of good, strong twine?"

"Oh, what is he going to do?" Miss Imogene began to whimper. "Oh, please, Lord Croyland, won't you let him go? He's my friend. We let him in the library window, and if you tie him up everybody will know all about it. Oh, oh, oh!"

Once more sharp symptoms of hysterics threatened to develop, and Miss Harriet's most persuasive powers were taxed to avert an alarming outbreak.

"Hush, dear, hush!" she whispered soothingly, then turned to Richard. "Lord Croyland," she said, "there are circumstances connected with this strange affair which prevent me from explaining fully. Tomorrow, when Imogene and I are less nervous, perhaps we can make you acquainted with the reasons. For the present I beg you to let this man go quietly. We have nothing more to fear from him."

Richard hesitated, glancing from Miss Harriet to the prisoner.

"Of course, Miss Renwyck," he answered regretfully, "I must bow to your judgment, though in my opinion you would better allow me to turn this fellow over to the police. I imagine they would be inordinately glad to see him. But—just as you like. There is one more little matter, however, which I must insist upon." He turned to the prisoner. "This young lady," he said, quietly pointing to Miss Imogene, "has paid you a somewhat exorbitant price for her own rightful property. Oblige me by returning the amount."

"Oh, no, no; let him keep it!" begged the victim, but Richard was obdurate upon this point.

Mr. Roderick Fitzgeorge, having accomplished the real object of his visit, was glad to be released at any price, especially as the disposal of the letters was merely a device for entering the house and holding the ladies while his confederate rifled the safe. Without more ado he took the money from his pocket, tossed it upon the billiard table and turned to the library door.

"One moment," Richard demanded. "Miss Renwyck, turn this light upon him, please. Thank you. Now on me. I want this gentleman to know me if we chance to meet again."

After a moment's silent scrutiny the Texan spoke in a stern but level voice:

"My friend, I am forced to let you go this time, though sadly against my inclination. You owe your release to the kindness of the ladies. The next time the affair will be mine. If you ever molest them again in any way I'll settle with you in a way we make use of in Texas. You understand? You are marked, my friend. I'd know your bad eye in Jericho. Yes, and I'd follow you there, too, for the pleasure of wringing your worthless neck. Now apologize to these ladies, then git!"

In Richard's present tone there was no suspicion of an English drawl, and Harriet marked it joyously, though half unconsciously, for the strain of fear and anxiety was now beginning to tell upon her nerves. Miss Imogene was ready for complete collapse, and the two stood trembling in each other's arms.

The burglar mumbled a stumbling apology, then passed into the library through the door which Richard opened for his exit. He lost no time in stepping through the still open window and in a moment more was skulking across the lawn.

"Lord Croyland," began Miss Harriet, who had followed from the billiard room with Imogene clinging hopelessly to her arm—"Lord Croyland, I want to thank you for"—

The words died suddenly upon her lips, and she leaned for support against the wall.

"Who's there?" called a voice in the darkness from the stairs in the hall.

"Quick!" whispered Richard to the terror stricken girls. "It's your father! Go back into the billiard room and slip upstairs when you get the chance. There! It's all right. Leave it to me."

He gave them no chance to disobey, but pushed them through the door, while he spurred his brain for some good excuse to account for his presence in the library at this unseemly hour.

"Who's there?" Mr. Renwyck called, and this time Richard answered back:

"Hello! It is I! Wi—er—I mean Croyland. Is that you, Mr. Renwyck?"

He grabbed a book at random from one of the shelves, then drew the hall portieres aside, to discover his host, revolver in hand, on the dim lit stairs, arrayed in a long white night robe, which made him look more gaunt and angular than ever.

"Oh, it's you!" said Mr. Renwyck in great surprise. "I thought I heard a noise—a shot or something—and got up to investigate. Why in the name of heaven aren't you in bed?"

"I'm awfully sorry to have disturbed you," the Texan answered easily. "I—I—stumbled over a beastly chair in the dark. Too bad, upon my word! You see," he explained, "I couldn't sleep, so I came down here to take a liberty and a book."

Mr. Renwyck glanced at his costume, which, with the exception of his dress coat, which had been exchanged for a house jacket, was the same his guest had worn earlier in the evening. The financier thought for a moment, then descended the stairs, entered the library and switched on the electric light. The first thing to catch his eye was an open window, which Richard in his haste had failed to close.

The Texan interpreted the blank astonishment so clearly written on Mr. Renwyck's face and proceeded to enlighten him.

"Fresh air," he murmured easily; "it's so beastly warm, you know. I rather fancy I'm a bit feverish, really."

Mr. Renwyck frowned thoughtfully. "Lord Croyland," he asked, "did you open that window yourself?"

"To be sure," lied Richard suavely, while he screwed in his ever ready monocle, thanking God that he had not laid it aside. Somehow the thing seemed to give him confidence now. It was something to cling to. "No harm, I trust?"

"Well, no," returned Mr. Renwyck slowly, "only I don't understand why it didn't raise a hullabaloo. I'm positive I set the burglar alarm, and"—He took a step toward the wall. "By George! It's turned off!"

"Lord Croyland," he asked, "did you open that window yourself?"

Now, Richard knew nothing whatever about the burglar alarm and began to feel icy beads of perspiration gathering on his brow, the more so as Mr. Renwyck was gazing at him in ill disguised and increasing suspicion.

"Oh, that!" he laughed. "I turned the lever before I raised the sash. Miss Renwyck explained it to me yesterday. Jolly little contrivance, 'pon my word. I should like immensely to have the system installed at Croyland Park."

The bogus earl looked innocent to the point of childishness, and the mystified host was forced to accept the very inadequate explanation of the episode. Without comment he closed the window, set the alarm once more, switched off the lights and silently, not to say grimly, led the way upstairs, meekly followed by the Texan, glad to have escaped further inquisition.

"I'm awfully sorry to have caused you all this bother," Richard apologized again as they reached the upper landing. "I'm no end of a nuisance, really."

Do You Think For Yourself?

Or, do you open your mouth like a young bird and gulp down whatever food or medicine may be offered you?

If you are an intelligent thinking woman, in need of relief from weakness, nervousness, pain and suffering, then it means much to you that there is one tried and true honest medicine of known composition, sold by druggists for the cure of woman's ills.

The makers of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, for the cure of weak, nervous, run-down, over-worked, debilitated, pain-racked women, knowing this medicine to be made up of ingredients, every one of which has the strongest possible indorsement of the leading and standard authorities of the several schools of practice, are perfectly willing, and in fact, are only too glad to print, as they do, the formula, or list of ingredients, of which it is composed, in plain English, on every bottle-wrapper.

The formula of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will bear the most critical examination of medical experts, for it contains no alcohol, narcotics, harmful, or habit-forming drugs, and no agent enters into it that is not highly recommended by the most advanced and leading medical teachers and authorities of their several schools of practice. These authorities recommend the ingredients of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for the cure of exactly the same ailments for which this world-famed medicine is advised.

No other medicine for woman's ills has any such professional endorsement as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has received, in the unqualified recommendation of each of its several ingredients by scores of leading medical men of all the schools of practice. Is such an endorsement not worthy of your consideration?

A booklet of ingredients, with numerous authorative professional endorsements by the leading medical authorities of this country, will be mailed free to any one sending name and address with request for same. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Sanson and Louis XVI.

Three letters written by Sanson, the executioner of the "terror," are printed in the Paris Gaulois. One of the most interesting of them is short enough to be quoted in full:

"Citizen—I have just learnt that the rumour is current that I am selling or causing to be sold locks of the hair of Louis Capet. If any have in fact been sold, this abominable trade can only have been carried on by impostors. The truth is that I have not allowed any one in my house to carry away even the smallest relic."

Sanson, it appears, had in his private capacity much sympathy with the king whose head it was his duty in his professional capacity to cut off. In another letter he attributes the courage with which he met his death to the firmness of his religious principles, and when he himself died in 1806 he bequeathed money to pay for masses for his victim's soul.

State Convention.

To the Republican Electors of the State of New York:

The Republican electors of the State of New York and all other electors without regard to past political affiliations who believe in the principles of the Republican party and endorse its policies, are hereby requested to send delegates to the State convention to be held at Carnegie hall, in the City of New York, on Saturday, the eleventh day of April, 1908, at eleven o'clock a. m., to elect four delegates at large and four alternates at large to the National convention to be held at Chicago, Ill., on June 16, 1908, and to nominate two Presidential electors at large and one Presidential elector for each Congressional district; to elect a State committee and transact such other business as may properly come before the convention.

Each Assembly district in the State will be entitled to representation in accordance with the basis established by the State convention of 1885. A schedule of representation is hereunto annexed showing the number of delegates to which the several Assembly districts are entitled.

TIMOTHY L. WOODRUFF, Chairman.
LAFAYETTE B. GLEASON, Secretary.

(Oswego county is entitled to 12 delegates.)

Hunter's Waterproof Matchbox.

There is not a match safe made, so far as I know, that meets all of the requirements of the sportsman as well as a ten or twelve gauge brass shell closed with a cork stopper. This makes a safe that is absolutely waterproof, easily opened, is cheap and that will float. If one wishes to provide against the loss of the stopper, a cord may be fastened about the cork and the other end fastened about the base of the shell.—Cor. Forest and Stream.

Too Significant.

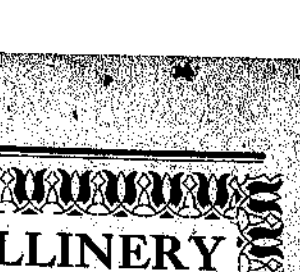
"These Spanish names in California puzzle me, but some of them have very interesting meanings," commented a guest of one of the hotels.

"Yes?" said the manager.

"They do, for a fact; they really do. I am keeping track of a list in my notebook. But the funny thing was in Santa Barbara. Listen to this: 'Indio Muerto street, meaning dead Indian.' Ah, here it is, the one I was after, a street named 'Salsipuedes.' Well, this street's the one that runs to the hospital up on the sloping hillside above the town. When they built the hospital, they were at a loss for a name. Some one suggested calling it after this street. And they did. Then they happened to look up the meaning of the word."

"And what does it mean?" asked the manager.

"'Salsipuedes' was originally a street that wandered up and down through a series of ravines, and it means 'Get out if you can.' Good name for a jail, but not for a hospital."—San Francisco Chronicle.



Evolution.

In the days when the higher education of women provoked more discussion than it does at the present time a number of Cambridge university men, among them Arthur Clement Hilton, who was born a wit and died a clergyman, were discussing the establishment of women's colleges. Hilton, says his biographer, Sir Robert Edgecumbe, expressed himself in favor of the movement.

"Of course," he said, "when women get their degrees they will not be bachelors, but spinsters of art, and then after awhile they will proceed to the degree of M. A.—ma."

FORMAL SPRING OPENINGS.

The weather on Thursday, Friday and Saturday was not calculated to inspire one with an unconquerable desire for airy fabrics and Summery apparel but there was no suggestion of chill winds within the J. C. O'Brien store where Queen Summer reigned supreme and where delightful piano music furnished by Miss LaLonde charmed the patrons. The interior of the store was most attractive with its decorations of chrysanthemums and palms. Decorator M. C. Knoffler had originated a clever decorative scheme and he was aided in its carrying out by the beautiful fabrics and choice garments in desirable colorings purchased by the proprietor for his patrons. The windows were especially attractive in their different arrangements. The south window displayed in excellent style the new blues so popular this Spring. The center window was rich in its violet tones and in the wealth of fashionable garments displayed. The millinery window was artistic in its decoration of Easter lilies and beautiful hats.

The suit and coat department attracted a great amount of attention and the styles and colorings found ready favor. The covert coats and the suits with the new butterfly effect sleeves were very pleasing to the ladies. The strictly tailored suits and coats too, were present in abundance.

In the dress goods department all the newest shades and combinations were seen in the fashionable Melrose, Epingle, Selma, Iola, Chiffon Panama, Batiste, Striped Serges, two-toned effects in Opaula; Voile, Montery and Nuns Veiling. In the silk department the clerks called especial attention to the newest fads in colorings and weaves in the popular Pongee, Taffeta, Messaline, Rajah, Peau de Sole, Shantung and other novelties. This stock is complete. The new trimmings and laces are lovely, the newest things being Fillet all-overs with bandings to match; Persian trimmings in the fashionable browns and Copenhagen blues and Batiste insertions and edges with all-overs to match.

The O'Brien store never before showed such an abundance of wash fabrics in white and colors and at such "without profit" prices. It would be impossible to estimate the number of patterns sold in this one department during the opening days. They were so irresistibly lovely that one could not pass them by.

In the millinery department the ladies lingered long over the confections arranged by Miss O'Hare and her trimmer, Miss Casey. The rooms were beautiful in their floral garniture and the hats were both desirable and becoming. Despite the unseasonable weather the sales were exceedingly satisfactory and the orders taken were in excess of former opening days.

Carpets, rugs, muslin underwear, shirt waists, net waists, gloves, faddy belts, ties, collars, bags, fans, parasols, in fact everything expected to be found in a high class dry goods store was found within this spacious, modern dry goods emporium. Mr. O'Brien knew that the Winter just past had not been the most prosperous for many of our residents so he waived inclination and stuck the knife deep into the profit end of the proposition, dividing generously with his patrons. This policy he intends to pursue throughout the present season.

M. E. YOUNG.

There was a delightful exclusiveness, a splendid individuality about the opening hats at the Young's millinery parlors when the formal Spring opening took place last week. The show room was very attractive in its decorations of fresh chrysanthemums and other flowers in tasteful keeping and the hats designed and executed by Miss Young and her trimmer, Mrs. Hillick, found ready favor with the ladies. Taken in its entirety the result was both satisfactory and gratifying to both proprietor and patron.

W. H. PATTERSON.

The double store of W. H. Patterson was well dressed up in Spring finery for the annual Spring opening last week and the effect was most pleasing to the eye. Many new and fashionable suits and coats, and a large line of the season's offerings in dress patterns, silks and wash goods were displayed. The millinery department was replete with hats both reasonable and artistic and ready sales were made. Every stock was filled with new and desirable goods and a most favorable impression was created in the minds of all who attended the opening.

DEMOCRATIC CAUCUSES.

Through an error, the hour of holding the Democratic caucuses on Thursday of last week, was omitted from the caucus calls posted in the different wards. As soon as the City Committee discovered the omission, a meeting was called and the caucuses were postponed until Saturday evening, posters being distributed and tacked up throughout the city with the changed date and the hour added. No question would have arisen relative to the postponement of the caucuses if the white dove of peace was connected in any manner with the Democratic factions of the county. The gentle bird flew the Democratic coop several months ago and its present whereabouts is claimed with vigor by the warring factions led by Charles N. Bulger, representing the organization, and by Attorney Francis E. Cullen representing the anti-Bulger forces.

The anti-Bulger forces met on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in the several polling places throughout the city and taking advantage of the technical error, held caucuses of their own, selecting the following delegates to the District convention to be held in Pulaski on Thursday:

First ward, John M. Foster, chairman; M. E. Mead, secretary; delegates, M. E. Mead, Chas. Barry, John White, John W. Knapp, J. J. McGinnis; Second ward, Charles D. Clark, chairman; Edward Bennett, secretary; delegates, C. D. Clark, William Whipple, John Secor, C. W. Noonan, Edward Bennett; Third ward, William Platt, chairman; Adelbert Gile, secretary; delegates, William Platt, Edward Kennedy, Adelbert Gile, Daniel Westcott, Frank Costello; Fourth ward, Martin Mulcahey, chairman; John Reynolds, secretary; delegates, Martin Mulcahey, J. M. Caffrey, John Reynolds, James Harty, John Murphy; Fifth ward, F. T. Watson, chairman; B. M. Hubbard, secretary; delegates, Daniel Roach, F. T. Watson, "Art" Laughlin, Howard Buckley, A. N. Parmeter; Sixth ward, George E. Pomphret, chairman; James Tyrrell, secretary; delegates, George E. Pomphret, W. H. Patterson, James Tyrrell, David Chetney, P. J. O'Brien.

The regular Democratic organization forces held their caucuses on Saturday evening, according to the call of the City Committee, and the following delegates were elected:

First ward—John Brennan, John B. Follan, John H. Crahan, Frank Cusack, John Bray. Second ward—W. J. Hartnett, J. R. Sullivan, Fred Summerville, Andrew Dwyer, John Mott. Third ward—John N. Sharp, William Crahan, Harry O'Brien, Patsey Coleman, John Harvey. Fourth ward—James L. Jones, J. H. Brooks, H. J. Fanning, Charles Easton, Ernest Smith. Fifth ward—W. A. The organization forces regret exceedingly that there was no decisive contest between the contending forces owing to the fact that neither faction was represented at the other caucuses and no idea can be gleaned as to the relative strength of the factions. Both sets of delegates will go to the convention on Thursday and each will send delegates to the State convention. The battle axes are in a high state of readiness; the razors are keen edged and the fray will wage merrily until the one faction or the other becomes exterminated.

Republican State Convention to be held in New York City, April 14, 1908. On account of this convention the Lackawanna Railroad will sell round trip tickets, good to go on all trains of April 9th and 10th, returning up to and including April 13th, at the low rate of $8.40. Baseball Matters.

The directors of the Baseball Association will start a strenuous campaign for the purpose of raising the necessary $800 to defray the season's expenses. It is proposed to enlarge the grand stand and to engage a high class manager who will take charge of the Fulton team and drills about April 15.

Nothing is said regarding protection as yet and our residents are not as enthusiastic as they would be if that phase was a certainty. Fulton has secured too many good men and had them pulled out by other clubs, to care to repeat the experience. If we have a team this year, let's have a fast one and let us have protection. Fulton has been "played ball" with too long now. The league team should be a public boon, not a private snap.

Modern Woodmen.

The Modern Woodmen of America held a county convention at Minnetto on Wednesday. There was a goodly attendance and much interest was manifested, showing a healthful condition of the Order. Messrs. Hubbard, Brown and Guernsey were the delegates from the local lodge. Mr. George C. Boyce of Minnetto was elected a delegate to the State convention which will meet in Buffalo on May 6. Mr. Scott Baker was selected alternate.

A Madman's Strange Belief.

An unfortunate maniac was confined in one of the Scottish lunatic asylums, his particular infirmity being an unshakable belief that every day was Christmas day and that he was dining sumptuously on turkey or roast beef and a good slice of plum pudding. His real diet, however, was of the plainest, he being served twice daily with a dish of oatmeal porridge. After duly describing to his attendant the pleasures he had tasted in his cut of turkey or what not he as regularly added, "Yet, somehow or other, everything that I eat tastes of porridge." This story it was which gave rise to the saying, "As palatable as the madman's porridge."

ELECTRICITY:

THE POWER BEHIND THE SOUTH

By W. S. Lee, Jr., Member American Society of Civil Engineers

If we should examine a railroad and industrial map of the South made 50 years ago we should find located along the ridges very few and short railroads. We should also find situated along streams a few cotton, woolen and other factories. In almost every case the articles manufactured were for local consumption and were furnished to the various large farms or plantations situated in the immediate vicinity.

As railroad construction began rapidly to increase in the South the tonnage of these small factories was not considered sufficient inducement for the location of railroad lines along the valleys. Consequently, these locations were made on ridges or plateaus, which afforded cheaper construction.

For many years the revenue of the railroads was derived almost entirely from transportation of agricultural products, but within the past fifteen years the South suddenly became a manufacturing as well as an agricultural section.

The rapid development of manufacturing in the South naturally caused manufacturers to seek some mode of transportation, and as a result the factories were located along the established lines of the railroads.

On the other hand if we should examine railroad and industrial maps of New England for the same time we should find the condition reversed. New England having been a manufacturing country before the advent of railways, its water powers were developed and factories located along the valleys. Consequently, when railroads were built in New England they were forced to follow the valleys, as the freight on the factory products furnished the principal source of revenue. As a result New England had the advantage of cheap motive power while the South struggled along with the more expensive.

It is true that a few water powers were developed for mill work, but, being located away from the railroad, experience showed that these mills, although having cheap power, were at a great disadvantage, owing to the lack of transportation facilities, in competing with mills located on railroads.

Our engineers saw that it was necessary to bring the power interests and the railroad interests together, and having been wrestling with this problem since the beginning of the manufacturing era. The railroads could not be moved from the ridges to the valleys, neither did the business warrant the expenditure necessary to build another system of railroads along the streams. The alternating-current generator and transformer came to their assistance and opened up the way. By generation of electrical power on our streams, and its easy transmission over long distance by wire, cheap power with good railroad facilities can be placed at the disposal of every manufacturer. While our progress has been greatly delayed on account of these topographical and railroad conditions we are today in a position to derive more benefit from our resources, in many cases, than if our streams had been developed in the days of direct drive. The manufacturer is able to locate factories on high ground, thus obtaining the advantages of better light, healthier and more convenient surroundings, while if the direct drive were used factories would have to be placed in valleys near water powers, where they would be, in many cases, cramped for room and oftentimes located on unhealthy ground.

The solution of the problem of transportation and power interests immediately created a prosperous condition in the South. Our agricultural and manufacturing statistics show that we are not only large producers of raw cotton, but that we are fast becoming a cotton manufacturing center of the world. This gratifying advance in Southern wealth since the beginning of the century is immediately connected with the betterment of the cotton situation. This wealth, as shown by increased assessment of property, amounts to over one and one-third billion dollars.

Considering that the valuation of the cotton crop for 1904-1905 amounted to six hundred and eighty-five ($685) million dollars and that all the other crops amounted to not more than one thousand one hundred and twenty-three (1,123) million dollars, that is, the cotton crop is worth more than one-half the value of all the other crops, we see that something like 40 per cent. of this one and one-third billion of increased valuation is due to our increased cotton

FOSTER THEATRE

Arbitrary Action of Members of Board of Health Reviewed--Letters from State Commissioner.

In order that the citizens of Fulton, and the patrons of the Foster Theatre should become familiar with the facts in the controversy between the local Board of Health and the owners of the property in question, a Times representative obtained the following statement from the Messrs. Foster, which will be read with interest;

At a meeting of the Board of Health, held in the City Hall Jan. 21, 1908, a resolution was passed condemning the hotels, picture shows, and theatre as being unsafe in case of fire, for reason of insufficient exits and want of fire escapes. The resolution was passed without giving the owners a chance to be heard or without the Board ordering or recommending to the owners that their places be made safe,—that subsequent thereto the owners were notified to appear before the Board at a meeting held Jan. 29, '08, and show cause why the various places should not be condemned as being unsafe in case of fire and by reason of insufficient exits and want of fire escapes.

The owners appeared on date set for hearing and offered evidence to show the places were safe and asked the Board what recommendations they would suggest to make the places more safe in case of fire.

The next day the owners of the theatre, Messrs. J. M. and C. E. Foster, the lessees, Mr. Frederic R. Leuscher and his local manager, Mr. Smith, met with the President of the Board of Health and Health Officers, Scott and Russell. They thoroughly inspected the theatre, and afterward stated that the only suggestion they could make for improvement was that automatic locks be put on the doors, and the doors made to swing out. They would then consider the place perfectly safe and correct the statements made about the theatre being unsafe and recommend it again to the public.

Messrs. J. M. and C. E. Foster then voluntarily offered to put steel balconies and stairways on the outside of the theatre. Every suggestion of the Board was immediately carried out and the owners also ordered from the manufacturers the steel stairways for the outside of the building, which are being manufactured and will be erected as soon as possible.

That thereafter on the 6th day of March, Health Officer Russell served upon the owners of hotels and theatres, a notice to erect fire escapes within fifteen days; that the Board of Health never passed any resolution requiring fire escapes upon the various places, or never passed any resolution directing the Health Officers to notify the owners to erect fire escapes within fifteen days; that said notice of Health Officers was made without any authority of the Board of Health. Messrs. J. M. and C. E. Foster had placed their order for steel balconies and stairways sometime previous to being served with the notice from the Health Officers, and the manufacturers informed them that it would be at least six weeks before they would be completed. This time has not yet expired.

On March 26, '08, Health Officer Russell served upon owners what purported to be an order of the Board of Health to close said theatre, a copy of which order reads as follows:

"In the case of the complaint and order concerning the condition of the Foster Theatre found dangerous to life.—

To John M. Foster, Esq.

The fact appears upon the record of this legally constituted Board of Health of the City of Fulton that after a complaint of condition dangerous to life existing in said Foster Theatre had been duly filed in the office of this Board, and an order and notice for its abatement and prevention had been duly served upon you, and a hearing had before said Board, notice of which were made to you; and now further, the fact is that said order and notice have not been complied with by you.

Therefore, take notice, that you are hereby directed and ordered to immediately close the said Foster Theatre to the public, until it has been put into safe condition.

Dated Fulton, March 26th, 1908.

S. A. Russell, Health Officer.

That the Board of Health never passed any resolution requiring the owners of the Theatre to close same and have never passed any resolution directing the Health Officer to serve upon the owners an order to close the theatre, and the action of said Health Officer was without the authority of the Board of Health or any board or officer having power in the premises.

On April 1st, 1908, the following article appeared in the Syracuse Herald and Journal:

Assistant State Factory Inspector Henry L. Schnur of Albany was in this city yesterday in conference with Dr. S. A. Russell, local health officer, with reference to the action of the local Board of Health in ordering the closing of the Foster theatre until such time as the proprietors of the same shall have complied with the requirement transmitted to them by Health Officer Russell, the intent of which is to render the building a safe place of entertainment. Mr. Schnur visited the theatre with Dr. Russell, and after carefully going through and about the building, congratulated Dr. Russell upon his stand in the matter, saying that the Board of Health had done just right in closing the playhouse, and that he would report at Albany. To the Herald correspondent Mr. Schnur said: "This theatre is a veritable fire-trap with its arrangement of the two gallery exits pouring their crowds down to meet and mingle with the crowds from the lower floor, which pour into the same two passageways into the streets. The house should not be allowed to be reopened for any sort of entertainment until there has been placed on the third floor at the gallery, and on the second floor also, outside exits communicating to the street independently from the main staircases. These outer staircases can be fitted with doors or gates at the foot, of such nature that exit may be had at all times, but egress is impossible.

Dr. Russell and Mayor Quirk had a lengthy conference with Mr. Schnur and they feel that their stand in the matter of enforcing the rules with reference to fire escapes, etc., is much strengthened by the opinion of the State Inspector. Dr. Russell said yesterday that the theatre will not be opened until the requirements had been met. Other matters mentioned to the State Inspector by the local

FULTON HOSPITAL

The Board of Directors of the Fulton Hospital association met on Wednesday evening and formally accepted the munificent gift of a $30,000 hospital from Mrs. Albert Lindley Lee of New York city. So far as Mrs. Lee is concerned all technicalities have been arranged and it now remains for our townspeople to comply with the requirements as stipulated by Mrs. Lee. They are not at all burdensome, being simply safeguards against any question ever arising to interfere with the legal acceptance of the completed building by the association and to prevent its non-maintenance by the municipality.

The hospital Board has agreed to raise the $10,000 deemed necessary for the purchase of the site, the removal of the buildings located thereon and the placing of the grounds in proper condition. The soliciting committee appointed is composed of Thomas Hunter, Fred A. Gage, Dr. C. R. Lee and H. L. Paddock. The committee is already busily engaged in soliciting contributions and they are being most cordially received by all they have approached, not one reply unfavorable having been received. In fact no more popular proposition could be brought before the public, it would appear, than that of the Albert Lindley Lee Memorial Hospital, and the soliciting committee is delighted with the favor in which their requests are received.

If you have not been called upon as yet for a contribution, you will be. The gift would be doubly welcome if you would telephone your intention to either of the members of the committee or write them of your willingness to co-operate in the good work.

State Grange Scholarships.

State Master Godfrey calls attention to the Grange scholarships in the Agricultural college at Cornell, examination for which are to be held the third Saturday in June at some convenient point in each county. The values of these scholarships for the winter short course is $300 or $50 for each and are awarded to the six contestants who attain the highest standing in the examination. The examinations are open to both men and women who are members of the order, but the student must be 17 years of age on entering college. The examinations are based on general knowledge, arithmetic, history, civics, English, spelling and a knowledge of Agriculture. Those who desire to take these examinations should notify their Pomona Master or the County Deputy at least three weeks before the examinations.

THE POWER BEHIND THE SOUTH

crop. But of the 13,566,000 bales that the South has grown our spinners have taken 2,116,318 bales, against 2,193,937 bales taken by the Northern spinners. Considering the fact that ten years ago the Southern mills consumed less than half as much as the Northern mills, it is very encouraging to note that we are almost on a par with the North, and the advantages which the South possesses are good reasons for believing that the South will, in a very short time, be spinning the greater part of its cotton crop instead of sending it to the North and abroad for manufacture.

We might sum up these advantages under the following heads:

1st. RAW MATERIAL: Mills located in the South are enabled to secure their raw material almost at their doors, and it will be many years before any State manufactures as much cotton as it produces. This, of course, reduces freight rates to a minimum.

2d. TRANSPORTATION: The various railway and steamship lines radiating to every part of the world enable the Southern mills to offer their goods in all markets. The completion of the Panama canal will afford still further advantages in transporting our goods to the Orient.

3rd. HELP AND HEALTH: Although help has been somewhat scarce, due to the very rapid development of mills, nevertheless the South is building yearly a great number of mills and securing help for the same. The help of the South is fast becoming more expert, consequently the same number of hands are annually producing more goods. The healthy location of the cotton districts of the South are drawing more and better help into the cotton-mill district every year.

4th. MOTIVE POWER: The South's greatest asset and advantage consists in its numerous water powers situated throughout the cotton-producing and cotton-manufacturing district. The South has something like 2,000,000-horse-power still to be developed in the very heart of the cotton field, and in a climate where ice cannot materially affect this development.

It seems strange that this enormous power should have lain dormant in the midst of our factories while they were producing power by steam at a great cost. It would seem that the energy of these water powers was destined to lie dormant until conditions arose in which all factors would work in unison for maximum advantage and that the South would then proclaim that it had become the manufacturer of cotton goods for the world.

In a preceding paragraph we referred, in a general way, to the fact that the alternating-current generator and transformer had helped in a great measure to advance the manufacturing industries of the South by connecting the water powers with the railroads, and although the special advantages of the electric drive with respect to cotton mills have been thoroughly discussed by Messrs. E. W. Thomas, Louis I. Guion, Sidney B. Payne and others, we shall, for the purpose of making this paper more complete, now review these special advantages.

1st. WITH AN ELECTRIC DRIVE A METER CAN BE PLACED IN THE CIRCUIT, SUPPLYING POWER TO ANY MACHINE OR SET OF MACHINES AND THE INSTANTANEOUS POWER OR TOTAL POWER FOR ANY GIVEN TIME MEASURED.

This may not at first sight seem to be of such great importance, but after due consideration the manufacturer will note that one of the greatest problems before him today is how to obtain exact and definite knowledge of the cost of production. Keen competition requires that each operation in manufacturing be figured to a certainty in order that every means may be taken to reduce the cost of production. To illustrate the importance of this question of measuring the power necessary for driving any machine we note an instance that came under our observation some time ago. One of our engineers was called upon to explain why a certain 75-horse-power motor was running hotter than when it was installed. Going to the watt-meter he found that his motor, together with two motors of the same size, were taking 260 kilowatts. Knowing that this was abnormal he asked the superintendent to have the shaft oiled, which was done that night. Next day this meter read 220 kilowatts; i. e., for want of oil on the shafting these motors had been taking over 18 per cent. more current than was necessary to drive the machinery.

2d. BY USING CURVE-TRACING INSTRUMENTS IT CAN BE EASILY DETERMINED WHETHER THE SEPARATE DEPARTMENTS OF THE MILL ARE STARTED ON TIME OR STOPPED BEFORE CLOSING TIME, AND IF THE FULL LOAD IS KEPT ON THE MACHINES DURING ALL WORK HOURS. This furnishes a check on all the departments, not only as to the running condition of the machinery and the power taken to drive it, but also on amount of work done and time of starting work in the different departments; also as to whether all the machinery was kept loaded during the total working time or not, and the total time machinery was running. It is almost impossible for the superintendent to keep an eye on all of his men, but if any of the spindles are not running the power taken by the motor is less and is recorded upon the watt-meter chart.

3d. ONE SET OF MACHINES MAY BE OPERATED WHEN IT IS NOT ADVANTAGEOUS OR CONVENIENT TO RUN THE WHOLE MILL. Often one part of the mill gets behind and has to run part of the night. If the mill is driven by its own steam plant the engine attendant and fireman have to be kept on duty and the whole mill run to supply power for this one part; but if this mill were buying power from a central station all that would be necessary would be to throw the switch for the one motor and proceed to work. In this connection we have known cases when it was impossible to operate the machine shop in order to make repairs on parts affecting the main drive, simply from a want of these parts. With the machine shop driven by separate motor this could rarely happen.

4th. THE ENLARGEMENT OF MILL IS MADE INDEPENDENT OF RELATIVE POSITION TO THE MAIN DRIVE. With a mechanical drive all details relating to the enlargement must be determined before the plans of the original mill are made. The engine, the boiler-room and main shafting must be planned with this in view. This means a large additional cost to the mill until the enlargement is made, and if the enlargement is not made, a waste of money. But when the electric drive is used it is only necessary to add another building and buy more motors. In many cases the high-pressure engine is installed and room left for the low-pressure side with the main pulley placed at one end of the mill. This arrangement works very well when enlargement is made shortly after first installation, but we know cases where mills have been working for years on a very inefficient basis, due to the fact that the enlargement has never been made. Again, it often happens that a mill will have an available site for an additional building or wish to drive a pump that cannot be reached with mechanical drive. Under such conditions electric drive displays its adaptability. Furthermore, a mill can be more readily designed to effect a saving in handling a product from one department to another.

5th. THE AMOUNT OF SHAFTING IS MATERIALLY DECREASED AND A SAVING IN FRICTIONAL LOSSES IS THEREBY EFFECTED. This cutting down of shafting means a saving in first cost of the mill, a saving in labor and oil, and adds much to the appearance of the mill. The saving in frictional losses cannot be too strongly impressed upon a manufacturer. As an illustration: The indicated horse power of a prominent cotton mill in the city of Charlotte with steam power was 450 horse power; since using electric motors the power to drive this mill has been reduced to 345 horse power, clearly demonstrating that the frictional losses of engine belting and shafting in the steam drive exceed those in the electric drive.

6th. BY THE SUBSTITUTION OF LIGHTER BELTS FOR LARGE, HEAVY ONES A SAVING IS AFFECTED AT FIRST COST AND IN BENDING FRICTIONAL LOSSES. Before the introduction of the electric drive large, heavy belts were used, but many mills electrically driven are now running with no belt wider than six inches. In the old mill several belts were used between the engine and the machine operated, and every belt mean so much slippage and a consequent loss of power and speed. This is confirmed by the common practice among cotton mill superintendents in figuring speed to allow a large percentage for slippage, and in cases where mills have been changed from mechanical to electric drive by speed being found too high, due to the fact that there was no slippage allowed for, as in the mechanical drive.

7th. THE OUTPUT IS INCREASED AND THE QUALITY OF GOODS IS IMPROVED. That system which maintains the speed in the machinery nearest to the maximum limit and at the same time maintains that speed constant will show the largest production. That these conditions are more nearly fulfilled by the electric drive than any other motive power is daily demonstrated in mills using this system. This increase in production is due largely to the fact that the torque is constant at all times in the motor. On the other hand, the torque of a reciprocating engine varies from nothing when a piston is at the end of its stroke to a maximum at the middle, and to nothing again at the other end. The speed, even with a heavy fly wheel, varies materially throughout the stroke and causes pulsation on high speed machinery like spindles or warpers. These pulsations in many cases throughout the mill may be multiplied in intensity, and should some weak or defective thread encounter this pulsation at a proper time, it will break. The machinery being automatic, the moment one thread breaks the whole machinery stops until an operator can repair the thread and start the machine. It is due largely to the above reason that the electric drive in many cases has increased the production from 2 per cent to 4 per cent.

8th. LOWER FIRST COST FOR SMALL MANUFACTURES. If the electric drive is suitable for large manufactures it is doubly so for small manufactures. Many firms which are now rated high were started with very little capital, and the cost of steam plant, together with land and the building to install engine and boiler, was a serious consideration to such an infant industry. For many reasons a boiler and engine cannot be placed in a third or fourth story, while a motor can be placed almost anywhere, and at a very small outlay as compared to that of a steam plant. THE COST OF COAL, COMBINED WITH RENTAL OF PROPERTY ON WHICH TO ERECT A STEAM PLANT IN A CITY, IS OFTEN ENOUGH IN EXCESS OF WHAT POWER COULD BE PURCHASED FOR FROM A CENTRAL STATION AS WOULD MAKE A GOOD WORKING PROFIT FOR A SMALL MANUFACTURE. Especially is this true if the manufacturer uses power intermittently for his work or has a variable load. Power that cost $60 per horse power per year used continuously may cost $120, or even more, if used only a few hours each day, for the fires have to be kept under the boilers, and the rent on property has to be paid, whether the engine is doing its work or running idle, while in the case of electric drive the power could be shut off and expense stopped. The manager of a company in Charlotte using three small engines before conversion to electric drive recently told the writer that their power now cost them about $2.00 per month more than they formerly paid their fireman.

We now come to a very marked advantage that is peculiar to the electric drive alone. This is an age of CENTRALIZATION AND SPECIALIZATION, and when a combination of both is effected the best results are obtained. If it is a paying investment to mill owners to use the electric drive when they have to build separate power plants for each individual mill, WOULD IT NOT BE A MUCH BETTER INVESTMENT IF ALL THE MILL OWNERS IN ONE TOWN SHOULD COMBINE TO BUILD A CENTRAL POWER STATION FROM WHICH TO SUPPLY POWER TO THE INDIVIDUAL MILLS? This, however, is an almost impossible proposition, due to reasons that we need not treat of here. In the majority of cases, moreover, the manufacturer is not a steam engineer. He does not want to spend his energy studying power house economics and cannot give this question the same close personal attention as the central station manager who has made it a life study. Neither can he afford to pay the same salaries for skilled mechanics and electricians to operate his individual power plant as can the manager of a central station, inasmuch as the large plant will not require more expert attendance than would the small plant, and thus though the labor item in the operation of, say, a 5000 horse power plant be greater than that of a 1000 horse power plant, the cost per horse power output is not proportionately the same, but considerably less.

Cost per kilowatt of generating apparatus in a central station is also much less than if the same power had to be arranged for at several independent points.

The maximum capacity of central station machinery will not need be as great as the sum of the capacities of the isolated plants, for the peak loads of the different factories will come at different times of the day, and, furthermore, the load factor will be higher for the larger plant. (By "peak load" is meant the greatest load during the day, and by "load factor" is meant the ratio of average load to the maximum load.)

The manufacturer also knows that when only a part of his machinery is running, all he is saving is a part of his coal bill, and, further, that the saving in coal is not proportional to the difference between the production of the running machinery and that lying idle, for under the existing conditions with mechanical drive the shafting for the entire plant is belted together. Again, he must at all times pay interest on the investment, rents, insurance and labor for a plant sufficiently large to actuate at peak load his entire factory, whereas if he is buying his power from a central station HIS BILLS ARE BASED UPON ACTUAL AMOUNT DELIVERED. This means that when the production is small the fixed charges are proportionately reduced.

IT is very evident from the foregoing that CENTRALIZATION OF POWER is profitable to a producer and necessary if he is going to compete with other states and counties, and it cannot matter to him whether the power is generated in his own plant or purchased from another as long as it is obtained cheaply. IN FACT, THE IDEAL PLAN WOULD BE TO BUY THE POWER FROM AN INDEPENDENT CONCERN, INASMUCH AS THE FACTORY MANAGER CAN THEN DEVOTE HIS ENTIRE TIME TO INCREASING THE OUTPUT OF THE FACTORY INSTEAD OF ENDEAVORING TO KEEP DOWN THE COST OF POWER IN HIS PLANT.

In the foregoing paper we have endeavored to show, first, the railroad and topographical conditions which influenced the power development of the South. We have also considered an agricultural and manufacturing development which demanded electrical development in the South. We have also shown some of the features and advantages of the electrical drive and before closing this paper wish to consider the financial effect of developing our water powers by the use of electricity. In order to see just what financial effect this could have on the South we should look somewhat into the relative cost of power generated by steam and cost of electrical power that is offered for sale by the various water power companies throughout the South.

E. K. HUGHES, Editor
W. E. HUGHES, Proprietor

Issued Every Wednesday at No. 66 South First street, Fulton, N. Y.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 15, 1908

It will be many a day before the public mind can rid itself of the idea that a big per capita circulation makes prosperity.

It has been said of some Senators in Washington that they "resemble Napoleon's Old Guard in that they do not die as long as they can help it and never surrender on any terms."

And now we are informed that a syndicate is being incorporated to explore the interior of the earth, the incorporators claiming that the earth is hollow and open at the poles. It is not altogether possible that the hollowness is confined to these gentlemen's heads?

"The question is not whether the republicans will carry Ohio. The question is only how large the republican majority in the State will be." This is the reply made by Representative Nicholas Longworth of Ohio to statements about political conditions in the Buckeye State, put in circulation recently.

The selection of Mr. L. W. Mott, son of Col. J. T. Mott of Oswego, as a National delegate from this congressional district is an eminently satisfactory one to all who believe in and stand for the highest ideals of Republicanism. Clean, vigorous, competent; progressive, he is a type of man of which a community, a party; may well be proud. In his political make-up factionalism has no part. He is a Republican.

It is highly probable that the Republican district and county conventions will be held in Pulaski late in June. At these conventions county officers will be nominated, A Member of Assembly selected and delegates to the State, Senatorial, and Congressional conventions be elected. So far there is not a whisper of opposition to the nomination of District Attorney Baker in his aspiration for the County Judgeship nor to Mr. Frank L. Smith of Phoenix in his desire to succeed Assemblyman F G. Whitney. These two very popular candidates have as yet failed to find anyone to try a neck-and-neck with them.

Colonel John T. Mott occupies an exalted position in the eyes of the electors of the counties comprising this Congressional district and there was not the slightest breath of opposition to his re-election as State Committeeman. He was the unanimous choice of Republicans. Even the Democratic press fails to find one word other than of commendation for the action of the State committee. It is not given many men to officiate with so finely balanced judgment in the counsels of a party that even the opposition becomes silent towards him. In Colonel Mott's selection for the position the party is honored, the man is approved.

Democrats in War Paint.

The Democratic Congressional convention held in Pulaski last week presented a spectacle for gods and man. Every other delegate was looking for a political jugular and linguistic encounters of a fierce nature were in abundance, but when the smoke of the talkfest had cleared away "Boss" Bulger was found firmly seated in the same position as of yore and his word was law; his friends far and away in the majority. In fact the "gag rule" was vigorously applied to any and all who do not see things the same old way the organization leader did, and a second convention, led by Attorney F. E. Cullen of Oswego, was organized side by side and in the same hall with the regulars. The fight did not die in the convention hall but contesting delegations went to the State convention in New York City, where after many conferences with the State leaders the Cullen-Mansfield forces decided to withdraw, stating that matters had been arranged to their satisfaction by the powers that be. Later the details would be given.

It is not probable that a truce will be called by either faction in Oswego county, however, until the one or the other becomes obliterated.

DIED.

Mrs. Hulda Becker, 89 years of age, died on Tuesday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Paul Holsriette, on Second street.

The news of the death of Newell R. Cole, aged 63, which occurred at his home in Cayuga street on Thursday was a shock and surprise to this community. He had been afflicted with Bright's disease for some time but kept about his business and without complaining until about six weeks prior to his death when he was confined to his home and upon calling a physician it was discovered that he was in the last stages of the disease.

He was a son of Nathan Cole, Jr., and was born in Trenton, Oneida county, on February 25, 1845. The following year his parents removed to Fulton where the father engaged in the furniture and undertaking business. The decease followed the father's profession, conducting a business in Oneida street for many years. He united with the Baptist church in January, 1863, and was made a deacon in 1883; he also filled the office of clerk of the church for twenty-six years. He was always deeply interested in temperance work, and in politics he was an uncompromising Republican. He was united in marriage in January, 1868, with L. DeEtte Bassett, who survives him.

The funeral services were held from the late home on Saturday, the Rev. J. G. York officiating. Interment was made in Mt. Adnah. The widow who is the sole surviving immediate relative, has the sympathy of the community in her bereavement.

The death of James Printy, aged 73, a veteran of the Civil war, occured on Tuesday. The funeral was held on Wednesday and interment was made in St. Mary's Two daughters survive.

Mrs. Julia C. Worden died on Tuesday, April 14, at the home of her son, Mr. Edward M. Worden, in Salem, Va. The deceased was a former resident of this city and will be recalled by the older residents. Mrs. H. P. Allen is a granddaughter.

Card of Thanks.

To the Editor: May I, through your columns, express my heartfelt gratitude to all organizations and friends who, by sympathy, deeds of kindness and floral offerings, assisted me during the illness and death of my husband, the Rev. John N. Fulford.

Mrs. John N. Fulford.

A BEAUTIFUL TRIBUTE.

The members of the Ministers' Association of Fulton, N. Y., having learned with sorrow of the death of our beloved fellow member and associate, Rev. John N. Fulford, of this city, desire to express to his family, and friends, and to the public, our sincere sense of loss in the sudden departure of our brother and co-laborer and regret that we can no longer share the inspiration of his wise counsel, warm love and the pure example of his earnest and devoted life.

We rejoice in the memory of his long and useful period of activity, his hearty sympathy with all that was high and noble and his faithfulness in adherence to the principle of righteousness which he had so long espoused, and for which he had given his service in the nation as well as the Kingdom of Truth. While in his own life he enjoyed the renewal of strength, the continuance of blessing and growth in Christian experience, we appreciate the fact that he was permitted to bear fruit in advancing years and to see the work of the Lord prosper in his hand.

It was but a few hours before his departure that our Association received his loving greeting and his name was borne with tender affection to the throne of grace. Later still a representative of our body found him strong in faith giving glory to God, lifting his prayers for the friends and kingdom he loved, and awaiting the Master's orders with trimmed and burning lamp.

It is not difficult now to think of him walking upon the serene and sunny heights with those who have reached the mountains of myrrh and the hills of frankincense to which in life and teachings he had pointed the way. In this country the sun shineth night and day; wherefore, this was beyond the Valley of the Shadow of Death * * * it was upon the borders of Heaven.

Individually, and as an organization, we shall treasure his words and example, seeking to emulate the sweetness and purity of his life among us.

ENTERTAINMENT COURSE.

The Public Library Course for 1908 and 1909.

The committee of the Current Events Club in charge of the entertainment course, have made an early contract with companies for next season in order that attractions might be secured which were known to be the best of their kind. There can be no mistake about the quality of the following which have been secured. In November: The Hruby (pronounced Ruby) Brothers' Quintet and Miss Gertrude Canfield. It is a company of five brothers ranging in age from twelve to twenty two, sons of Frank Hruby at present director of the Great Western Band. All born musicians who have studied music since they could hold an instrument. The boys are assisted by Miss Canfield, a reader of exceptional ability.

In December: Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth, "The Little Mother of the Prisoners," who is America's greatest woman orator and whose work in connection with the American Volunteers is well known. All money which Mrs. Booth makes from the limited number of lectures she is able to give, goes to the "Hope Mission" which she has been instrumental in establishing.

In January: The Dunbar Company, the highest priced and best male quartet and the only successful bell ringing and novelty company available. This is a very strong attraction.

In February: Elma B. Smith and her company, consisting of a vocal soloist, a violinist and a pianist. Miss Smith is unquestionably the greatest imitator of children, birds and animals now before the public.

Last year's entertainment course cost $365 for the five numbers. The coming season's course of four numbers will cost $405, but they are worth it. It will be the strongest course ever given to the people of Fulton.

275 season tickets, the capacity of the assembly room in the public library building, will be sold at $2 each. Miss Mollie G. Cavanaugh has charge of the canvassing and those desiring may subscribe through her until the required 275 subscribers have been secured. Tickets will be distributed and money collected as soon as possible after October 1st.

FOSTER THEATRE.

The Foster Theatre will re-open on Monday, April 20th, under new management and will give performances twice every day except Sunday —afternoon at 3, evening 8:15, a big show consisting of England's famous moving pictures, illustrated songs by talented singers, new novel and specialty acts, which will please our patrons. An entire change of program will take place on each and every Monday and Thursday. The price of admission, and the best seat in the theatre is ten cents, while at matinees children under 12 years of age, five cents. The program for the opening week of April 20th will be announced later, but it is safe to say that a program has been arranged and will be offered the citizens of this city on the same plan that the company which is operating the Foster Theatre has made successful on a circuit of thirty-two theatres. Our motto is "Your Money's worth and more too."

Your pleasure and comfort is our desire at all times. We want to please you and we know we can, and we will. Please remember the opening date, Monday, April 20th. A big city show for one dime, ten cents, no higher for any seat in the theatre.

Buyers' Mercantile Agency Book for the Free Use of Our Manufacturers and Merchants.

The Mercantile Agency Books for the use of Sellers, giving the names and ratings of all dealers, etc., are universally known and used.

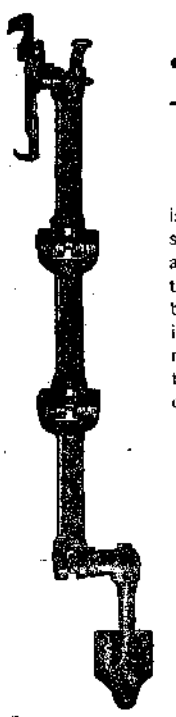
A Mercantile Agency Book arranged for Buyers, enabling the user to instantly find who manufactures anything desired, giving the capital rating of each manufacturer is also very valuable.

Thomas' Register of American Manufacturers and First Hands is the standard index to the American Manufacturing Industries, for the use of Buyers and others, classified so that the user is enabled to instantly find the names, addresses and rating of all manufacturers of or source of supply in any line desired. 2,200 pages, 200,000 names, 33,000 articles and kinds of articles.

It is complete. No charge is made for publishing names and addresses. It should not be confused with any advertising scheme that publishes only those who pay for insertion. It is used by the Government at Washington, by the American Consular service throughout the world, and by the leading manufacturers and merchants in the United States.

When the manufacturers of any line are wanted, it does not pay to spend time looking through papers or making inquiries.

A copy of the Third Annual Edition (September, 1907) has been placed in the public library where it may be consulted.



Musical Treat.

Time and again has Mme. Lillian Nordica, the famous prima donna, who will appear at the Alhambra, Syracuse, N. Y., April 21, sung in London but never under more flattering circumstances than when summoned to appear before the Queen in Windsor on the royal birthday. The work chosen was "Lohengrin," the first of Wagner's operas to be heard by the Queen. Impressed by the demands upon the Elsa as compared with roles by other composers, the Queen kept repeating, even while the other singers were being presented: "How tired Mme. Nordica must be." Later Mme. Nordica was invited to join the royal party, the request not being in the form of a command, which admits of no refusal, and the Queen, with sympathetic kindliness remembered the fatigue she attributed to the singer. As a souvenir of the occasion the Queen presented Mme. Nordica with a decoration in the form of a circle of diamonds surrounding a disc of enameled gold, bearing the royal monogram in diamonds and suspended from a crown of the same jewels. Among other jeweled orders from royalty the singer has had bestowed upon her by the Grand Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha is that of Arts and Sciences, who also confered upon her the title of "Kammersangerin."

Loudon Charlton is the manager of the tour which is to bring Mme. Nordica to Syracuse and the thanks of the entire musical community are due him for the splendid opportunity that he is offering.

"Don't mention it, I beg you," answered the financier, with forced courtesy. "I hope you will sleep now. Good night." Then the two parted and entered their respective rooms.

"Strange," muttered Mr. Renwyck as he pulled the sheet about his chin. "A peculiar lot, these Englishmen. But I dare say I appear just as peculiar to them. He acted so strangely, too, about that check the other night. One hundred thousand dollars! Humph! I wonder if he has a hundred thousand dollars. I begin to doubt it—doubt it exceedingly."

Meanwhile the Texan reached his room, mopped his brow and hunted for his brandy flask. It seemed to him that he wanted a good stiff drink as he wanted nothing else in all the world. He failed to find his flask in its accustomed place and surmised accurately that if he found Woolsey Bills he might strike its trail. The valet's sleeping room was next his own, so without ceremony the master pushed open the door, admitting a flood of light. He did not find his flask, nor did he find his servant either, for the room was deserted, and the bed had not been occupied.

"Ah!" observed the Texan thoughtfully. "Bre'r Fox has changed masters for the second time. Humph! A little awkward to explain—for me, I mean."

On Restmore a heavy silence fell again, which was broken, as before, only by that antique clock and its soft chime as it struck another quarter hour. Then two dim, ghostly figures crept slowly up the stairs and entered Miss Harriet Renwyck's room. In a little while they were safely tucked in bed and lay whispering in each other's arms.

"Oh, Harriet, darling," breathed Miss Imogene, "wasn't he—er—just splendid when he told that bouncer? I don't believe he's an Englishman at all."

"Nonsense!" the other laughed. "Of course he's an Englishman. Now try to go to sleep."

It would be discourteous in the extreme to state that a lady had been guilty of another "bouncer," but at any rate Miss Harriet clasped a drowsy little figure to her breast, thought of Texas and smiled into the darkness happily.

CHAPTER XIX.

AT 7 o'clock the next morning Mr. Renwyck had a telephone call from his partner in New York. It was of such a serious nature as to cause him to dress hurriedly and leave without waiting for his breakfast, though Mrs. Renwyck followed him to the front veranda, begging him to wait for a cup of coffee.

"No; haven't time!" he snapped as he climbed into the waiting trap. "Go along, Walters. Whoa! Wait a minute. By George," he exclaimed, with a frown of annoyance, "I forgot about those jewels!" He fumbled in his pocketbook, produced a memorandum and handed it to his wife.

"Julia," he said hurriedly, "this is the combination of the safe. Telephone to Michael, will you, and ask him to come over before he leaves for town? Get him to unlock the safe and bring the diamonds with him to my office. I'll put them in the safety deposit vault. There—haven't time to explain any more. My train is due in three minutes. Goodby. Now, Walters, let Molly have her head."

In a moment the trap had whirled through the open gates, and Mrs. Renwyck, marveling at what could take her lord away so suddenly, turned and went into the house, where she obediently telephoned her husband's message to her brother Michael.

Breakfast was late that morning, as two at least of the inmates of the house showed unmistakable signs of loss of sleep.

"How lovely!" exclaimed Miss Harriet as she glanced through a delicately tinted note, then turned to Richard. "Such a dear friend of mine is coming out this morning to stay over Sunday. I know you will be charmed to meet her."

"Delighted, I'm sure," drawled Richard indolently.

"Who is it, Harriet?" Mrs. Renwyck asked.

"Nellie Sempton."

Richard's indolence departed instantly. The name recalled several things.

"Er—beg pardon," he questioned, "is the lady rather tall and blond—ah—twenty-two or thereabout, with a ripping figure?"

"Why, yes!" cried Imogene delightedly. "Do you know her?"

"Well, no, not exactly," returned the smiling Texan. "She has—er—been pointed out to me." He screwed in his monocle and picked up a letter from Lord Croyland's mail which lay beside his plate. "I'm awfully sorry that I shan't be here when Miss Sempton arrives, but I find I shall have to go to New York this morning. Too bad, really."

"But you haven't even read your letters yet," chirruped Miss Imogene.

"Can you tell from the outside that it's some horrid business?"

Richard nodded sadly and tapped a formidable official envelope.

"Too true," he murmured. "It's business and, as you aptly express it, horrid."

In one sense the Texan spoke the plain, unvarnished truth, for business of an unpleasant character called him in several directions. He had entirely forgotten until the mention of Miss Sempton's name recalled it to him that he had a smashed automobile on his hands, not to mention a prospective lawsuit from a justly irate farmer. Then, too, it would be most awkward to have the charming Miss Sempton extend her hand and say, with a most engaging smile: "How do you do, Mr. Peter Wilson? I knew you were not a chauffeur. How many other names do you happen to possess?" Yes, "horrid business" called him away from Irvington at once and bade fair to keep him away until Miss Sempton departed.

"Woolsey and I," he muttered to his inward, disgusted self, "must seek seclusion in some faroff, happier clime."

Breakfast was scarcely over when Mr. Corrigan was announced. He entered with a cheery good morning to every one, then went with Mrs. Renwyck to the library. Miss Schermerly strove with all her crafty wiles to lure Lord Croyland away for a morning walk and a chat on the superior advantages of being a nobleman, but the nobleman in question met guile with guile and pleaded an excuse of having to catch the next train. He said he would walk to the station, especially as on foot he might dodge Miss Sempton if she happened to come earlier than expected, and started across the lawn.

On the lawn he lingered in the hope of seeing Miss Harriet once more, for he did not wish to leave Irvington without confessing his deception and declaring himself her humble worshiper from the Lone Star State. He had almost given up hope when he spied her coming from the house toward him. She, too, had been dodging difficulties in the path of a meeting with him alone. And now as she tripped across the grass he saw in her eyes a light, on her cheeks a color which caused his heart to bound, while the warm blood tingled through his veins.

"Lord Croyland," she said, "before you go I want to thank you for what you did for Imogene and me last night. It was splendid of you to take the blame, and"—

"But how do you know what I did?" he asked her laughingly.

"Because," she stammered, "we—we didn't go upstairs when you told us. We stayed in the billiard room and—and listened." She finished with a violent blush, which made her irresistible in the Texan's biased eyes.

"Oh!" he laughed. "I see."

Miss Harriet did not join in his merriment. She looked up earnestly and asked:

"Why didn't you tell the whole truth and explain to father?"

"Explain to father!" he echoed, mistaking her meaning. "Good Lord! How could I?"

Miss Harriet nodded, smiling happily.

"I think I understand. You wanted to save her?"

"Of course," answered Richard, relieved again. Really, these sudden shocks almost broke his nerve.

"Now, tell me one thing more," continued the girl. "You are not an Englishman. I suspected it before, and last night I knew it. Who are you?"

Richard gasped and took a backward step, while the hot blood mounted to his cheeks and tinged the dusky bronze.

"Who am I?" he repeated earnestly. "A man who loves you with his heart and mind and soul—a man who has deceived you only that he might be near you, to touch your hand and look into your eyes—a man who has followed you from Tex"—

"Harriet, Harriet!" came a cry of shrill distress from the front veranda. "Harriet, the diamonds! They are gone!"

Mrs. Renwyck clung limp and disheveled to the railing, while Mr. Corrigan strove to hold her up and at the same time murmur words of comfort in her ear, a task in which he was greatly handicapped by shortness of stature and disproportionate rotundity.

"Gone?" cried Harriet, whitening to the lips. "Gone where?"

Mrs. Renwyck immediately forgot family traditions, etiquette and everything else beside the crushing loss and her rising Irish blood.

"Don't be a fool!" she shrilled. "How do I know where they've gone? Do you think I've got 'em in my pocket? Police! Fire!"

With this dramatic finish Mrs. Renwyck promptly fainted, sinking down into a huddled heap and dragging little Uncle Michael with her.

The household was already in an uproar. With Richard's assistance Mrs. Renwyck was laid upon a sofa, and smelling salts were administered in such generous quantities that she returned to consciousness with gasping protests and gusts of rage. Miss Schermerly offered consolation in the form of various questions and was so offended by the answers she received that she retired to her room in righteous indignation. Miss Cliffendon crept close to the edge of the circle of excitement and listened as one in a frozen trance. Both she and Miss Harriet, to say nothing of Richard himself, had worked out a solution of the problem by the simple process of deduction, and three hearts sank to the utmost depths of despondency. Uncle Michael added to the depression by a cheerful statement which gave at least a clew to the robbery.

"I'm not a bit surprised at this," he said, "and it's all Jacob's fault for being so puffed up and bullet headed," which was truly an Irish mixture of adjectives.

"What do you mean?" demanded Mrs. Renwyck, instantly taking the side of her abused husband.

"Why, simply this," said the little lawyer coolly. "There was a cock eyed vagrant nosing around the place several days ago, and I warned Jacob to place a detective in the house while the diamonds were in this toy safe of his, but he wouldn't do it."

Harriet flushed and bit her lips. Imogene gave evidence of approaching hysteria, and Richard listened, while ice cold shivers frolicked up and down his spine. The Texan could place the "cock eyed vagrant," and also feared he could place the confederate who had evidently helped himself to the contents of the safe while Mr. Roderick Fitzgeorge engaged the ladies in the billiard room. It was all so simple, so pitifully simple! The diamonds were gone, and so was Woolsey Bills.

Richard's trip to New York was now out of the question. He must stay and face the music, though the price he must pay the fiddler was a question he dared not dwell upon. He could only hope Miss Sempton would not appear until it was all over. He was now burning to get hold of Harriet and confess everything and then to shout out the truth from the very housetop.

While not personally responsible for the loss of the diamonds, the Texan was morally responsible in view of the fact that he had allowed Lord Croyland's valet to remain under the Renwyck roof when he knew in advance that the man was not a character to be trusted. The real master had wanted him discharged for theft, and while it never dawned on Richard that Bills might filch from any one except his master—the lawful prey of many of his kind—still it was his duty to have discharged the rascal without delay. Truly, the humor of the situation was in much the same condition as the missing gems.

With a very solemn face, but with a good deal of inward pleasure, Uncle Michael telephoned to Mr. Renwyck. He had given sound advice, and Jacob had derided him, hooted at him, laughed him to scorn and had finally suggested that he look under the bed for a burglar. Mr. Corrigan by all Christian precepts should have been sorry for his brother-in-law, but the plump little Irishman was not. On the contrary, he was glad with a gladness which filled him with delirious chuckles when no one was looking. He was even with Jacob at last! He meant to be more even before the day was out.

"Hello!" he called over the wire. "Yes, I want Mr. Renwyck! Hello, Jake! Good morning! Who—yes, Corrigan! Me! Don't you know my musical voice? Yes, yes, of course I know you are busy! But, say! I've got something interesting to tell you. You remember that fellow with a cast in his eye—the one you laughed at me about? What? That's it—the tramp." Here Mr. Corrigan covered the mouthpiece with his hand and released the merriment that was struggling with his insides. Then he took up his joyful narrative. "I looked under the bed for him last night, but he wasn't there. Do you know why? He slept in your little toy safe, got up early and took your diamonds with him. No! Honestly, it isn't a joke. I'm telling you the whole miserable, wretched truth. Your safe has been robbed. Cockeye made a clean sweep. What? What? Oh, Jacob, Jacob, you shouldn't talk like that! It's against the rules of the Telephone Exchange."

The rest of the conversation was more serious. Mr. Corrigan advised his brother-in-law of the true condition of affairs and offered to do any thing in his power to help matters along. Mr. Renwyck, while very much engaged over his harbor scheme, concluded to drop business for the morning and hasten out to Irvington with two experienced detectives.

"Good!" applauded Uncle Michael. "The more the merrier. I believe I can furnish these gentlemen with several valuable clews. I hate to say 'Told you so!' Jake, but if you had listened to me you—what? No, I won't. It's hot enough out here. Goodby."

When Mr. Corrigan left the telephone he found that Harriet and Imogene had gone upstairs. The latter young lady had been unable to restrain her emotions longer, and in the seclusion of her chamber she gave vent to every species of protechnic despair to which the tender age of nineteen is subject. Miss Renwyck was the busiest Samaritan on record, and her ministrations to the stricken one made a word with Richard out of the question for the present.

Mr. Van der Awe perceived that his inamorata was profoundly agitated, but why he could not imagine. Therefore he paced solemnly up and down the hall, looking more like a funeral director than ever. Richard sat on the front porch, smoking one cigarette after another furiously, when Mr. Corrigan came out and accosted him.

"Hello, your lordship! What is your British opinion on hornets' nests in general?"

"The inmates thereof come at you endwise and all at once," observed the young man grimly. "In my humble opinion things are going to wake up presently."

"Right!" laughed the merry little lawyer with what Richard could not but feel was ill timed merriment. "My esteemed brother-in-law is fairly boiling. He's on his way out here now with two policemen. I'm glad you're not mixed up in this particular phase of the comedy, Dicky, boy. You have somewhat of a load to carry as it is."

"Um!" grunted Richard, staring absently at the gravel path.

Mr. Corrigan eyed him sympathetically and started away. Richard was about to ask permission to accompany him, intending again to lay bare his heart to his counsel, but at that instant his attention was arrested in an entirely different direction.

Woolsey Bills was coming toward him from the direction of the railroad station.

THE OLD FASHIONED WAY OF BANKING has been ours for twenty years. No matter what others may do we do not change. The old fashioned way of doing things in banking has always proven to be the best. The old time friendships, the old home, the old memories and the things we love, and the old fashioned bank we never can forget. Some folks change their ideas or methods from the old to the new once in a while, but somehow after a time they wander back to the old home where they feel acquainted, where the hand clasp is firm, the look from the eye is straight, and they feel secure. In these days of speculation and extravagance, of storm and stress, it behoves every man and woman to stop and think. Saving is but a habit, acquire it, and teach it to your children and your friends.

New York Republicans Meet in State Convention.

IN CARNEGIE HALL, NEW YORK

M. Linn Bruce Temporary Chairman. He Eulogizes Roosevelt and Hughes—Delegates to Chicago Will Be Pledged to Support Governor For President.

New York, April 11.—The Republican state convention, called for the purpose of electing four delegates at large to the national convention in Chicago June 16, met in Carnegie hall under peaceful skies. A couple of little contests from up state counties, Seneca and Niagara, were the only clouds in the otherwise cerulean political canopy, and it was expected that they would be speedily dissipated by the committee on credentials. Everything pointed to the prompt and unanimous nomination of four delegates to Chicago pledged to support Governor Charles Evans Hughes as long as his name should remain before the convention. These delegates were expected to be General Stewart L. Woodford, president of the National Hughes league; President Jacob Gould Schurman of Cornell university, a firm friend of the governor; former Mayor Seth Low of New York, who is devoted to the Hughes cause, and Frederick R. Hazard of Syracuse, an intimate associate of Governor Hughes and a classmate of his at Brown university. State Senator Horace White was regarded as a possible delegate in place of Frederick Hazzard, but as Senator White and Mr. Hazzard are fellow townsmen Syracuse was assured in any event of having an official representative in the Coliseum on June 16. Herbert Parsons, chairman of the New York county Republican committee and generally considered the personal representative of President Roosevelt, will go to Chicago as a delegate from the Thirteenth district. State Chairman Woodruff and other leaders will also go as district delegates.

Old Timers Present.

Before the convention met old time and new time politicians gathered in and about Carnegie hall and in other rendezvouses to discuss such momentous questions as the probable choice of the national convention as banner bearer of the G. O. P., the problem of what the Democrats would do at Denver, the defeat of Governor Hughes' anti race track gambling bills and the passing of the Fifth Avenue hotel. For the first time in the memory of most of the delegates the Fifth Avenue hotel had no voice in the preconvention proceedings. The seats of the "amen corner" in their new site in the Hoffman House looked homesick and unhappy. As the hour for the falling of the gavel approached the hall named after the Laird of Skibo quickly woke up, and leaders of various degrees appeared, surrounded by knots of delegates animatedly debating political issues small and great. The long, lank form of Herbert Parsons, the rotundity of Timothy L. Woodruff, the suave physiognomy of William Barnes, Jr., of Albany, drew crowds rivaling those which encompassed the smiling ex-minister to Spain, General Woodford, the bespectacled former Governor Frank S. Black and ex-Governor and ex-Chairman Benjamin B. Odell, with a cigar aslant between his bulldog jaws. Taft men were not wanting in the growing assemblage, but they were not obstreperous, and the general atmosphere was wholly favorable to the favorite sonship of Charles E. Hughes. The victory of the governor's opponents in the matter of the race track bills was believed to have strengthened the governor with the people at large.

Bruce Temporary Chairman.

The convention was called to order promptly at 11 by State Chairman Woodruff, who explained the meeting's object, the election of delegates at large and the nomination of thirty-nine presidential electors. Former Lieutenant Governor M. Linn Bruce, who is very likely to be the Republican candidate for governor next fall, was nominated as temporary chairman and elected by acclamation. Judge Bruce was vociferously cheered as he was escorted to the platform. Taking the chair, he addressed the assemblage at length, eulogizing the national administration and characterizing Mr. Roosevelt as the "greatest president since Lincoln." He reviewed the history of the Republican party, pointing to its achievements in peace and war and predicting a glorious future for the republic under the wings of the Republican eagle. Judge Bruce closed with a glowing tribute to the personality of Governor Hughes, "a worthy successor of Theodore Roosevelt." His speech in full follows:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Convention—I thank you for the honor of presiding over your preliminary deliberations.

As accredited representatives of the Republican electors of the state of New York we are assembled under fortunate conditions to give expression to their will and effect to their purposes.

Since the return of the Republican party to power in 1897 our country has enjoyed an extraordinary degree of prosperity. No nation has ever experienced such a rapid development of resources or such a phenomenal increase of wealth. Unfortunately this led to a riot of speculation, which resulted in an over extension of credit and threatened financial and industrial disaster. Prices continued to advance until they became well nigh prohibitive.

While we were progressing so rapidly other countries were suffering general financial and industrial depression.

That business conditions here were not sooner affected by these causes which seemed worldwide was due largely to the sound basis upon which our monetary and economic systems rest.

In the midst of this prosperity and of this peril, when the tide of business was at the flood and credit at almost the breaking point, it became necessary for the representative bankers of this city to drive from the banking business a group of unscrupulous stock gamblers and adventurers, who had gained control of various chains of financial institutions and were prostituting them to selfish and unlawful purposes in absolute disregard of the rights and interests of stockholders and depositors.

Stock Gamblers Driven From Control.

This courageous and vigorous action on the part of our bankers produced a feeling of alarm as to the integrity of all financial institutions, which quickly spread throughout the entire country, resulting in a sudden withdrawal of money from the banks, the calling of loans, the suspension of credit and of business activity. The renovation was quick, thorough and effectual. Mistrust soon gave way to confidence, and already the wheels and the spindles are beginning to turn again and upon every hand are the evidences of a resumption of normal trade conditions.

Such a vigorous and thorough housecleaning in this the financial center of the country would necessarily occasion some disturbance of the public mind; but, coming in conjunction with worldwide depression and business distress in other lands, which must soon have been felt here, together with our overstrained credit, it precipitated a panic. The work, however, was necessary, and the result wholesome and healthgiving. The business privateers have been eliminated and the integrity of our banks, state and national, and the honesty and fidelity of those who manage their affairs, assured.

There may be some who will insist that the panic was the direct result of the policy of the government in its enforcement of the interstate commerce and antitrust laws.

If this be true, then our prosperity does not rest upon a sound basis. No national growth or development is either sound or wholesome which is not founded upon justice, honesty and square dealing. Vigorous, impartial and fearless enforcement of law never produced a panic anywhere except among those who were either violating the law or seeking to evade it.

The equality of all men before the law is the basic principle upon which all republicanism rests. It not only guarantees to all the equal protection of the law, but it prescribes an equal and impartial enforcement of the law.

Under it none are so humble as to be beneath the law; none so powerful as to be beyond it.

Roosevelt Inspiring Leader.

Upon this great principle our fathers founded the Republican party. It is the cardinal tenet of our faith, and its highest expression and most complete fulfillment is exemplified in the person and in the policies of the most fearless, the most aggressive, the most inspiring leader that the Republican party has known since Lincoln—Theodore Roosevelt.

Never in its history has the Republican party possessed in so large a measure the confidence and the reliance of the great masses of the people; never has it been more completely representative of sound public opinion; never has it stood more firmly for all the rights of all the people; never has it been more faithful to its principles or more loyal to its highest standards and to its best traditions.

For nearly half a century, with but temporary interruptions, it has administered the national government, and for twelve years it has been in full control in both the state and the nation.

It is not necessary nor shall I take time to contrast the condition of the country when the Republican party assumed control with its condition today. Such a comparison would show a record of progress and achievement under the fostering influence of the wise and beneficent policies of our party which is well nigh beyond comprehension.

What Republicans Have Done.

Lest they forget, let us remind the young men who are soon for the first time to exercise the right of franchise that it was the Republican party which carried to a successful conclusion the civil war, that preserved the Union and freed the bondmen; that it originated and wrote into the constitution the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth amendments; that it was the Republican party which enacted the reconstruction acts, the homestead act, the civil service reform act, the act for the resumption of specie payments, the protective tariff, the gold standard, the antitrust laws, the interstate commerce laws, the reciprocity acts, the immigration laws, the pure food law, the meat inspection law, the irrigation laws; that it was the Republican party which gave self government to Cuba and placed the Philippines, Porto Rico and Hawaii under the American flag; that it was the Republican party which opened the door of opportunity to the American wage earner and to the American farmer; which has protected American labor upon the basis of the American standard of manhood and living from unequal competition with the underpaid and oppressed of less favored lands; which has preserved the American market for the products of American mills and of American farms; which established a currency based upon the world's highest standard; which has recognized the right of labor to organize for protection against oppression and has recognized the equal right of employers to organize for protection against unreasonable demands; which inaugurated a system of internal improvements which has opened up the great waterways and the great transcontinental lines upon which the commerce of the nation is transported; which has preserved the forests and watered the waste places; which has protected the Pacific coast against an invasion of oriental labor and which has successfully insisted upon the open door in China, securing to all nations access upon equal terms to the great market of the east.

Greatest Achievement In History.

As a result of its policies we are building a navy powerful enough for our defense and for the protection of our sister republics in South America against European aggressions; the Panama canal is fast becoming a reality and is no longer a dream; our fleet, dispatched to the Pacific, has cemented our cordial relations of friendship with the republics of South America. It has provided liberally for those who fought in defense of the flag and the widows and the orphans of those who paid the full measure of devotion. It fought and won the battle for fair play and square dealing and has established a new standard of public service. It was Theodore Roosevelt, a Republican president, who ended the war between Russia and Japan, one of the greatest achievements in the history of statesmanship.

In a word, for half a century the Republican party has guided the affairs and written the history of the nation.

It has indeed shown itself to be a constructive party, a do something party, a party of principles, of moral convictions and of moral courage, a party at all times representative of the best thought and highest purposes of the American people.

In truth, we may say that "the past at least is secure," an earnest of a still more resplendent future.

And there is to be neither halting nor hesitation. It purposes to go forward, true to its principles and guided by those policies which have made it the most efficient agency for the administration of government under free institutions that the world has ever known.

In this spirit it addresses itself with all the vigor of its indomitable leader to the problems of today.

I would be both ungenerous and unjust were I to fail to acknowledge the debt of gratitude we owe to that host of Democrats who in every crisis have joined hands with the Republicans in defense of the nation. Without their aid many of the victories I have mentioned could not have been won, and to their courage and patriotism I cheerfully extend our tribute of appreciation.

Nearly a decade has passed since the present tariff law was enacted. Since then great progress has been made in manufacturing and great changes in the cost of production both here and abroad.

Readjustment of the Tariff.

The Republican party believes that the time has arrived for a readjustment of tariff schedules.

It has been the policy of our party ever since its organization to revise the schedules from time to time as changes in the business conditions require. Revision of schedules does not mean nor does it imply any revision or impairment of the protective principle. The Republican party stands for the American system; that customs duties should be imposed primarily for the purpose of protecting the wage earner and the farmer against competition with the underpaid of other lands and that the duty imposed should equal the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad, based upon our standard of manhood and of living. With loyalty to this article of our faith, the party proposes after an adequate investigation of the facts to enter immediately upon the work of revision and to accomplish it.

We believe that the navy should be increased until it is adequate to insure peace at home and a proper respect for our rights abroad.

We cannot agree with those well meaning persons who assume that because war is wrong in principle and hell in practice therefore our armament should be minimized.

We favor effective arbitration, and at the recent peace conference at The Hague our representatives, two of whom are honored citizens of our own state, were foremost in their advocacy of this principle.

So long, however, as the armed powers refuse to assent to effective arbitration or to a general disarmament war is at all times possible, and so long as war is possible all experience hath shown that it is the part of wisdom and of economy and essential to maintenance of peace to be adequately armed for self protection.

The Republican party stands for the largest liberty of the individual and is opposed to every form of socialism.

The individual is the unit of society and of the state, and any system which limits his attainments or restrains his full and free development or denies him the right to possess and to enjoy undisturbed the fruits of his labor is contrary to the principles of Republicanism.

It believes in government regulation of public utilities to the end that their obligations to the public shall be fully and faithfully observed, but it is opposed to either government ownership or government operation.

It believes that within proper limits and under proper governmental regulation combinations of capital and of enterprises which do not tend to monopoly or to the impairment of competition are necessary and should be permitted.

It believes in a national employers' liability law, that adequate compensation may be made by the government under proper laws to persons who are injured while in the government service. It believes in a national child labor law and the passage of a national corrupt practices act that will prevent corporations from lending aid or support to any political party and in currency laws which will meet the demands of trade.

These are but a few of the vital national questions which are uppermost in the minds of the people and which our party is endeavoring to solve.

I am aware that this is not the proper time to discuss state issues. They will be fully reviewed at the nominating convention which will assemble in the fall. I cannot refrain, however, from referring briefly to a record both animating and inspiring.

Fourteen years ago the people of the state placed the Republican party in control of the state government. It found the treasury empty, the people burdened with a state debt and with a state tax, the institutions of the state inadequately equipped and improvidently managed and the administrative departments of the government disorganized, inefficient and extravagant. There was not only no surplus in the treasury with which to meet the actual needs of the government, but a deficiency aggregating hundreds of thousands of dollars for money borrowed by the outgoing Democratic administration to meet the ordinary expenses of government. Rarely has a party faced conditions so deplorable or problems so difficult.

Morton's Administration Recalled.

Under the energetic, progressive, businesslike administration of Levi P. Morton the various departments of government were at once reorganized, placed upon a sound business basis and rapidly brought to a high state of efficiency. The finances of the state were readjusted and administered in accordance with most approved modern methods. Policies were adopted which looked to the final extinguishment of the state debt and the abolition of the state tax. The penal and eleemosynary institutions of the state were enlarged to meet the requirements of our increasing population and systems of economy and efficiency installed.

Six Republican governors and fourteen Republican legislatures in succession have controlled the affairs of the state, and during this period our progress has been such that today we lead all the states of the nation not only in wealth and population, but in education, in internal improvements, in commerce, in manufacturing, in the promotion of science and of art and in our care for the comfort and the welfare of the helpless and unfortunate.

During that period more than $300,000,000 has been collected and disbursed without the charge that a single dollar has been misappropriated. The state debt has been extinguished, the state tax abolished. Successful and progressive ballot and excise laws have been enacted, internal improvements projected, and under actual construction which call for an expenditure of over $150,000,000; liberal appropriations have been made for the advancement of education, for the development of agriculture, for the promotion of science and for the care of our criminal, deficient and unfortunate classes, and at the close of the last fiscal year there remained in the state treasury a surplus of nearly $14,000,000.

What a record of achievements! What a brilliant contrast with the weak, vacillating, extravagant, inefficient Democratic administrations which preceded it! What a tribute to the energy, intelligence and patriotism of the six great governors and the fourteen Republican legislatures under whom it has been accomplished.

For the past fifteen months several of the departments of the state government have been in the control of the Democratic party. We invite a close scrutiny and comparison of the present administration of these offices with any of the administrations which have preceded it since 1894. We ask whether or not it was the part of wisdom to fail to continue tried and faithful servants whose integrity and efficiency had been attested and to place the affairs of these important departments in the hands of those who now administer them.

A Tribute to Hughes.

Two years ago the people called from private life to the governorship one untried in public affairs. His life had been devoted to the practice of his profession, in which he had attained a position of high distinction.

His brilliant service as attorney for the committees of the legislature in the gas investigation and the insurance investigation had attracted the attention and excited the admiration not only of the people of our own state, but of the entire country.

He came to his great office free from political obligations and entanglements. Without reservation he freely and frankly proclaimed his policies and announced his intentions to the people. He entered upon his administration with the same intelligent purpose, deliberate judgment, courageous spirit and indomitable energy which made him a leader at the ablest bar in the United States.

Without becoming a participant in party management he summoned the party to a renewed devotion to its principles and to a clear realization of its responsibilities. He has maintained a high standard of public service and a high test of efficiency.

He has insisted that legislative or executive action to be intelligent and just must be predicated upon established facts and that therefore adequate investigation must precede action.

He has freely discussed public questions before the people and has not hesitated to appeal to them for their approval and support. The response has always been instant and unmistakable. He has insisted that it is the duty of Republicans professing allegiance to a party of moral ideas and patriotic purposes to support measures that are for the moral betterment and moral uplift of our people.

His administration has received not only the unqualified approval of his own party, but the commendation of the people of the state without regard to political affiliations.

As investigator and as governor he has profoundly impressed the people of the entire country.

It was natural that his party should look to him as one worthy to receive the highest honor within the gift of the people. Determined, however, that no suspicion of ambition should influence his administration as governor, he persistently refused to become a candidate; but, yielding finally to an overwhelming demand, without fear and without hesitation he boldly and freely declared his views upon national questions. Upon his record as a citizen, as a public servant and as a Republican we present him for the thoughtful consideration of the party.

New York gave the nation Theodore Roosevelt, and she offers a worthy successor in the person of Charles E. Hughes.

Mr. Bruce's address was received with great favor by the convention, which applauded particularly his references to President Roosevelt and Governor Hughes. Committees on credentials, permanent organization and resolutions were then appointed, and the convention took a recess to permit the committees to formulate their reports. Representative James Schoolcraft Sherman of Utica will be permanent chairman of the convention.

The Story of a Medicine.

Its name—"Golden Medical Discovery" was suggested by one of its most important and valuable ingredients—Golden Seal root.

Nearly forty years ago, Dr. Pierce discovered that he could, by the use of pure, triple-refined glycerine, aided by a certain degree of constantly maintained heat and with the aid of apparatus and appliances designed for that purpose, extract from our most valuable native medicinal roots their curative properties much better than by the use of alcohol, so generally employed. So the now world-famed "Golden Medical Discovery," for the cure of weak stomach, indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver, or biliousness and kindred derangements was first made, as it ever since has been, without a particle of alcohol in its make-up.

A glance at the full list of its ingredients, printed on every bottle-wrapper, will show that it is made from the most valuable medicinal roots found growing in our American forests. All these ingredients have received the strongest endorsement from the leading medical experts, teachers and writers on Materia Medica who recommend them as the very best remedies for the diseases for which "Golden Medical Discovery" is advised.

A little book of these endorsements has been compiled by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., and will be mailed free to any one asking same by postal card, or letter addressed to the Doctor as above. From these endorsements, copied from standard medical books of all the different schools of practice, it will be found that the ingredients composing the "Golden Medical Discovery" are advised not only for the cure of the above mentioned diseases, but also for the cure of all catarrhal, bronchial and throat affections, accompanied with catarrhal discharges, hoarseness, sore throat, lingering, or hang-on-coughs, and all those wasting affections which, if not promptly and properly treated are liable to terminate in consumption. Take Dr. Pierce's Discovery in time and persevere in its use until you give it a fair trial and it is not likely to disappoint. Too much must not be expected of it. It will not perform miracles. It will not cure consumption in its advanced stages. No medicine will. It will cure the affections that lead up to consumption, if taken in time.

officers were the matter of proper exits to lodge rooms and tenement houses, and also notices recently given to the Board of Education to provide additional exits at the schools.

That said article leads the public to believe that Mr. Schnur, Deputy Factory Inspector, was acting in an official capacity when inspecting the theatre and further leads the public to believe that he was to report to some State department or officer.

The following letter from Mr. John Williams, Commissioner of Labor, shows clearly that Mr. Schnur was exceeding his authority and not officially employed in inspecting the theatre, and there is no department or officer to whom he was to report condition of the theatre:

Messrs. J. M. & C. E. Foster,
Fulton, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

Your letter of the 8rd is received. It appears that Assistant Factory Inspector Henry L. Schnur of this department, had occasion to visit Fulton on official business, and that while there it was necessary for him to confer with the health officer. Dr. Russell requested Mr. Schnur to examine the theatre, but he was informed that the Department of Labor had no authority in the premises, therefore he could not consider the subject officially. He, however, did visit the place and expressed his personal opinion concerning the safety of the building in question.

I desire to assure you that this department will not knowingly lend its aid to the consummation of an improper purpose. Had Mr. Schnur presumed to act in any way as an official having authority in the premises, I would not hesitate to emphatically disapprove of his course, but it must be obvious to you that I cannot take exception to the expression of personal opinion by one of my subordinates, and especially is this true in view of the fact that the health officer was distinctly advised by Mr. Schnur that he had no authority in the premises, and what he said was merely the expression of his personal views.

JOHN WILLIAMS.
Commissioner of Labor.

In a conversation with Mr. C. E. Foster on April 11th, Mr. Rigley of the Board of Health, stated that he was not aware of the Board having taken any action about the closing of the theatre. He expressed his disapproval of the actions of Health Officer Russell. Mr. Charles Bennett of the Board of Health, in conversation with Mr. Foster said that the actions of Russell were not only unknown to him, but not done by authority given by the Board of Health. He expressed thorough disapproval of same.

Messrs. J. M. & C. E. Foster wish to say to the public that they have in the last two years spent $4,000 on the theatre, putting same in safe and sanitary condition for the public, as well as making it practical to handle first-class attractions. The theatre has been equipped with an entirely new electric system, and fire apparatus, all of which has been inspected and approved by the Board of Underwriters, Fire Insurance Companies.

The reason the theatre is not opened is because the management had closed for the season. They can open at any time they wish, and Health Officer Russell can not prevent it, because he has no jurisdiction in the premises.

The theatre owners will be pleased to listen to any suggestions from any competent authority pertaining to the safety of the public at any and all times.

Albany, N. Y., April 13, 1908.

Messrs. J. M. & C. E. Foster,
Fulton, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

Your letter of the 8th was duly received. I have been absent from this office for several days, hence this delay in replying to it.

When our Mr. Schnur went to Fulton it was on official business of this department. While there he met Dr. Russell. At his request Mr Schnur visited the opera house in a purely personal way. His official visit had absolutely nothing to do with the conditions alleged to exist in said opera house. Mr. Schnur's remarks to Dr. Russell in relation to the opera house were gratuitous and unofficial, but it appears that the health officer took advantage of the situation, and when the matter was reported, Schnur's official title was included ostensibly for the purpose of giving the statement additional weight.

I do not need to be told by you that it does not come within the province of the Department of Labor to take any part in "political controversies," and I am entirely satisfied that Mr. Schnur had no knowledge of any such controversy in this particular instance.

I want to add that I am not seeking to justify the course of our representative in permitting himself to be drawn into this controversy, but inasmuch as it appears that he was wholly innocent of improper intents, I do not feel that I am called to do more than express to him personally, as I have already done, my view that it is difficult for a public officer to disassociate his personal view from the responsibilities of his official position, and that hence the obligation rests upon every official to be circumspect when dealing with matters that do not come within the purview of his authority.

Yours very truly,
JOHN WILLIAMS,
Commissioner of Labor.

Justice Watson M. Rogers on Monday, in Supreme Court, on motion of Herbert J. Fanning, attorney for C. Earl Foster, and John M. Foster, owners of the Foster Theatre, issued a writ of certiorari, directed to Robert C. Scott, C. R. Bennett and J. W. Rigley, as members of the Board of Health, demanding of them to make a return to the court within twenty days, of the proceedings had by the board in regard to placing a spitting notice on the Foster Theatre, so that errors of the board, as alleged in the petition on which the writ was granted, may be reviewed and corrected.

An order was issued also restraining the members of the board from placing, or causing to be placed, a spitting notice on the front doors of the theatre until the hearing in regard to the writ has been held.

All members of the Board of Health were served with both the writ and the injunction.

Congressional Convention.

The Republican Congressional convention to elect delegates from this district to the Republican National convention was held in Watertown on Thursday and resulted in the selection of Mr. Luther W. Mott, son of Colonel John T. Mott of Oswego, and Senator George H. Cobb of Watertown as delegates, and as alternates Assemblyman C. B. Boshart of Lowville and Mr. Thomas Hunter of this city.

The Hon. P. W. Cullinan of Oswego called the convention to order and nominated Judge Henry E. Turner, Lowville, for chairman.

A. J. Thompson of Jefferson county, and Edgar E. Frost of Oswego county, were secretaries and Frank M. Parker of Jefferson, and B. W. Bennett of Fulton were tellers. On the Oswego delegation P. W. Cullinan was substituted for H. D. Coville and W. B. Baker for W. M. Barker.

Congressman Knapp, Hon. Merrick Stowell and Hon. Isaac L. Hunt, all candidates for Congressional honors, were in the convention.

The delegates were instructed to vote for Governor Hughes for the presidential nomination, as long as he was a candidate. Strong resolutions were adopted eulogistic of President Roosevelt, Governor Hughes, Chairman Knapp and State Committeeman J. T. Mott. It was also the desire of the convention that Colonel Mott be retained as State Committeeman.

Hon. P. W. Cullinan made the speech of the convention and it was a magnificent effort. It paid high, not fulsome, tribute to the Republican party and its leaders, outlined its ideals and prophesied its further continuance in power. Of Congressman Knapp and Colonel Mott he said: We extend to our representative in Congress, Hon. Charles L. Knapp, our expressions of appreciation of the able and careful manner in which he has looked after and guarded the interests of the district. In the discharge of his duties he has shown ability and fidelity and we congratulate him upon the record he has made.

In Colonel John T. Mott we have a wise and able State Committeeman. We record our appreciation of his services in the councils of the party and extend to him our cheerful support for continuation in that office, believing that his character, ability and standing entitle him to such recognition and that his services are required in party councils.

State Committeeman Mott.

On Saturday the delegates to the State convention from this Congressional district met and re-elected Colonel John T. Mott State Committeeman to represent the counties of Jefferson, Oswego and Lewis. The delegates also voted to recommend ex-Mayor Wise of Watertown to the State convention as the presidential elector from this district.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

Future of the Anti-racing Bills Now the One Big Topic.

GOVERNOR HUGHES' PLANS.

The Bearing on Fate of Bills of Special Election of Senator in Forty-seventh District—Extra Session Awkward For Active Politicians.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

Albany, April 16.—There are times when a president finds a congress made up of his own party that proves his most powerful and persistent foe. Governor Hughes has again found that members of his own party do not always unanimously sustain its chief executive in this state. He is an unwilling participant in a merry game called "beat the governor," and he is always the governor.

A battle scarred veteran of many Democratic state and national campaigns remarked to the writer two days ago in the lobby of one of the hotels:

"I have seen many governors come and go, but I never saw a situation exactly like the one that has developed in the Republican party in this state. First the governor when elected evidenced by his appointments and independence that the did not consider that he owed anything to the party organization. Now the party organization does not consider that it owes anything to the governor. If he had played politics from the start he would have got passed more of the legislation he desires. It has all been a game of 'hide and seek.' First the party was 'it' and couldn't find the governor. Now the governor is 'it' and cannot find the party."

The One Big Topic.

The talk frequently heard to the effect that the anti race betting bills have yet a chance to be enacted into law this session has no sound basis. The contingency on which the optimistic backers of the Agnew-Hart bills rest their claims is that at least

ASSEMBLYMAN LOUIS CUVILLIER OF NEW YORK.

[Mr. Cuvillier is an active Democratic member of the assembly from New York city. He is a member of the codes committee and bitterly attacked the anti race track bills on the floor of the assembly. He is known chiefly for the large number of bills that he introduces. He is frequently referred to in the legislature as "the silent man."] one of the eight Republican senators who voted against the governor may be coaxed away from the race track side or that a special election to elect a successor to the late Senator Franchot of Niagara Falls (Forty-seventh senate district) would give the governor another Republican vote pledged to the support of the bills.

But assumptions that because Senator Franchot was a Republican his successor would be a Republican and so probably add another vote to the governor's side are not justified. Franchot was elected by a comparatively small majority, and the Republicans in his district are now hopelessly split, so that the full party vote would not be polled by any candidate. The chances are that the special election in the Forty-seventh district will result in slating another Democrat or a Hearst Independence League and one opposed to the Agnew-Hart bills.

The War is on to the Death.

The governor's determination to fight on for the passage of the Agnew-Hart bills lends a tinge of decided interest to the present situation in the senate. Just when Senator Agnew will make a motion to bring the bills up for another vote is not known. He is certain, however, to do so at the governor's request. It is on this point just now that the attention of most of the legislators is centered. The keenest observers, however, unhesitatingly state that there is absolutely no hope for the enactment of the bills either at this session or at an extra session.

The Plot Against Senator Fancher.

The story of the desperate attempt to prevent Senator Albert T. Fancher of Salamanca from attending the senate session to vote in favor of the Agnew-Hart bills caused great indignation at Albany, for it now develops that the senator's life was actually in danger. It was through his vigilance and determination that he was able to outwit the schemers and arrive at the capitol in ample time to cast his vote in favor of the anti race betting measures.

The senator was decoyed from his hotel by a telephone call from a man who used the names of some of the senator's friends without their assent of course. The person stated that several senators, friends of Mr. Fancher were having a little social gathering and wanted him present. On arriving at the address given Mr. Fancher was asked to wait a few minutes until his friends arrived. While waiting he was offered a glass of wine, which he drank.

The wine was drugged, and it was only by a powerful struggle against the effects of the drug, probably morphine, that the senator was able to finally get control of himself, make his escape from the house and reach the senate chamber in time to vote in favor of Governor Hughes' bills.

The stories circulated to the effect that Senator Fancher was playing poker during the period he was detained in the house in question are not true. The stories were circulated by enemies of the anti race track bills and are looked on as absolutely ridiculous in Albany, where it is well known that Senator Fancher does not play poker. He doesn't know one poker hand from another.

The vote of Lieutenant Governor Chanler on the motion of Senator Raines to table Senator Grady's motion for a reconsideration of the vote by which the bill was beaten gave the anti-racing bills the faint glimmer of life they now have. He voted in the affirmative, with Senators Raines and Agnew's side, and so saved the absolute death of the bills at that time.

Did Chanler Sacrifice Gubernatorial Nomination?

Democratic politicians are enraged at Lieutenant Governor Chanler's vote. They state that his position in the matter has cost him the support of the Democratic party leaders. It is freely predicted in Albany that as a result of his vote Mr. Chanler will lose all chance of obtaining the nomination for governor next fall. Mr. Chanler could have killed the anti-racing bills by either voting against Senator Raines' motion or by remaining silent, not voting at all.

What the Special Message Meant.

It was readily conceded that when Governor Hughes sent his recent special message to the legislature a special session and a call for an election of a senator to fill the Franchot vacancy would follow. "The fight against racing is not ended; it has just begun," is the sense of the governor's statements.

May Take a Recess of Many Months.

When the governor's attention was called to the fact that when the legislature convenes in special session it can, if it desires, take a recess until the latter part of the year be smiled, but would make no comment for publication. If the legislative leaders dare, they will take such a recess, in the opinion of many politicians. But the fact that the majority leader in the senate, John Raines, has supported the governor throughout his anti-racing campaign and that Speaker Wadsworth was largely responsible for the swift passage of the bills through the assembly would seem to indicate that the governor's plans will not be frustrated by these two powerful factors.

The race track lobby is vastly agitated over just how to meet the emergency they will face if a senator pledged to support the Hughes policies is elected from the Forty-seventh district. Undoubtedly they will endeavor to accentuate the factional troubles among the Republicans in the district to contribute to the chances of Democratic success, for they assume that it will be easier to get a Democrat to vote against the governor's desires than a Republican. Unquestionably the race track question will be a vital issue in the election. If both candidates, however, pledge themselves to vote for the Agnew-Hart bills, then the situation will be more acute than ever, for in that event one of the twenty-five senators who voted for the bills will have to be coaxed away, a most difficult proposition. The changing of a vote or the absence of one of the original twenty-five would suffice to defeat the bills.

Date Set For Adjournment.

The legislature is crowding on a full head of steam to be in readiness for adjournment April 23, the date concurred in by both houses. The rules committees are reporting out large number of bills and holding sessions of from three to five hours' duration every day.

During the next few days the last of the banking reform bills will be pushed through and signed by the governor. The reform in banking will undoubtedly prove the greatest accomplishment of the governor this year, and it is one that impartial critics consider highly beneficial to the state at large.

In addition to further banking law amendments, the governor in his recent special message also advocated amendment to the public service commission law, to include jurisdiction of telephone and telegraph companies, changes in the rapid transit law so as to benefit New York city and amendment of the primary election law to provide for direct nominations and an official primary ballot. It is believed that of all these recommendations the one the governor most vitally wants is direct nominations.

Bill Affecting Branches of State Banks.

The assembly banks committee bill requiring branches of state banks to have $100,000 capital in addition to the required capital of the parent institution has been amended to conform to the amendment made to the similar bill affecting the trust companies. This amendment requires that existing branches shall have to conform to the $100,000 requirement, but need not secure the consent of the superintendent of banks to continue in existence. Such consent is made compulsory in the establishment of future branches.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

Arthur Distin spent a few days with his parents last week.

Don't forget to attend the ice cream social at the Weed school house Friday night. An entertainment will be given free with the ice cream at the usual price.

W. W. Gillespie is spending his Easter vacation with his son, Albert, at Burlington, New Jersey.

Fred Simons is the guest of his sister, Mrs. Cass Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. Bern Howard were agreeably surprised last Wednesday night when about thirty of their Grange friends came in to spend the evening.

A farewell party was held last Thursday evening at the home of John Distin.

About twenty of Rev. and Mrs. Pullen's friends helped them spend last Friday evening pleasantly. Rev. Pullen left for conference at Camden Tuesday morning.

Those who attended the Easter exercises at Mount Pleasant Church last Sunday morning felt well repaid for the effort made. Clara Reynolds and Johnnie Myres were worthy of special mention for their singing.

Elizabeth Hunn will begin her school this week.

Mrs. George View and Mrs. George Walker spent several days in Syracuse last week.

Ruth Nelson of Fulton is spending a few days with her aunt, Mrs. Byron Distin.

Mrs. Cole has been entertaining her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Elliott of Syndy, Delaware.

Clarence Skeel has built a new porch on the front of his house.

Mrs. Isaac and Mr. L. Hale attended the Kennedy auction at South Scriba last Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter White spent a few days in Rome last week.

The Grange will confer the third and fourth degrees next Saturday evening and serve a supper.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hall are residing at their old home near Rowlee school house.

Willis Streeter has sold a farm at Phoenix and bought one near Camden.

Misses Hazel Ives and Violet King and Frank Howard and Glen White spent last Sunday at Charlie and Minnie M. Greene's.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Rowlee and family, Fred Whittemore and wife, and Arthur Lewis and family spent Sunday at Delos Distin's.

Mrs. Dell Whittemore has been on the sick list the past week with la grippe.

Barge Canal Matters.

According to J. H. Seibert of the Fulton Contracting company, Syracuse can be connected with Lake Ontario by a deep waterway at least five years ahead of the opening of the barge canal. Mr. Seibert's company is now building the most difficult section of the Syracuse-Oswego division of the new canal. It is one and one-tenth miles long near Fulton and the contract is for $1,200,000.

The canal authorities claim that the Fulton company is endeavoring to block the opening of the Oswego division and they want the company to amend its present plans.

It is the intention of the officers of the company that whenever the canal authorities announce the date for the opening of the canals they will be ready to clear the Oswego division for navigation. They also claim that the right to obstruct that division for a certain period was given them by State Superintendent of Public Works F. C. Stevens on February 13.

Contract 10 is one of the most difficult of the barge canal construction between Syracuse and Oswego. It involves the building of two immeuse locks that will change the level of the division more than twenty-nine feet.

Ely's Cream Balm, has been tried and not found wanting in thousands of homes all over the country. It has won a place in the family medicine closet among the reliable household remedies, where it is kept at hand for use in treating cold in the head just as soon as some member of the household begins the preliminary sneezing or snuffling. It gives immediate relief and a day or two's treatment will put a stop to a cold which might, if not checked, become chronic and run into a bad case of catarrh.

METHODIST CONFERENCE

E. R. Redhead Selected as Lay Delegate to General Conference — General Assignment of Ministers

At the Methodist conference held at Camden last week, Mr. E. R. Redhead of the State street church, this city, was elected a lay delegate to the General Conference to convene in Baltimore, Md., on May 6. Mr. Redhead also presided as chairman of the Lay conference and made a 20 minute speech before a joint convention of the Ministerial and Lay delegates upon "The Relation of the Laity to the Ministry," which occasioned a great deal of favorable comment.

The General Conference of Methodist Episcopal church is the highest tribunal of that church. Delegates from all parts of the world, of all nations and races, are there represented, and all the Bishops of the church are in attendance. The duration of the conference is about a month, and meets once in four years. The coming session promises to be the most important, perhaps, in the history of the church as the Conference there is to elect six or more Bishops, elected Bishops for races to be considered, amusements now forbidden by the church to be discussed, and many other important matters of great interest to Methodists generally.

Mr. Redhead is especially qualified for this important duty of delegate, having been a delegate some sixteen years ago. He has a wide acquaintance among the officials of the church and is familiar with its government and polity as was shown while acting in the capacity of Chairman last week and at the Lay conference four years ago. He also served on important committees in the General Conference held in Omaha when he was a delegate there.

Among the Fultonians who attended the conference were Messrs. H. L. Paddock, W. A. Butts, E. S. Brown, and G. L. Wells from First church, and Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Redhead, Mr. Wm. G. A. Pelley and Mr. E. R. Redhead from the State street church.

Physician's Association Meets.

A meeting of the Physician's and Surgeon's Association was held in the City Hall on Thursday evening. An able paper on "cancer of the stomach" was read before the members by its author, Dr. A. L. Hall.

Drs. Anderson and Hall were appointed a committee to confer with the millers and manufacturers relative to a misunderstanding regarding a recent action of the association as applying to the millers and manufacturers calling physicians when an employe suffered injury while in their employ, and then refusing to pay the total bill for treatment. It is expected that the matter can be adjusted amicably between the contending forces as soon as a thorough understanding is reached.

MARRIED

On April 4, Mr. William Bishop of Lysander and Mrs. Sophia Dann of this city were united in marriage by the Rev. Charles Olmsted.

On April 14, the Rev. J. G. York united Mr. Harley Wright and Miss Blanche VanHooser, all of Fulton, in marriage.

On Tuesday afternoon at the First Methodist parsonage, the Rev. John Richards officiating, Miss Maud Chapman of this city and Mr. Henry Reynolds of Phoenix were united in marriage. The young couple were attended by Miss Bessie Chapman and Mr. Frank H. Dann.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Ephriam Brainard, 209 Maple street, Syracuse, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Thursday at 1 o'clock, when their sister, Miss Alexandra Emily Kelley, daughter of Mrs. Janet B. Kelley of this city, was united in marriage with Mr. John Clayton Peach of Newport News, Virginia, a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Peach, Sr., of Pulaski. The color scheme in the home was green and white and in the decorations it was carried out with smilax, carnations and vinca vines. Miss Emma Fuller of Pulaski presided at the piano, playing appropriate selections during the ceremony and congratulations.

Promptly at one o'clock the bride descended the stairs and was met in the reception hall by the groom, her brother, Mr. Edward F. Kelley of Westerly, Rhode Island; her sister, Miss Janet Kelley, of Fulton, Mr. Wilfred L. Forsyth of Fulton and the Misses Alice Daly, Marguerite Hinman and Rena Naylor of Pulaski. She was gowned in white chiffon batiste over silk with yoke and bands of imported lace and carried an arm boquet with shower of valley lilies. Her only ornament was the groom's gift, a beautiful pendant necklace of amethysts and pearls, the former being the bride's birth stone. The Rev. A. S. Emmons, a former pastor of the bride, was the officiating clergyman and the Episcopal ring service was read.

Following congratulations a five course luncheon was served by Cateress Margaret Barry. During the luncheon informal announcement was made of the engagement of the bride's sister, Miss Janet F. Kelley and Mr. Wilfred L. Forsyth, both of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Peach left on the Empire State Express for New York city, where they spent Easter. After June 1, they will be "at home" to their friends in Newport News, Va. where the groom is engaged in the jewelry business.

Annual Meeting.

BOARD OF HEALTH vs. FOSTER THEATRE

Writ of Certiorari Obtained Against Members of Board of Health By Owners of Theatre

The end of the controversy between the local Board of Health and the Messrs. J. M. and C. E. Foster, owners of the Foster Theatre is not in sight. Following the injunctions secured against the Board and Health Officer Russell last week by the Messrs. Foster through their attorneys, Fanning & Fanning, the Board held a special meeting on Friday and adopted a resolution in substance as follows:

"Now, therefore, be it resolved that it is the determination of this board that the Foster Theatre is a nuisance, and that conditions exist in said building which are dangerous to human life, and, especially, in that said building is not provided with adequate means of ingress and egress, and is not provided with adequate means of ingress and egress to and from the galleries on the third floor of said building, and the said building is hereby condemned as an unsafe place for holding shows, theatrical performances, entertainments, and all other meetings which may tend to cause the congregation of people within the building, and is hereby ordered to be closed and kept closed until the dangerous conditions above mentioned are removed and until the permission of the board by resolution shall be given for the opening of the same, and be it further

"Resolved, That the Health Officer be and he is hereby authorized and directed to cause a certified copy of this resolution to be served immediately upon the owners of said Foster Theatre."

It would appear by the late adoption of the above resolution that the theatre owners were right in their contention that the play house had never been legally closed, else why the necessity for a second resolution?

Application was made by the theatre owners on Saturday to Justice Scripture, through their attorneys, Fanning & Fanning, for a writ of certiorari directed to the members of the local board, which Justice Scripture granted, commanding the Board of Health to certify a return of all proceedings, decisions and actions, with the dates thereof, and all and similar evidence, documents, records and all other papers offered or filed with them as such members of the Board of Health or which were submitted to them, with their determination and the manner in which they arrived at the same in connection with their action in condemning the Foster theatre as being an unsafe place and ordering the same closed and in connection with all things relating thereto.

This writ of certiorari was served upon Messrs. Scott and Bennett on Saturday, Mr. Rigley being out of town. Justice Scripture also granted an order enjoining Health Officer Dr. S. A. Russell, his agents, attorneys and servants and each of them from in any way interfering with or closing or causing to be closed the Foster theatre, and restraining and enjoining them from any way interfering with or preventing the opening of the Foster theatre on the dates set for attractions to be held there in or at any other time. This injunction was served upon Dr. Russell.

The petition of the Messrs. Foster questions the right of the Board to act legally in such capacity, claiming that the State law requires seven members for a legal Board while the present Board is composed of but three. If this contention be right, all acts, all ordinances, would be void.

The Messrs. Foster are daily expecting the steel fire escapes and they will be placed in position as soon as they are received.

Baseball Matters.

The meeting in the City Hall on Tuesday evening to discuss baseball matters, was not largely attended but it made up in enthusiasm what it lacked in numbers. There is a strong demand throughout the city for protection but it was decided to go ahead with the arrangements for the season, whether or not protection is granted. An attorney has been engaged by the league to look after its interests and to outline its privileges and limitations which will help some.

President Cary announced that already $425 had been subscribed toward the necessary $800 and that he did not think there would be the slightest doubt regarding the speedy securing of the required sum.

"Cooked" and "Well Cooked" Food

Good food and a good cook are not enough to produce a good meal. Much depends on the vessels in which the food is prepared. Unless these are scrupulously clean, there will be a disagreeable odor or a taste of tin or iron, not to mention the danger of ptomaine poisoning. Many stomach troubles and other ailments can be traced back to this source. These dangers are overcome by the use of our

SANITO COOKING UTENSILS

These are specially made to reproduce the old German cooking utensils so universally used abroad. SANITO ware has a special lining which cannot crack or scale off. This lining is absolutely acid proof, and the vessels are always sweet, clean and wholesome. SANITO ware should be used for all ordinary culinary purposes. It will prove particularly valuable in preparing food for the sick or for infants.

COMPTROLLER GLYNN'S REPORT

Albany, April 14.—State Comptroller Martin H. Glynn made public today a synopsis of the report of the examination of the accounts of Oswego County recently made pursuant to his direction by examiners of the Bureau of Municipal Accounts of the Comptroller's Department. The report discusses the finances of the county in detail and discloses, according to the Comptroller's statements "many irregularities in the conduct of the office of County Treasurer during the incumbency of Thomas Moore."

Sheriff's Office Criticised.

The Sheriff's office is criticised, it being alleged that "by the presentation of improper charges which were audited and paid, the county has lost thousands of dollars." The examination covered a period from December 1, 1904, to November 30, 1907, and in the office of the Treasurer to the expiration of the term of Thomas Moore on December 31, 1907.

"Attention is called by the report," says the Comptroller's statement, "to irregularities in the Coroner's bills and to the series of overcharges of these officials. It is shown by the report that while the Board of Supervisors cost the county from $10,000 to $12,000 a year, that its members acted either in ignorance of or indifference to many of the provisions of law applicable to the official actions of that body, and that a proper exercise of the powers and duties imposed by statute would have saved large sums to the taxpayers.

"The method and form of bookkeeping is criticised as complicated and obsolete. A shortage of $432.39 is shown to have existed at the close of business on December 31, 1907. However, the examiners express an opinion that this deficit is counterbalanced by a sum of $500, apparently paid on the refund of a cash bail deposit, which was entered in the books."

Making of Checks.

"The examiners found," says the statement, "that it was the practice of the Treasurer to pay private bills with county funds, although the Treasurer subsequently reimbursed the County exchequer for the same. They point out that in addition to the salary to which he was entitled, the Treasurer overdrew his account in the sum of $4,000. Among the specific instances cited is that of the First National Bank check, No. 2437, dated October 26, 1905, drawn for the sum of $100, payable to W. E. Lewis, Treasurer of the Republican County Committee, and signed by Thomas Moore, County Treasurer. These expenditures for private purposes by the Treasurer were always charged to his salary account, and any overdraft was paid either during or at the close of the fiscal year. No evil intent was discovered that Treasurer Thomas Moore was intentionally honest, but that through a long incumbency of the office he became careless, made errors and permitted many vicious practices to creep into his official conduct. Still this system is condemned in strong terms by the examiners.

"It is further shown," Comptroller's synopsis goes on to say, "that the Treasurer received and kept fees on state taxes and bank taxes amounting to more than $400, which fees should have passed to the credit of the county. In addition thereto, he received and retained fees on liquor taxes amounting to $4,907.48, which under the law the county may be entitled to in view of some decisions of the courts.

Without Audit of Board.

"The payment of a large number of bills without the audit of the Board of Supervisors, or other lawful authority, is discussed at length, and a schedule is set forth showing that during the three years the Treasurer paid $36,452.62 upon claims which should not have been paid in the form presented. Numerous other illegal acts are mentioned in the reports, such as loaning of county funds, failure to designate depositories or to make contracts with banks for interest on deposits or to require bonds from such depositories as provided by statute.

"In that portion of the report devoted to the Sheriff's office, it is pointed out that through the allowance by the Board of Supervisors of a large number of charges wholly without any provision in law, the taxpayers have suffered severe losses. Figures are given showing that the aggregate of the payments made for charges unwarranted by law varies in the different years from $1,400 to $2,000, and a much larger sum was paid upon questionable items which should not have been allowed in the form and upon the data furnished in the bill.

"The tabulation further shows the portion of such sums received by former Sheriff Eldon H. Cook, Sheriff Henry Hilton and Deputy F. W. White, and directs the attention of the attention of the taxpayers to their right of action to recover such sums under the statute as supported by the decision in Hicks vs. Eggleston et al., 105 App. Div., p. 73.

Allowance of Claims.

"Sheriff Hilton and Deputy White were questioned by the examiners and the stenographic minutes of their examination are attached to the report. These minutes disclose that those officials made many charges against the county which were allowed and paid apparently on the theory that their predecessors had made like charges which were approved by the Board. The carelessness with which officials presented, and the board allowed claims, is supported by many illustrations.

"An instance is cited where Mr. White made duplicate charges for the board of several prisoners in each of two successive years, and hence received his pay twice. Attention is called to a charge made by Hilton, Sheriff, under date of November 26, 1906, for transferring ten prisoners from Oswego to Pulaski, a distance of twenty-seven miles. The amount claimed and allowed was for fifty-four miles mileage on each prisoner at ten cents per mile, in all $54.00. It also appears that on the same day he retransferred nine of the prisoners back to Oswego and made a further charge of fifty-four miles mileage on each and at ten cents per mile, which was also allowed and paid, the only explanation offered when questioned as to this duplication being, 'I have done as it always has been done in other bills.'"

Charges of Coroner.

"The bills of the coroners show that one of the coroners was paid for seven hundred and sixteen days' services out of a possible six hundred and ninety-four calendar days, including Sundays and holidays; that exorbitant charges are made for copying 'inquisition for record,' and that Mr. Vowinkel paid stenographers 12½ cents per folio for taking testimony at the inquest and was allowed for the copy attached to his decision at the rate of 25 cents per folio.

"Mathematical errors were found in abundance which had not been corrected by the board and prompted the examiners to believe that the claims had been audited without having been properly examined."

Coroner Vowinkel when seen said that in regard to the objections to his fees for official services he often had two or three cases to be investigated in one day which made the difference between the calendar days and the number of days appearing on his bill, and that it always had been the custom to charge accordingly. In regard to the payment for the stenographer he had been always allowed 25 cents per folio for evidence taken in criminal cases and that he had always given the stenographer half.

Held Down the Speaker.

The sanctity of the speaker is an inviolable law of parliamentary England, yet once the necessities of the nation were so great that an assault and battery had to be made upon his sacred person. It was in the third parliament of Charles I. that the angry commons framed their petition of rights. This cut at the very root of the king's prerogative, and among those in the house who opposed it was Mr. Speaker. Upon Sir John Elliott moving its acceptance the speaker essayed to leave the chair, which would, of course, have proved fatal to the bill. But they were ready for him, and Hollis and Valentine seized him, one on each side, and literally held him in the chair until the formality of the reading was over. So vital was the petition considered that Cromwell said in the lobby afterward, "Had we been defeated I should have left England tonight."—London Chronicle.

Undodgeable Taxes.

"In the past," said the tax assessor, "governments were wiser. They levied taxes that could not be sworn off. There was, for instance, the English birth tax of the seventeenth century. A laborer paid 2 shillings as birth tax; a duke paid £30. You couldn't get round it.

"Burials were taxed, according to the station of the dead, from a shilling to £25. That, too, could not be dodged.

"Marriages were taxed. A duke to marry paid £50; a common person, like yourself, paid half a crown.

"In those days you paid a tax on every servant, on every dog, on every horse, on your carriage, your hearth, your windows, watches, clocks, wigs, hair powder, plate, ribbons, bitten coal, gauze and candles."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

When readers of the Times visit Syracuse one of the sights worth seeing is the pressroom where The Syracuse Herald is printed. It has been so arranged that it can be seen from the Warren street windows. Hundreds of people watch the mammoth presses grind out the daily edition at the rate of a hundred thousand complete copies per hour.

Timely Advice

(Washington Herald.)

Now this is all I have to say—
Keep 'em on.
To early spring fall not a prey.
Keep 'em on.
Think not because mild breezes blow
That we are done with sleet and snow.
Keep 'em on.
It's quite a jump to June, you know.
Let others foolish be, but you
Keep 'em on.
No matter what your neighbors do.
Keep 'em on.
I need not come right out, I ween,
For surely you are not that green.
I take it you know what I mean.
So keep 'em on.

To have perfect health we must have perfect digestion, and it is very important not to permit of any delay the moment the stomach feels out of order. Take something at once that you know will promptly and unfailingly assist digestion. There is nothing better than Kodol for dyspepsia, indigestion, sour stomach, belching of gas and nervous headache. Kodol is a natural digestant, and will digest what you eat. Sold by all druggists.

Nature's Vengeance.

Pliny informs us that twelve cities in Asia Minor were swallowed up in one night. In the year 115 the city of Antioch and a great part of the adjacent country were buried by an earthquake. About 300 years after it was again destroyed, along with 40,000 inhabitants, and after an interval of sixty years was a third time overturned, with the loss of not less than 60,000 souls. In 1692 the city of Port Royal, in Jamaica, was destroyed by an earthquake, and the houses sank into a gulf forty fathoms deep. In 1693 an earthquake occurred in Sicily which either destroyed or greatly damaged fifty-four cities. The city of Catalonia was utterly overthrown, 19,000 inhabitants of the city perishing in the ruins. In 1755 Lisbon was destroyed by an earthquake, and it buried under its ruins above 50,000 inhabitants. In August, 1822, two-thirds of the city of Aleppo, containing a population of 200,000, were destroyed by an earthquake. Thirty thousand of its inhabitants were buried in the ruins.

Over the Eggs and Bacon.

He scraped with his knife a bit of butter off the sporting page.

"The writer of that poem on dying is accused of plagiarism now," he said.

"It's awful," she exclaimed, "the way these men go about the country marrying innocent women! Wipe your mustache, dear."

He wiped his mustache and, with a frown, inspected the result upon his napkin.

"Plagiarism," he said, "means a literary theft."

"Stole some books, did he?"

"No, no; he stole ideas. They say a woman wrote the poem years ago."

"And now they bring it up against her, eh? Oh, these newspapers! But look at the mess you've made there with your coffee. I do wish you'd try to be a little more careful."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Money Makes Egotists.

Money is a sort of creation and gives the acquirer even more than the possessor an imagination of his own power and tends to make him idolize self. —Cardinal Newman.

Not One Was Lost.

The teacher was trying to explain to the class the indestructibility of matter. "Nothing is ever wholly annihilated," she said. "It may change its form, so that you see it no longer, but it still exists. A solid may become a liquid and a liquid change to vapor, but it is just as much a part of creation as ever. Not a particle of it has been lost."

"It is so, as I believe, in the world of mind. No spoken word, no thought even, fades away into utter nothingness. It lives on, whether for good or bad. A minister may preach a sermon and see no effect from it, but that sermon is not lost. No sermon is ever lost."

"I know papa never loses any of his," spoke up a little girl, the daughter of one of the local pastors. "I know where he keeps 'em. They're in a barrel in the back attic."—Youth's Companion.

A large number of invitations have been received to the marrige of Arthur Distin to Edna Hunt Wilber at Christ Church, Herkimer, N. Y., on April 26th. A reception at the home of the bride's parents will follow the ceremony. Mr. Distin is well known here, being the only son of John W. Distin, and at present a successful electrician in Syracuse. Best wishes are extended to the lucky couple.

Assessors Hannis, Edgarton and Foster commenced the work of placing a valuation upon city property on Monday. Considerable has been said regarding the equalization of valuation upon properties throughout the city but it is not believed that it will be accomplished at present, any more than it has been in the past, as the compensation is not high enough to warrant the assessors in devoting the necessary time to the labor. It was all right as a campaign document but it is not believed that there will be a great departure from the course pursued by former boards of assessors.

Mr. H. C. Gardner is visiting his family in this city. The Wisconsin Leader, in speaking of Mr. Gardner, said: "C. H. Gardner, who has been superintendent of the work at Hatfield for the J. G. White Co., and has had charge of the work there since it began over a year ago, left Wednesday evening for his home at Fulton, N. Y., and his place at Hatfield will be filled by H. P. Carter, who formerly was foreman in charge of the cement work. Mr. Gardner does not know what he will do next or where he will go, but will take a vacation and visit for a time with his family in the East and will probably resume work for the J. G. White Co. on some of the numerous jobs they are at work upon. During his stay of thirteen months at Hatfield Mr. Gardner has made a large circle of friends throughout this section, all of whom regret to see him leave. The great dam at Hatfield will stand for ages as a memento of his capability in the construction of work of that kind, and he has shown himself to be a very competent superintendent, a hard worker, and one who commands the good will and esteem of those under him."

The market reports of The Syracuse Herald are the best anywhere, especial attention having been paid them in the last few weeks to make them the most complete printed of any newspaper. All dead worthless stuff is omitted and only live up to date quotations are used.

A Former Fulton Man Honored.

Chicago, and in fact the whole State of Illinois, is in a seething political fight regarding the selection of delegates to the Democratic National Convention to be held in Denver in July. It has been definitely decided that Roger C. Sullivan, Ex-Mayor Edward F. Dunne, Senator Burton and Congressman Caldwell shall be the four delegates at large to the National Convention from Illinois.

The city of Chicago, with 2,500,000 inhabitants, and with a Democratic vote of nearly 200,000, has selected twenty of the strongest and most representative Democrats of the city as delegates, which are as follows:

First — John J. Coughlin and James M. Dailey.

Second—John P. McCoorty and Ernest Hummel.

Third—George E. Brennan and P. J. O'Connell.

Fourth—John E. Traeger and Edward J. Rainey.

Fifth—A. J. Sabath and Edward J. Novak.

Sixth—John J. McLaughlin and John J. Hayes.

Seventh — William Legner and Joseph H. Francis.

Eighth—John Powers and John J. Brennan.

Ninth—John F. O'Malley and Thomas J. Webb.

Tenth—Harry R. Gibbons and Peter Reinberg.

Harrison Wells Fined.

In County Court in Pulaski on Monday, Harrison Wells of this city withdrew his plea of not guilty to a charge of violating the liquor law and to keeping a disorderly house, and entered a plea of guilty. He was fined $25 or 25 days in jail. He paid the fine. The Court made the sentence a lenient one as Wells' certificate had been cancelled and his bond sold.

Hospital Site Fund.

The soliciting committee for the hospital site fund, is meeting with the most cordial reception wherever they have called and generous response to their request has been the invariable rule. Of course the hospital building is contingent upon the prescribed amount of money for the site being secured and there is a considerable sum yet to be realized. Several residents have contributed in generous sums. The donations may be paid in three yearly installments so that the giving to so worthy an object will not be at all burdensome.

A few objections have been raised as to the site but there arose many points in favor of the contemplated site just over the lower bridge, that the objections fall by their own weight.

THE FULTON TIMES

[Entered as second class matter, April 22, 1882, at the postoffice at Fulton, New York, under the act of Congress of March, 3, 1879.]

E. K. HUGHES, Editor
W. E. HUGHES, Proprietor

Issued Every Wednesday at No. 66 South First street, Fulton, N. Y.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 22, 1908

It has been announced from the White House that the President has selected for the Comptroller of the Currency, Lawrence O. Murry, Assistant Secretary of the Department of Commerce and Labor, vice William B. Ridgely who resigned on March 28th. However, Mr. Murry who has been ill at Atlantic City, has not yet been appointed and for the first time in many years the office of Comptroller of the Currency is vacant. The office is, meanwhile, in charge of Thomas P. Kane, the deputy comptroller, and Mr. Kane is said to know more about national banks and the banking system than any other man in this country. Mr. Kane's career in the government service furnishes an illustration of the possibilities of the merit system. Entering that service as a stenographer in the Post-Office Department he has advanced entirely on his merit to his present position and to-day has the fullest confidence of President Roosevelt and the Secretary of the Treasury.

THE Secretary of State and the British Ambassador have signed the general arbitration treaty with Great Britain, thus taking the second step in the programme, the ultimate end of which is the submission to the Hague Tribunal of the Newfoundland fisheries controvery. There are many indications, however, that the negotiations between the United States and Great Britain, so far as they relate to the disposition of power from Niagara Falls and related questions, have reached a deadlock which all the tact and diplomatic ability of Secretary Root and Ambassador Bryce will be unable to break. The Canadians insist upon referring these troublesome questions to a commission clothed with plenary powers and of course such an arrangement would preclude any possibility of an agreement by the United States. Apparently the Canadian authorities wish to supplant the treaty-making power of the British Foreign Office with a mixed commission, not dissimilar in character to the former Joint High Commission.

FROM Washington comes the report that President Roosevelt will spend the first year after his retirement from office in travel outside the United States. While his itinererary has not been determined, according to report, his plan is to see some of the little-frequented portions of foreign lands, and, of course, the prediction is made that the President will indulge his fondness for hunting big game. The President is quoted as saying, in this connection: "If William Taft is nominated and elected President, which would be gratifying, it would make impossible any criticism if I were abroad, to the effect that I was dictating to him and that he was being followed, or that I had tried to dictate and had been turned down in my suggestions."

THAT the House of Representatives consented to increase the appropriation for the Forest Service, contained in the agricultural appropriation bill, over the amount allotted to that service for the preceding year, demonstrates an increasing appreciation of the value of scientific forestry. Of the $3,796,200 appropriation for this bureau, it is estimated that $2,000,000 will be realized in sales of timber and rentals, and the expectation is that, in course of time, the Forest Service will be wholly self-supporting. The prevention of fires, which before the establishment of the forest patrol often caused a loss of $5,000,000 which loss during the past year has been reduced to $6,000, has alone more than paid for the entire cost of this bureau of the Federal government

IT is announced that the President's present intention is to remain at the White House until the returns from the Chicago convention are in and that he will then betake himself to Sagamore Hill where he will be simply an "interested observer" and that politicians will not be encouraged to make pilgrimages there. It is safe to venture the prediction, however, that President Roosevelt's last annual message to Congress, and many other important tasks that will affect the country will be made to fit in perfectly with the rest and recreation sought for.

SEVERAL years ago General Corbin in his annual report said that the early marriages of officers in the army should be discouraged on account of the insufficient pay, and now President Eliot of Harvard urges the young college instructor to remain single until his salary will "enable him to support a wife and children comfortably but not in luxury." Truly Mammon is supreme.

IN principle the Democratic party may be all right but in practice it is simply awful.

A Dangerous Practice.

The equine motor power by which the street car makes hourly pilgrimages from Cayuga street corner to the Lackawanna station, is not as young as it used to be, and when the car is well passengered a dead stop midway factory hill is frequently encountered. The motorman-conductor has solved the transportation problem at this point to a very dangerous nicety. He calls a passerby, asks him to care for his team, uncouples the car from its propellers and back upon the bridge the car goes without push or pull other than the power it derives from the steep incline. When the center of the bridge is reached, the man in charge climbs the hill, secures the beasts and re-attaching them to the car, succeeds with the assistance of a stout whip, in persuading them to drag the usually thoroughly frightened passengers in the car, to the top of the hill.

Unless this practice is prohibited by the proper authorities, and soon, a fatal accident will result. The brake has been known to refuse to work and nothing stands between the passengers and eternity, in the event of a refusal on the part of the brake to perform its accustomed duty, except Providence and the slight rail which encircles the approaches to the bridge.

It would seem a subject for consideration upon the part of the Board of Health.

Commencing Sunday, April 26th the Lackawanna will sell round trip tickets to Syracuse; good on all trains on Sunday, to return the same day, for 75 cents. 4-22

Sweet Sorrow.

"I can't please my friends," sobbed the young bride.

"What's the matter, pet?"

"They insist that I can't be happy with a fathead like you, but, oh, husband, I am!"—Washington Herald.

DIED.

Frederick C. Grey, aged 24, died on Thursday at his home in Minetto. The funeral was held Saturday and interment was made at Lewis' Corners.

James Best, aged 28, died on Sunday night at his home on the west side after a painful illness with rheumatic fever. Besides the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Best, the widow and four brothers survive.

Alice Chubb, aged 65, died on Thursday at the hospital after a long illness. The funeral was held on Monday from the home of her sister, Mrs. Charles Easton, on Broadway, and interment was made in Mt. Adnah. One brother, Charles Chubb of Marion and one sister, Mrs Easton of this city, survive.

Myron Haven, aged 79, a long-time resident of Hannibal, died on Monday morning at the hospital where he was taken on Thursday suffering from a stroke of apoplexy sustained while waiting in the Cayuga street station for a train. The widow, several sons and daughters survive.

Mr. F. J. Wooster, manager of the Fulton Hardware Company's store, was called to Whitney's Point on Wednesday by the sudden death of his wife. Mrs. Wooster had been in failing health for several years, but her death was not expected so soon. Earnest sympathy is extended Mr. Beside the husband, one son survives.

Mother Bernadine, founder of the Third Order of the Sisters of St Francis in this country and founder of St. Joseph's Hospital in Syracuse, died at that hospital. She had been Superior of St. Joseph's for seventeen years. Mother Bernadine was one of the most widely known women of any in religious life in America and she observed her golden jubilee on August 12, 1906. Before her entry into the religious life Mother Bernadine, more than half a century ago, was prominent socially in Philadelphia. There she was known as Miss Dorn.

George Coville, aged 61, and one of the most successful business men in Oswego county, died on Wednesday at his home at Central Square after a five weeks' illness. The deceased was prominent in Republican politics always and had been postmaster of his town for many years. Besides his widow and adopted daughter, he is survived by five brothers, Oscar, Palermo, Edward F., Cicero; Myron, Central Square; Hiram, Clay and Wallace Coville, Mallory. The funeral was held at the late residence on Saturday afternoon at three o'clock.

A large number of friends attended the funeral of the late Claude Stoddard who died at Albuquerque, New Mexico, from stomach trouble. The remains were brought to his former home on the west side on Friday and the funeral was held from the Congregational church on Sunday, the Rev. Charles Olmsted officiating. The deceased was a member of Hiarm Lodge, and of the local lodge of Elks and these orders attended the services in a body. The floral tributes were exquiste and numerous, showing the esteem in which he was held by his friends and expressing the deep sympathy for the widow and child. Interment was made in Mt. Adnah.

Exceedingly saddening was the unexpected news on Saturday of the death of Dana O., aged 22, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Freeman McKoon, which occurred at the family home on Friday evening. The young man had been ill for several months with consumption, but he was so much improved in health after a sojourn in the North Woods that high hopes of his ultimate recovery were held. The deceased was very prominent in athletics and was a favorite in the High School from which he expected to graduate the year he was stricken with the dread disease. The death of a younger brother a few months ago was keenly felt by Dana and it is thought that the brother's loss hastened his own end. The funeral services were held on Monday morning from the home and from the Catholic church and interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery. Many exquisite floral offerings from friends were sent to express their sympathy for the truly affected family. Beside the parents and sisters, many other near relatives mourn the going out of the young life, which was rich in promise.

ARE you getting Boys' Clothing with the best quality and style? Are you, for a fact? Or, is it doubtful?

There's no use trying to convince yourself that you can buy as good clothing anywhere else as we handle; it's useless to try to save money over the prices we ask. To assume that you get the service or satisfaction from "cheaper" clothing is to argue that right is not might, that merit has not power, that value does not count.

A Model Friend.

What true friendship consists in depends on the temperament of the man who has a friend. It is related that at the funeral of Mr. X., who died extremely poor, the usually cold blooded Squire Tightfist was much affected.

"You thought a great deal of him, I suppose?" some one asked him.

"Thought a great deal of him? I should think I did. There was a true friend! He never asked me to lend him a cent, though I knew well enough he was starving to death!"

Too Expensive.

Two little girls who were taken to see "Othello" were much impressed by the death scene.

"I wonder whether they kill a lady every night?" asked one.

"Why, of course not," said the other. "They just pretend to! It would be too expensive to really kill a lady every night!"

The Cooking club met with Mrs. N. L. Whitaker on Tuesday.

Mr. Everett Wettengel is home from college and is on the sick list.

Mr. Edward Waugh, who has been quite ill at his home in Albany, is improving in health.

Mrs. Leon C. Abbott of Geneva has been the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Hewitt.

Messrs. Clarence Hewitt and Leland Ives have returned from a visit with Miss Florence Goodelle in Geneva.

Mr. W. D. Edgarton of the west side declined his appointment as assessor and Mr. J. M. Hewitt was appointed to fill the vancancy.

On Tuesday evening, April 28, Fulton Chapter, R. A. M., will work the Royal Arch Degree. Refreshments will be served at the conclusion of the work.

Riverside County, Calif., went no-license at the last election. Mr. W. J. Pentelow, of Corona, a former Fultonian, labored hard for the no-license cause.

It is reported that Attorney G. S. Piper will erect a house on his vacant lot in Third street and that he will convert his present home into a two family dwelling.

Mr. Wallace of Buffalo street has resigned as sexton in the First M. E. Church, Charles Frank of Oswego Centre, the former sexton, taking his place May 1st.

The high wind on Tuesday made it extremely unpleasant for all who were compelled to be abroad. The Winter's accumulation of dirt found lodgment in eyes and throats to the discomfort of pedestrians.

The Girls' Friendly Society of Zion Episcopal church will conduct a sale of fancy articles, aprons and candy in the vacant store in the Lewis House Block, Saturday, April 25.

The ladies of the State Street Methodist church will hold a fruit and canned fruit sale on Saturday of this week, April 25, in the store of the Fulton Hardware Company, successors to A. J. Snow, commencing at 10 A. M. The following week Friday and Saturday, May 1-2, the ladies of the same church will hold a Rummage Sale in a location to be announced next week.

WORK FOR YOUNG MEN.

The State Executive Committee of Young Men's Christian Association is pursuing an admirable plan by which young men in towns or villages without associations may be accorded some of the advantages of the organization. The Committee is appointing in these places, a representative known as a Corresponding Member. One of his duties is to keep the State Office informed when young men leave home to locate elsewhere, either in business or student life. The State Committee forwards this information to the association or church where the young man is located. He is met cordially, and helped in finding a congenial home, in securing employment, and introduced to the helpful influences and Christian fellowship of his surroundings.

The Corresponding Member will also arrange for meetings in the interest of the young men of his community, and will give information regarding the work. Almost every city in the country has its Young Men's Christian Association, with rooms or building including reading and social rooms, which are open as a place of resort to all young men. To its members the association provides social parlors, evening educational classes, entertainments, lectures and practical talks, gymnasiums, employment bureaus, boarding-house registers, classes for Bible study, Young Men's Meetings, etc., etc. These privileges are offered at so small a fee that any young man can afford them. There are now 182 associations in cities, towns, colleges, and among railroad and street railway men in New York State, besides Corresponding Members in many of the smaller places where there are no associations.

In response to a very general demand for the extension of the association work into the villages and smaller places, the State Committee is organizing the County work which federates the villages and rural communities of a county and furnishes a County Secretary to lead in work with men and boys.

The State Committee has lately appointed Mr. Harry L. Stout as Corresponding Member for Fulton and Vicinity. He will gladly give any aid or information about work for young men that may be in his power.

The display in the S. D. Wells shoe window is attracting attention. It is an Emerson display and this store has the exclusive agency for this high class footwear.

CHAPTER XX.

THE adventurer allowed Mr. Corrigan to walk away without offering any further remark, then waited patiently for his servant to reach the porch.

"Good mornin', your lordship," said Bills, with a look of guileless innocence which made the Texan long to throttle him on the spot.

Richard regarded him earnestly, striving to read the secrets of his soul, but came to the conclusion that the servant had no soul, inasmuch as the face before him was as placid as that of a slumbering babe.

"Bills," he said in his sternest tone, "come upstairs. There is a matter which we must settle now—at once."

Contrary to his expectations, the servant did not flinch, but followed him meekly to the upper floor. Once inside the room, the Texan locked the door and turned on his companion savagely.

"Now, my man, just give an account of yourself, and be quick about it!"

Richard had flung himself into the morris chair, while the valet stood before him, nervously shifting his feet and picking at the brim of his hat.

"M' lord"— Richard cut him short.

"Drop that! This is no time for infernal nonsense! Well?"

"Yes, sir. Thank you, sir," Bills began again, though the task to which he had evidently nerved himself was proving larger than he at first supposed. "Mr. Williams, sir, I done wrong. I know that. An' I come back to tell you all about it, sir, an' awsk your pardon, sir, if you'll be so good."

"Leave the trimmings out and get down to facts!" snapped Richard, with unconcealed impatience. "You sneaked off last night without permission. Why?"

"Because," confessed the valet, with a sudden spurt of courage—"because I forgot, sir, and drank your brandy up again, Mr. Williams, sir. Honest, sir, I was afeerd you'd shoot me, an'—an' I went away to New York, intendin' to never come back again. I left w'llst you was 'avin' the play, sir."

"How did you get to New York at that time of night? There are no trains at that hour."

"No, sir. I know they ain't. I—I got on a freight train, sir."

The Texan looked at him keenly, then nodded permission for the balance of the fishy story.

"When I got to New York, sir," the valet continued, "I realized wot a bloomin' ass I was, Mr. Williams, sir an' I confesses it now, sir, without no 'ope of coverin' up the fack."

"Bills," said Richard calmly, "it comes to me that this is the first gospel truth you have spoken. I have hopes of you yet. Go on."

"Yes, sir; thank you, sir. As I was a-sayin', there I was in a big city, sir without much money an' no character an' no immejit prospeck of a place. Says I to meself, 'Bills,' says I, 'you're a bloomin' ass. You left a gentleman wot was only jokin' 'bout shootin' you an' wot wouldn't 'urt a 'air of your 'ead for anythink. Go back to him, Bills,' says I, 'an' tell 'im 'ow it 'appened. 'E's a kindly disposed gentleman with a sweet, forgivin' nature an' won't 'old it agi'n you that you was afeared of 'is terrible pistol, Mr. Williams, sir.'"

"H'm!" sniffed Richard. "What was your other reason for coming back?"

The servant shifted uneasily, turned his hat round and round in his nervous hands and apparently decided to keep back nothing.

"Yes, sir," he began again; "I 'ad another reason. I fancied if I come back your lordship—er—I mean Mr. Willship—no, beg pardon—Mr. Williams, sir—that you would pay me wot you promised me, w'ich is better than starvin' to death in Noo York without no character, meanin' no offense an' awskin' you not to be angrier than you can 'elp. I step' restless, Mr. Williams, sir. Then I come back. That's all."

"Is it?" asked Richard dryly.

"Yes, sir," answered the valet, with profound solemnity, "as Gawd is lookin' at us both, me a-standin' an' you a-sittin' down, m' lord."

The Texan arose and took several reflective turns up and down the room. Then he paused and stood with his hands in his pockets and his legs apart.

"Bills," he said, "I'm going to pay you a compliment. Without an exception you're the biggest liar between New York and San Antonio. It's a long stretch, my friend, and I'm not a flatterer."

Bills stared at him sadly, reproachfully, but made no answer. Richard continued:

"Of course I didn't see you when you left—that is, with my own eyes—and I didn't see you when you got off the train awhile ago, but just the same I have a chain of evidence which I trust will refresh your memory. When I employed you, you came to me with the following recommendations: 'Discharge him at once. He's a thief. The last time I was 'ere he stole my jeweled cigar cutter.' His friend, Mr. Drake of Scotland Yard, is also inquiring for his address. As much for your character as indorsed by your former master. If I hadn't been, as you aptly express it, 'a bloomin' ass,' I would have spared myself the mortification of stating the fact. I didn't discharge you and must take the consequences. But let us proceed. Next you tried to blackmail me for the purpose of extorting £300 from one who had treated you squarely. Item, three: Both Miss Renwyck and I saw you in whispered conversation with a—with a cock eyed tramp who was going out of the front gate. By the way, what was it you said to him?"

Bills looked uncomfortable.

"'E awsked me for money, sir, an' I told 'im to go about 'is business, sir."

Richard wheeled upon the man sharply.

"You lie, Bills! You told me at the time that he asked directions to the station."

"Yes, sir," answered Woolsey, flushing to his ears. "I did lie the first time, sir. I—I didn't want to seem uncharitable inclined."

The Texan sneered and turned upon his heel. After another contemplative turn up and down he once more faced the culprit.

"Look here, Bills; I haven't finished with you yet. I have only told you the lightest part of it. After failing to gonge money out of me you hold conversation with a suspicious character and acknowledge that you told a lie concerning it. Next you disappear, claiming to go to New York at a time when no trains were running. For the present we'll accept the story of the freight, but can look that part up later. In the meantime, while you are in New York, of course your cock eyed friend drops in on Restmore at 3 o'clock in the morning. He—er—watches in the billiard room while a pal slips through the open window of the library, opens Mr. Renwyck's safe and drifts away with a cool hundred and fifty thousand dollars' worth of diamonds. Question is, Who was the pal? I don't happen to be either a detective or a fool, but I have my own ideas. Mr. Renwyck is coming out here presently with a couple of what you call 'bobbies,' I believe. I shall tell him everything about both of us"—and never did the humiliation of his position so enter into Richard's soul as when he had to class himself with that miserable travesty of mankind—"but I have an idea that you will shortly represent an expression used both here and in England, which is to say, 'Collected Bills.' Am I clear?"

As Richard forged this chain of evidence link by link the valet's terror became pitiful to behold. His eyeballs almost started from his head, while his putty-like complexion paled to an ashy gray. His slim hands shook, his weak legs quivered under him, till at last he collapsed and sank upon his knees.

"My Gawd, Mr. Williams, sir!" he gasped. "You don't believe I done it, do you? Honest, sir, I was in Noo York! W'y, it don't stand to reason, sir, that I'd come back 'ere immejitly if I'd done it. 'Deed, sir, it don't stand to any sort o' reason."

"It does," flashed Richard. "You thought I'd swallow that cock and bull story of yours and be grateful for the dose. Why, you fool, the pill is as big as a football. We'll drop absurdity now and get down to business. Can you get those diamonds back?"

In vain Bills groveled at his master's feet, protesting his innocence with sobs and tears. It was no use. The evidence against him was too clear, and, while Richard himself was the real culprit in allowing the man to remain at Restmore at all, still, if he ever hoped to recover the stolen property, he must hold on like grim death to the bird in hand.

He put poor Bills through a sort of thirn degree, but without results further than copious tears and more copious protestations. Finally, his patience exhausted utterly, he took the terrified valet by the collar and dragged him to the door of the bathroom.

"Go in there!" he commanded in a low, tense tone, which was far more terrible to Bills than any shout he had ever heard. "Go in, I say, and stay there until I come for you. If you try to escape, by heaven, I'll kill you! It isn't a joke this time. It's the word of a gentleman from Texas!"

The servant knew that his master told the truth, so he sank down upon the bare, cold tiles, where he lay in limp distraction until such a time as the terrible Texan came to pronounce his doom.

Richard saw that the bathroom window was far too small to admit of the man's escape. Then he closed and locked the door, placed the back of a chair beneath the knob and went downstairs. In the lower hall he encountered Mr. Van der Awe, whose mournful cast of countenance seemed but a foretaste of what fate had in store for him.

"Beg pardon, Lord Croyland," said that sad young gentleman, with a faint, wan smile, "can you tell me what happens to be the matter with Miss Chittendon?"

"Yes!" snapped Richard. "She's got the collywobbles. I've got 'em, too, so look out!"

The Texan crossed the lawn and flung himself upon an iron bench. Then he took his aching head between his hands and cursed the English aristocracy from Alfred straight down the glittering line to a certain noble earl who reposed in peace in a comfortable modern hospital with only a broken bone or two to cause him misery.

"O Lord!" he groaned. "The course of true love never did run smooth, but need it ride forever on a sea bitten, bucking broncho?"

Resolutions of Respect.

Headquarters D. F. Schenck Post G. A. R. Fulton, N. Y., April 14, 1908

Resolutions in memory of Comrade John N. Fulford.

Our well beloved comrade, John N. Fulford, having been removed from our midst by the inexorable hand of the King of Terror, we, as a Post of the G. A. R., of which he was a member, are again brought face to face with the oft repeated and much neglected warning of our approaching end,

It was the desire of our comrade that he should not be reported as dead, but only transferred from this life to one wherein would be realized the beatific promise of the Savior, that the pure in heart should see God. The change had no terrors for him. He walked by faith through the valley of the shadow, strong in the belief that "faith in sight would end."

We shall miss him at our social and business gatherings; the voice ever raised in prayer and song, is now forever silent. The hearty handshake we shall feel no more. The ever ready words of friendly greeting no more we hear, his genial smile no more do we behold, it is therefore

Resolved, that it is the sense of this Post that the removal of such men as our Comrade, John N. Fulford, is a loss not only to the Comrades, but also to the community in which he lived. His life was that of a Christian both in example and precept, and having remained among us the allotted three score and ten years, he has gone to his reward.

It can been truly said of him

"None knew him but to love him,
None named him but to praise."

May his faultless life be a shining example for us to immitate, and may we grow to emulate his virtues.

Resolved, that we extend to the bereaved family of our departed comrade all the consolation sympathy can bestow.

Resolved, that these be recorded in the minutes of the Post, and a copy sent to his family.

Resolved, that the Charter of the Post and also the room be draped for an appropriate length of time.

Form New Nation

That New York, California, Maryland and Connecticut are to be the four original states in a new American Republic of boys and girls, which will cover the continent was announced in New York city last week. Plans for making a national organization of the George Junior Republic, which has hitherto been confined to the little town of Freeville in this State, have already been formed, and soon each state in the greater republic may be represented in the new nation of juvenile self-reformers. Word has just been received that "Daddy" George founder of this organization, has successfully established a junior republic in California near Los Angeles and is on his way back across the continent to increase the national nucleus in Connecticut and Maryland.

Already Pennsylvania, Illinois, Massachusetts and other states are making application for a place in this new United States, which will afford their young delinquents the same means of straightening out a crooked start in life which those of the Empire State have enjoyed for fourteen years. Until New York State could show that it was able to sustain the original colony at Freeville, which now depends for support upon outside sources, it has not been considered wise to give many other states junior republics of their own. Now that the people of the state are beginning to realize, however, that their own junior republic must depend solely on their support, it was declared by officers of the organization, it is likely that soon New York would be able to look after its own young republicans and leave other states free to do the same.

Immediately upon his return to Freeville—the Plymouth Rock of the new nation of boys and girls—Mr. George will go to Maryland, where a branch republic is already waiting to be organized under his new national system. The fourth of the original states of the juvenile union will then be added at Litchfield, Connecticut. At Freeville, where the adult founder will make his headquarters, a sort of capitol and training colony will be maintained by the young "citizens" of the new nation. From here as well as the junior republics in California, Maryland and Connecticut, pioneer bands of boys and girls will be sent with "Daddy" George to found new centers of junior republic statehood.

Many sufferers from nasal catarrh say they get splendid results by using an atomizer. For their benefit we prepare Ely's Liquid Cream Balm. Except that it is liquid it is in all respects like the healing, helpful, pain-allaying Cream Balm that the public has been familiar with for years. No cocaine nor other dangerous drug in it. The soothing spray is a remedy that relieves at once. All druggists, 75c., including spraying tube, or mailed by Ely Bros., 56 Warren Street, New York.

Bathing a Prince.

George IV. while prince and residing in his Brighton palace kept in his bedroom a portrait of Mrs. Gunn, an old bathing woman who used to dip him into the sea when he was the little Prince of Wales. A picture book much prized by children showed the old lady bathing the little fellow. Beneath the picture was this stanza:

To Brighton came he.
Came George the Third's son,
To be dipped in the sea
By the famed Martha Gunn.

A companion portrait to Martha Gunn's was that of Thomas Smoaker, who had charge of the horse which drew the bathing machines into and out of the sea. One day the little royal highness, having learned to swim, swam out farther than Thomas judged to be safe. He called to him to come back, but the self willed boy struck out with more vigor. Thomas went after the prince, overtook him, seized him by an ear and drew him to shore.

"Do you think," he replied to the boy's angry words, "I'm a-going to get myself hanged for letting the king's heir drown hisself just to please a youngster like you?"

THE TIGER SEIZES THE STATE.

Boss Murphy of Tammany Hall Violently Takes Control of the Democratic Machinery of All the Counties. He and Chairman Conners Override Delegates and Name State Committeemen to Suit Themselves.

A Subcommittee Empowered to Go Into All Parts of the State and Cut the Heads From Opponents — The Millions For Canal and Highway Improvements the Stakes In the Tammany Boss' Game.

Charles F. Murphy, the head of Tammany Hall, has become the boss of the Democratic party throughout the entire state. The struggle which Croker made for years unsuccessfully and which Murphy has been making ever since he became the head of the wigwam has resulted in Tammanyizing the entire organization from Long Island to Lake Erie.

This was accomplished by high handed violation of all the traditions of party management in the state and the usurpation of the rights of delegates in such reckless manner that among the conservative elements in the party there is widespread revolt. There is talk of an open attempt to create a new and rival organization.

Murphy's control of the present state committee is absolute. At his dictation members of it who had been selected as such by the delegates of their senatorial districts were unseated and others who would be subservient to the Tammany domination were substituted in their places. In addition to this, Murphy has appointed a committee with dictatorial powers which may invade any county at his wish and reorganize the Democratic party in that county.

Never since the time of Tweed has a Tammany leader had such influence with his party machinery throughout the state as Murphy now has.

This control of the organizations was seized by the Tammany boss at the state convention which was held in New York city on April 14 and 15. It was the result of a plan made weeks ago by Murphy and William J. Conners, the chairman of the Democratic state committee, who resolved to go to whatever lengths were necessary to secure absolute domination.

After Canal Millions.

Although the convention was called to elect delegates at large to the national convention to be held in Denver on July 7, national issues and national politics did not figure in the scheme.

State issues, or, rather, a state issue, was before Murphy's eyes as he surveyed the field. The spending of $100,000,000 for the improvement of the canals and of $50,000,000 for the improvement of the highways was what Murphy wanted. If he has his way about it, he will inaugurate in spending these vast sums of money the same system which has for years been in practice in handling the moneys in Greater New York. It is his hope to build up throughout the state by the use of this patronage not only a political machine of which he may be the dictator, but if his experience in New York city counts the great contracts which must be made for completing these great state improvements will go to his friends and cronies. The spoils of these great works was the mainspring of the desperate work.

The state convention was the occasion which Murphy took to send the Tiger across the Brooklyn bridge. Until that time Senator McCarren, the leader of the Democratic party in Kings county, who was hostile to Murphy, had resolutely withstood the attempts to Tammanyize Brooklyn borough. So it became necessary in carrying out Murphy's scheme to dethrone McCarren. This was accomplished by the same methods which Murphy and Conners adopted in 1906 at the Buffalo convention.

Delegates Thrown Out.

Delegates were unseated without regard to the rights of the electors in the districts which they represented. Contests were inaugurated in sixteen assembly districts in Kings county, and men hostile to McCarren, but who would do the bidding of Murphy and Conners, appeared before the committee on credentials and claimed the seats of McCarren men. Before this committee there was a contest which lasted for many hours. It was a death struggle with McCarren, and he fought for his life until he was beaten.

The committee recommended that the delegates from ten assembly districts be thrown out. This was done, and with them McCarren's power vanished. The action of the committee was not ratified until after a long fight on the floor of the convention. The greatest violence prevailed. There were personal encounters between the rival factions, and the services of a squad of police were necessary to prevent serious damage to the heads and the furniture. The convention also threw out the delegates from Frank H. Mott's district in Chautauqua county. In several other districts contests had been started, but the necessity of holding such men as Bulger of Oswego county and Bermel of Queens made it advisable to withdraw these contests and not carry the outrage further than was necessary to give a majority of the convention to Murphy.

Murphy Names Committee.

When McCarren delegates had been unseated and the new men put in their place, Murphy controlled the situation by vote of 150 to 128. Everything then was plain sailing for his desperate game.

Then came a touch of Tammany's methods. Murphy and Conners, overriding the expressed wish of delegates, named state committeemen to suit themselves.

Here is the resolution under which Conners and Murphy assumed to do the work of the delegates in several state committee districts:

Resolved, That the following names be and are selected and appointed to constitute the Democratic state committee of the Democratic party for the year 1908 and until such time as their successors may be named at a state convention to be hereafter called for that, among other purposes, and that said committee is authorized and empowered to fill any vacancies which may arise therein.

The bare reading of such a resolution caused a violent outbreak. It was revolutionary.

The delegates from the several senatorial districts had agreed upon their member of the state committee. Under this resolution Murphy overrode their wishes and substituted men whom he had selected and who had never been thought of for the position by the representatives of the counties from which they came. The delegates protested in impotent rage. From several counties the delegates arose and charged up on the platform. They upset the reporters' tables, battered down the sergeants at arms who tried to restrain them, and nothing but the presence of an unusually large number of police prevented serious violence. It was all to no purpose.

Murphy had the votes, and he enforced the Tammany methods throughout the state as he has for years in the borough of Manhattan.

Up State Men in a Rage.

It was not until it was too late that the delegates in the convention realized just what the control of Murphy meant for the state. They had helped put through the Conners-Murphy programme and had seen the McCarrenites thrown out of the convention without rebelling or showing any great wrath, but after the programme had been carried through and Murphy began to exercise his power by throwing out the chosen members of the state committee the outbursts of rage were terrible.

Even before the convention broke up in riot at midnight there were demands for a rump convention.

Charles F. Rattigan of Cayuga county, himself thrown off the state committee by a power which he declares was usurped, tried to protest in convention, but was suppressed.

"We must have our rights," he shouted, "and if we can't get them here in this convention we will get them outside! Let us go out and organize a convention of our own men and get our rights."

This proposition was greeted with enthusiasm. Delegates who had been blind to what was happening in convention were roused to a high frenzy when they saw the situation as it was.

"Murphy is Tammanyizing the state!" was the cry heard on all sides.

Organizing Against Murphy.

Thomas M. Osborne's room at the Hoffman House was headquarters for the kickers. Telegrams were sent to various parts of the state as a call to arms against Murphy. Before 9 o'clock Thursday Mr. Rattigan had got in touch with dozens of delegates and had been assured of the united support of the delegates of Chautauqua, Cattaraugus, most of Erie, all of Oneida, Albany, Cayuga, Cortland and nearly all of Kings county.

The angriest delegates were from the districts where Murphy had thrown out the state committeemen chosen by the delegates. This so called usurpation of authority extended itself to seven districts.

In the Twenty-seventh district W. D. Brinnier, who was the unanimous choice for state committeeman, was thrown out and George B. Van Valkenburg was substituted. In the Thirty-third district John Anderson was thrown off the committee and W. H. Cameron substituted.

Who Were Thrown Out.

Even Charles N. Bulger's place on the state committee had to be retained by forceful overthrow of the election of a committeeman. Charles E. Norris of the Twenty-fifth district had the six votes from Jefferson county and Bulger had only the three votes of Oswego, but Murphy and Conners ignored the election of Norris and put Bulger on the committee as a reward for his services as chairman of the committee that threw out McCarren.

In the Fortieth district, the home of Thomas M. Osborne, Charles F. Rattigan had six out of nine votes and was the chosen committeeman, but to the intense surprise of everybody from the district Mr. Rattigan was thrown off and William B. Harper substituted. In the Thirty-sixth district John W. Potter, unanimously elected, was thrown off and Harry S. Potter substituted.

In the Fifty-first district James O. Bennett, the regularly elected state committeeman, was put off and Thomas P. Heffernan substituted. Bennett is the man who raised a sensation in Buffalo at the last convention when he alleged that an attempt had been made to bribe him with $3,000.

In Conners' Own County.

In Conners' own county, Erie, Conners threw out Henry P. Burgard and put in Sheriff James Smith. This enraged the other delegates from Erie, and W. F. Contesworth, leader of two districts from Erie, acting on behalf of H. P. Farman of the Forty-ninth district, demanded that Mr. Farman's name be withdrawn, although Mr. Farman had been duly elected to the state committee. He said that Mr. Farman did not want to serve on a state committee selected in such a fashion.

Murphy's Whip.

The same methods which had prevailed in the convention held in the meeting of the state committee on the following day. By a unanimous vote the committee appointed a subcommittee of twelve to serve as political executioners, and it was announced that the head of every leader who cannot be counted in the Conners-Murphy camp is to fall into the basket. The state committee elected Conners unanimously as chairman under fear of Murphy's whip, and then it passed this resolution, which gives Conners and Murphy absolute control of the organizations in every county in the state:

Resolved, That this convention directs and instructs the Democratic state committee of the state to enter any county or assembly district from which a contest as to the regularity or election of delegates has been brought to this convention and to organize the Democratic party of the county on such lines as will in its judgment be most conducive to party regularity, harmony and success.

Threats of Revolt.

Never since 1892 when David B. Hill by his snap convention aroused the Democratic party from one end of the state to another in revolt has there been such open talk of rebellion in the ranks as since the passage of this resolution by the state committee. From many sections of the state come cries for a new convention, a new organization and a declaration of independence from Tammany. One of these expressions was made by State Committeeman Melvine C. Haven of Syracuse, who has for years been active in party management.

"Comment upon the action of the convention is unnecessary," he said. "It is beyond discussion or reason. There has never been anything to equal it in this state. The work of the convention should be ignored, a new convention called and a delegation to the national convention chosen. Norman E. Mack is national committeeman and can place the names of the delegates upon the roll, and the national Democracy will then be in position to decide whether the results of the recent convention are to be tolerated.

"What the state committee will do in regard to matters in Onondaga we don't know or care. Mr. Kelly is the only elected chairman of our general committee and will so remain regardless of the action of a state committee which has no control or jurisdiction in the matter. We are prepared to establish Mr. Kelly's title to his office in the courts. We have been forced to do so once and can do so again."

Democrats Likely to Submit.

It is considered extremely doubtful if any new organization is made or any real steps are taken toward sending a contesting delegation to the Denver convention. The men who would naturally be looked to as leaders of any anti-Tammany movement would probably not find themselves in sympathy with the majority of the delegates at the national convention, and if a contest for seats in that body were started it would be with but little hope of success.

Democratic Comment.

Senator McCarren took occasion at the convention to predict that the party would be so split and the factional bitterness become so great that Democratic victory in the state or Greater New York would be impossible. The Democratic press of New York city is greatly aroused over the seizure of the state machinery by Murphy.

The New York World said on April 17:

Has anybody except the Republicans benefited by the procedure of the Democratic state convention? If so, who?

Is Murphy better off? We fail to see it. He gained nothing politically by throwing McCarren out of the convention. He gained nothing by appointing the members of the state committee in defiance of tradition, decency and home rule. He has gained nothing by selecting satraps to rule Brooklyn. Neither Murphy nor any other man can long govern a great party by the bludgeon and the strong arm. Already the revolt has begun, and it will spread, as it ought to spread. If Murphy thinks he has fortified his leadership by appointing a carpetbag committee to reorganize the party in any county which resists his dictatorship, Murphy is an ass.

Is Tammany better off? Only if Tammany can profit by strengthening the Republicans and the Independence league in Greater New York. Unless the Brooklyn Democrats are what Tom Lawson calls "gelatin spined shrimps" they will wreck the Democratic organization in Kings county before they will surrender to the domination of Fourteenth street.

Is the Democratic party better off? On the contrary, it is thousands of votes weaker than it was the day before the convention met and Charles F. Murphy had proceeded to use it as a vehicle for his personal revenge.

But for Murphy's brutal arrogance the Democrats of New York might have entered the campaign united. There was no occasion for dissension. There has not been a state convention in years which presented so many elements of concord and harmony. There has never been a convention in which a factional fight was so insanely unnecessary. Murphy's leadership of the party was not disputed. There was no disposition even to interfere with "Fingy" Conners, who is a veritable triumph of matter over mind. Fully 90 per cent of the delegates were opposed to Mr. Bryan and in favor of sending an uninstructed delegation to Denver. Every consideration of party interest was squarely opposed to the crazy course which Murphy and his fat witted accomplices followed. If they had been in the pay of the Republican organization they could hardly have done more to injure the Democratic cause.

In view of all these circumstances the World repeats the question it has raised many times before. Must a boss be an ass?

Serious For the State.

The situation which Murphy has brought about is one which thoughtful people throughout the state may well consider seriously.

The New York Tribune in commenting on the action of the convention and the state committee said:

Tammany, which used to be confined below the Bronx, now spreads over the whole state from Lake Erie to Montauk Point. What used to be a strictly localized political vice, for which it was possible for Democratic respectability to apologize on the ground of inevitableness, has now broken bounds, become the prevailing morality of the city. It is for the Democrats to show how they like the development.

There is no mistaking the meaning of the convention. The Democratic state committee is now just as much a Tammany organization as is the executive committee of Tammany Hall. It was selected in the same way and by the same man. Tammany districts used to have the power to choose their own members of the Tammany executive committee, but Murphy recently changed all that, reserving to himself the approval or rejection of their selections. The Democratic districts throughout the state used to have the power to choose their own representatives on the Democratic state committee, but Murphy has changed all that, only he did not tell the Democrats of the state about it beforehand. It was a little surprise that he kept in store for the men who voted with him to elect McCarren and thus reduce themselves to a hopeless minority. Then, with blank faces, they heard the list of the state committee read off, in a large number of cases not the names of the men whom the districts had chosen to represent them, but those of the men whom Murphy, Tammany fashion, had arbitrarily substituted for them. With that act the Tammanyizing of the former Democratic organization of the state was complete. In the place of the Democratic state committee was the Tammany state committee, and Murphy of Fourteenth street became boss of the whole New York state Tammany organization. Tammany invaded Brooklyn with the aid of allies from up the state. Then, with the aid of the men who were put in place of McCarren's delegates, it turned about and invaded the home of its up state allies—a very neat and admirable piece of tactics if the possession of machinery is all there is to politics.

DOCTORS MISTAKES

Are said often to be buried six feet underground. But many times women call on their family physicians, suffering, as they imagine, one from dyspepsia, another from heart disease, another from liver or kidney disease, another from nervous prostration, another with pain here and there, and in this way they present alike to themselves and their easy-going or overbusy doctor, separate diseases, for which he, assuming them to be such, prescribes his pills and potions. In reality, they are all only symptoms caused by some uterine disease. The physician, ignorant of the cause of suffering, keeps up his treatment until large bills are made. The suffering patient gets no better, in reason of the wrong treatment, but probably worse. A proper medicine like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, directed to the cause would have entirely removed the disease, thereby dispelling all those distressing symptoms, and instituting comfort instead of prolonged misery. It has been well said, that "a disease known is half cured."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a scientific medicine, carefully devised by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate system. It is made of native American medicinal roots and is perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the female system.

As a powerful invigorating tonic "Favorite Prescription" imparts strength to the whole system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. For overworked, "worn-out," run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," house-keepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon, being unequaled as an appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

As a soothing and strengthening nervine "Favorite Prescription" is unequaled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the uterus. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate the stomach, liver and bowels. One to three a dose. Easy to take as candy.

Misfires of Young Idea.

Easter and the Hare.

Traditions connecting the hare with the time of year in which Easter occurs have come down from as far back as Egypt in the days before history. The hare was then associated with the moon. It was supposed to be born with its eyes open, and the eyes did not close during its lifetime. Its time for coming out to feed was the night; therefore, like the moon, the hare was considered the watcher of the night.

Easter, a spring holiday dependent on the changes of the moon, soon gained the hare as its symbol in countries turning Christian. The most picturesque survival in modern times of festivities in connection with the hare is in Germany. There children are told that if they are good during the year a white hare will enter the house on Easter eve and hide beautifully colored eggs in secret corners all over the house. The children retire on that night in as great excitement as on Christmas eve. The parents attend to the hiding of the eggs, which are sought the next morning with great enthusiasm.—Woman's Home Companion.

Everyday Heroisms.

Walt Whitman, the poet, had a plain, true word to say, which every sort of man, including those who deny to him the appellation "poet," may accept: "There is no trade or employment but the young man following it may become a hero." A great many people have the notion that romance is a thing of the dim and distant past with which present day people have no sort of concern; that the tragic and the wonderful, the heroic, the glorious, the beautiful in life, are to be sought and found only in some distant era; that exalted virtue and greatness of soul are things to read about, and that the opportunity to display and emulate the highly prized qualities that ennoble and lift up men and women only comes to certain favored peoples in romantic ages, remote from the actual living present and far distant from the country and clime in which they live.—Philadelphia Ledger.

He Wanted to Know.

Senate and Lords.

The British house of lords is a survival of the ancient aristocracy of the kingdom, which for a long time was supreme in all national matters. When the democratic sentiment won a place for itself in the shape of the house of commons the natural and apparently indestructible conservatism of the British people held on to the house of lords as a check upon the commons and a perpetual reminder of the ancient institution. The senate of the United States was the result of the compromise struck between the Nationalists and States' Rights parties in the convention that formed the constitution. Some were for merging the representatives in a single body, while others insisted upon the second chamber (the senate) as a recognition of the political equality of the states.

To conquer temptation you must live it down alone, as you must die alone, and no vicarious gift of strength can take the place of a man's own will.—From "My Journal."

THE OLD FASHIONED WAY OF BANKING has been ours for twenty years. No matter what others may do we do not change. The old fashioned way of doing things in banking has always proven to be the best. The old time friendships, the old home, the old memories and the things we love, and the old fashioned bank we never can forget. Some folks change their ideas or methods from the old to the new once in a while, but somehow after a time they wander back to the old home where they feel acquainted, where the hand clasp is firm, the look from the eye is straight, and they feel secure. In these days of speculation and extravagance, of storm and stress, it behoves every man and woman to stop and think. Saving is but a habit, acquire it, and teach it to your children and your friends.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

Adjournment Time Topics—The Special Session "Bogy."

RACE TRACKS—WALL STREET

Two Topics That May Keep Lawmakers Busy at Capital During Summer Months — Governor's Following In Both Houses Said to Be Weakening.

(From Our Special Correspondent.)

Albany, April 22.—Now that the time of adjournment has arrived life in and about the state capitol is more varied than during the winter months. The routine of lawmaking, which has been strenuous enough for any ambitious temperament during the last two months, becomes even more strenuous owing to the inevitable accumulation of bills entangled in the process of passage, and a new feature in the form of farewell and committee dinners enters into prominence. Most of the important committees in both houses meet for a "goodby" dinner, and the various members who are not going to try for re-election usually like to spend an evening of informal good fellowship among the friends they have made at the capital. Taking everything into consideration, there is comparatively little sleeping done by the legislators during the last ten days of the session.

Will the announced reforms in the conduct of betting at race tracks have

SENATOR EUGENE M. TRAVIS OF BROOKLYN.

(Senator Travis is one of Governor Hughes' firm supporters in the upper house. He introduced for the governor the direct nominations bill, which failed of passage. Senator Travis lives in Brooklyn and has for many years been in the fruit business in New York. He is a member of three senate committees—railroads, banks and penal institutions.)

any appreciable effect on the future position of the legislature on the Agnew-Hart bills? This is a much mooted question at the capitol.

The anti-racing people claim that the barring of minors from the tracks except when accompanied by their guardians or parents is more or less of a "bluff," for it is well known that the percentage of minors that attends the race tracks is too small to be seriously considered; also they do not believe, they state, that the Jockey club objections to large wagers will last. They consider the rule to forbid bookmakers under the big grand stands to take bets less than $5 and limiting the bookmakers in the field to bets of $2 or over an increase in the dangers of betting.

On the other hand, the racing advocates in Albany claim that the new rules ought to put a stop to much of the public clamor against the tracks and point to them as an indication that they desire to make any and every concession to the public that they consider reasonable.

The Governor's Power in Legislature.

There is no question that Governor Hughes is weaker in the legislature than when the vote was taken on the anti-racing bills in the senate.

The governor's attitude regarding the subject of a special session has lost him many supporters apparently who were with him before. There is every indication that the senate will be even stronger in its opposition to the Agnew-Hart bills and that the assembly in an extra session would not advance the measures with anything like the speed of their progress this session. In fact, there is a feeling that the bills would be held up in the assembly indefinitely.

In brief, it may safely be said that there is not the slightest hope for the passing of the anti-racing bills, no matter how greatly an extra session might be prolonged.

The openness of the defiance of the governor in both branches of the legislature is almost unparalleled. Even some of the veteran politicians were surprised at the swiftness of the defeat of recent bills that were accompanied by emergency messages from Governor Hughes.

As to a Wall Street Investigation?

What will be the definite form of the attitude taken by the governor on the subject of an investigation of Wall street brokerage and finance methods? This is a question frequently asked. If he recommends sweeping legislation on this subject for the special session the lawmakers will begin to plan to spend pretty much all summer in Albany. The matter is a most intricate one and requires deep probing and careful thought. The general view is that the governor will not urge an investigation of Wall street at this late period in the legislative year. The governor has had passed twenty banking reform bills, and these, it is thought by leading members of both parties in the senate and assembly, ought to safeguard the interests of the public sufficiently for the present.

One Senator's Views.

A member of the senate finance committee spoke to the writer as follows:

"It seems to me that the legislature has been unwise not to have taken definite steps early in the session to look into and provide for the further regulation of the buying and selling of stocks, bonds, etc., in this state. The public demands a Wall street investigation. It won't be happy till it gets it. It won't be happy when it gets it. Some of the evidence given before senate and assembly committees this year has been of a nature absolutely warranting radical legislation, if not an investigation. The counsel of the New York stock exchange, John G. Milburn, stated before the codes committee of the assembly that the exchange was entirely willing to be investigated, would be glad to welcome a commission or other body at any time. Why doesn't the legislature give the exchange its wish? But the legislation or commission should not be confined merely to Wall street. There are ramifications of the banking and brokerage businesses throughout the central and western part of the state that should be rigidly examined. It seems to me that this is a subject equally as important as race track gambling for consideration at an extra session."

Overworked Rules Committeemen.

It is undeniably a great honor to be a member of the rules committee in the lower house, but the amount of responsible work that must necessarily be done by its members more than counterbalances the honor. Every bill that goes on the assembly calendar after "rules" takes charge, for instance, has to be passed on by the rules committee. In fact, the report of the rules committee is the calendar during the closing days of the session. If a man is seen rushing down a corridor with a hunted, haunted expression on his face, thin and pale, he may be assumed, and very safely so, to be a member of the assembly rules committee escaping from ten or twelve members who want bills reported. Of course the "thin and pale" part of this paragraph does not apply to Majority Leader Ed Merritt.

A few nights ago the former Democratic leader in the assembly, "Paradise Jimmy" Oliver of New York, was arguing against a bill relating to the regulation of elections introduced at the request of the New York city Republican organization. The debate had been long, but no one could make Mr. Oliver end his speech. There were very few Democrats present, and the Republicans hit upon a novel idea to embarrass Mr. Oliver. The members of the majority got up in a body and left the assembly chamber, congregating in the lobby and in Clerk Smith's room, leaving "Paradise Jimmy" talking to empty benches. Assemblyman Donlhee (Dem.) of New York rose and raised the point of order that there was no quorum present, but his objection was overruled. Mr. Oliver, not caring to talk to empty benches, summarily ended his speech.

The Minority Leader.

The Democratic leader in the assembly, George M. Palmer of Schoharie county, protests in vain against the talk that he will probably be the Democratic candidate for governor next fall. Mr. Palmer is as popular personally among Republicans as among members of the minority. He never makes unjust demands or attacks, but when he starts out to oppose a measure the sponsor of it always has trouble on his hands.

Piscatorial Plaints.

Some of the fishermen in the legislature are opposed to the anti-vivisection measures because they fear that the bills, if made into law, would be construed to make it a crime to put a live angleworm on a hook. One senator of trout catching fame said to the writer a few days ago: "The backers of these anti-vivisection bills ought to institute a legislative inquiry into the sufferings of angleworms, 'minnies' 'grilles,' bullfrogs, grubs and other forms of live bait. When through with that they should investigate the sufferings of eels, suckers and sculpins while wriggling on a hook."

The State Library.

The report of the New York state library for the last fiscal year shows that it ranks in point of size among the great libraries of the world. The report was made by Director Edwin H. Anderson and has been submitted to the legislature by Dr. Andrew S. Draper, commissioner of education. The library contains a total of 437,756 bound volumes, 196,425 pamphlets and about 285,000 manuscripts. During the year 19,953 volumes were added. Nearly 2,000 were added to the history and biography collections for which the library is widely known. The medical library was increased by 1,049 volumes and the extensive law library by 2,558.

During the year the library was used by 2,068 persons and institutions needing books for special purposes.

Those Low Salaries.

The lowness of the salaries of legislators in this state is again accentuated. Most of the senators and assemblymen have already spent the $1,500 salary allowed them, and the only money they receive during an extra session is $90 mileage. An extra session during the months preceding a presidential nomination is deemed nothing short of a calamity by the legislators active in local politics, whose time is necessarily largely occupied in preparing for the fall campaign. No; the lawmaker's life is not always a dream of roseate and luxurious idleness.

SCHOOL-DAY MEMORIES

Fragrance of Trailing Arbutus in "Windy City" Causes Pleasant Recollections of Fulton Boys and Girls.

Chicago, April 25, 1908.

To the Editor of The Times.—The Greek in charge of a sidewalk display of flowers on State street, Chicago, must have thought I was crazy when I stopped at his stand one day last week and buried my face deep in his basket of Trailing Arbutus. The Greek was in every day Chicago, but the Wandering Jew was back in the 70s in York state sailing on memories ship in school days. With my face in the fragrant basket I could picture the woods behind the cemetery in Fulton. The new born verdure of the late April or early May, fragrant with the Arbutus that was hid under the leaves near the belated snow banks in the deep hollows of the woods. The boys and girls of those days were all around me making the woods ring with laughter, and merry shouts every time an extra fine bunch of Arbutus was found or a new bed of wintergreen berries had been brought to light. I could see the jolly crowd with the lunch swinging down through the city of the dead towards the village homes, all of us decorated with Arbutus chewing the fragrant new sassafras bark, thinking not of the dead under their feet, but only of the joy of living in the present. Thirty years seem long when one looks ahead, but the thirty years that have passed since I left Fulton, have been short ones. My western wife and boy often wonder why I am so much in love with Fulton. I say that my boyhood days were all passed there and Fulton in those days was a boy's paradise. It had everything right at hand to gladden the heart of a boy, and the boys were there in large numbers to enjoy the pleasures.

Having lived in such surroundings for so many years with nothing disagreeable to remember, is it any wonder that I still talk of Fulton and call it home?

Mrs. A. B. Chrysler, who lived in Fulton for years, died at Sioux City, Iowa, about four weeks ago. I had renewed the acquaintance with her from time to time that began in Fulton during my boyhood.

Mrs. Chrysler was a woman who never grew old, and up to the time of her death she was the same quick, jolly, joy-spreading woman she was when she first began to call me "Johnnie." Guess I never grew any older to her for she continued to call me "Johnnie" all these years. The surviving daughter Della is now in Chicago, but expects to return to Sioux City to make her home there again.

Joe Francis is another Fultonian who is ever young. I see him every week, and he is the same old Joe, then, now, and forever. Life to him is one long joke, and while he is back of a good deal of fun, some people do get back at him at times. Joe is a very active member of the Austin Automobile Club, an organization that's different. The club boasts of a surgeon, a club lawyer, and some do say that a subsidized undertaker is on the club's pay roll. That may be talk, however.

During the recent heated agitation relating to the prosecution of the trusts, the Austin Automobile club invited a well known judge to address the club at one of their regular meetings. The night was set, the banquet was ordered, and the judge announced his subject as "The breakers of the law." The club members settled back comfortably to hear as they supposed a good big roast delivered to the trusts, but were greatly astonished and surprised to receive from the judge one of the hottest arraignments against the lawlessness and carelessness of the average automobilist. Protests from the members only added fuel to the fire and the members became so excited that the banquet was forgotten, and the members all went out on the highway with their machines, and ran over every dog and chicken that they could, and frightened all the men, women and children, almost stiff for miles around, before they again became normal citizens.

At another meeting, the club was discussing the advance of the automobile and the decadence of the horse, and had reached the facitious stage of the discussion. Joe was in the president's chair, and in his speech he jokingly said that the horse was only fit to haul hearses and they should be relegated to the alleys and back streets, thus giving the Boulevards to the automobiles. An ever present reporter thought that this was "good copy," and after embellishing the speech, said that the club would have a delegation before the next meeting of the West Park Commissioners asking for a rule that would compel all the teams and horses to be driven along the curbs, and give the center of the Boulevards to the buzz wagons.

The speech was good copy allright, for the next day the protests began to arrive from cab drivers' unions, livery stable and undertakers' associations, breeders' clubs, and all interests affiliated. Editoriats from all over the United States began to pour in and to-day Joe has a large scrap book filled with echoes of his now famous speech, and he says that the book proves again the power of the press, and of the innocent little paragraph.

THE WANDERING JEW.

Elks Buy Beautiful Home.

On Friday evening the arrangements were completed whereby Fulton Lodge, No. 830, B. P. O. E., through their trustees, Messrs. James M. Caffrey, Myron Stranahan and David Lipsky, acquired the beautiful home of Hon. and Mrs. T. D. Lewis in First street. The price to be paid is $12,000 and possession is to be given the lodge on August 1. Mr and Mrs. Lewis contemplate spending a portion of the Winter with their son, Dr. Murney Lewis, in New York City.

The Elks will convert the house into a modern club and lodge building. The upper floor to be used as a lodge room and the first floor for club purposes. Partitions will be removed and many alterations made, the cost of converting the house into a club house being estimated at $1,000. The property is one of the most desirable pieces in the city. It over looks the Oswego river and is surrounded by spacious grounds, the house setting well back from the street. In fact it is an ideal location. The Elks are the second secret order in this city to possess a home of their own, the Odd Fellows having given a house warming in their new home on Friday.

Complimentary to Mr. Whitney.

The Albany Argus has the following to say regarding Assemblyman F. G. Whitney of Pulaski: "Assemblyman F. G. Whitney of Oswego County, who for the past two years has been chairman of the excise committee, is one of the members of Assembly of 1908, who will not return next year. He has had enough. Yet Oswego would be far better represented by Assemblyman Whitney than by any new man. Mr. Whitney was not a showy legislator. He was retiring and unobtrusive; yet Speaker Wadsworth had no more stalwart and alert supporter of the majority side of the House. He was well liked by his colleagues and could accomplish more in the way of getting through tough legislative propositions than all the more showy legislators put together. He will be missed next year if he should be succeeded by a member of the ever noted and numerous Smith family, who is said to be slated one of the Republicans of Oswego County."

DIED.

Mrs. Sophia Hewitt, aged 85, died at the home of her nephew, Mr. Frank Kendrick. The funeral services will be held from the Methodist church, New Haven, this afternoon.

The death of Mrs. Adelbert J. Burton of Volney occurred at the city hospital on Tuesday morning. She was 48 years old and is survived by her husband and two daughters—Theresa and Bessie—all of Volney. Funeral services on Thursday morning at the Catholic Church. Interment in St. Mary's cemetery.

John Bisnett, who has been connected with the New York Journal for several years, died suddenly at his home in New York city on Saturday. The funeral will be held from his late home this Wednesday. The deceased was a brother of Mr. Charles Bisnett of this city.

Mary Robertson, aged 79, died on Thursday from paralysis at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Walter Waffle. The funeral was held on Sunday after noon, the Rev. John Richards officiating. The surviving relatives are two sons, Hugh of Providence, R. I., and William of Rockville, Conn., and four daughters, Mrs. Margaret Southard, Mrs. Elizabeth Fairbank and Mrs. Waffle of this city and Mrs. Agnes McIntosh of Philadelphia, Pa.

Card of Thanks.

Mrs. Claude Stoddard and Mrs. F. F. Stoddard desire to extend thanks to the neighbors and friends who so kindly assisted in their late bereavement, also for flowers and music, and to the Elks and Masons who so kindly officiated.

Resolutions of Respect

MALICIOUS MISCHIEF

Some High-School Pupils Indulge in Pranks Which Result in Serious Damage to School Property.

During the past week, Superintendent Fairgrieve and the Board of Education have been undergoing a very trying ordeal and one which was wholly uncalled for and unnecessary. An ordeal which it is devoutly to be hoped no subsequent boards will ever be called upon to experience. In March an entrance was effected into the High School by boys and limburger cheese smeared upon blackboards, desks and seats. Severe lectures were meted out by the faculty to the student body and it was expected that the offense would not be repeated.

On Wednesday night the High school building was again entered and greater damage was done than at the previous visit. It was then decided by Prof. Fairgrieve and President Hunter that something radical must be done to prevent the recurrence of so serious an offense. Consequently Mr. Hunter drew up two papers, for the male students to sign, one giving his oath that he had not been a party to the affair and the other declaring that he did not know anyone implicated. The first paper was readily signed; the second brought a halt. Hardly a boy in the school was in ignorance of the ones implicated and they did not want to betray their friends. Finally it was thought that all who were implicated in the outrage had confessed and the penalty to be exacted was under consideration when on Thursday night the scene was again enacted, but in more disastrous and disgusting manner, several outsiders, it is understood, being implicated. With the third committing of the outrage all who were identified in any manner with the occurrence, were suspended pending a decision as to what course to pursue with the offenders

The matter is more serious than would appear on the surface. It has gone beyond the bounds of "prank" and can only be classified under the head of malicious mischief. School properties have been destroyed and it is estimated that it will require $500 to repair the damage. Cheese was rubbed into the black boards, insulting remarks were painted upon the boards, the piano was mistreated, the clocks were broken, books were mutilated, the walls were defaced. The condition left by the boys was indescribable.

The Times does not believe in trial by newspapers It also believes that the authorities in charge of the prosecution will deal with offenders in such a manner that they will appreciate the full seriousness of their conduct and yet will not lose their self respect. It is an anxious time for parents, for the faculty and for the members of the Board of Education. It should be a time of humiliation and shame for the perpetrators of the shameful occurrences.

State Wide Committee.

Chairman G. E. Farrell of the Entertainment Committee for the State Firemen's convention to be held in Oswego on August 18, 19, 20, 21, has adopted a novel scheme for giving the convention publicity and to interest the people throughout the State in the event. He has appointed upon his committee men from all sections of the State, some of whom are former Oswegonians and some of whom will visit Oswego upon the occasion of the convention for the first time. The Fultonians whom Chairman Farrell has placed upon the entertainment committee are, Mayor Quirk, Postmaster Hughes, Ex-Surrogate Mead, Editor Cornell, F. A. Gage and Ex-Mayor Foster.

Oswego is making strenuous efforts to bring the coming celebration up to the high water mark of success and to impress the visiting fire laddies and their friends that Oswego is far and away the only city by the lake. Given favorable climatic conditions and the event will be an undoubted success.

"Cooked" and "Well Cooked" Food

Good food and a good cook are not enough to produce a good meal. Much depends on the vessels in which the food is prepared. Unless these are scrupulously clean, there will be a disagreeable odor or a taste of tin or iron, not to mention the danger of ptomaine poisoning. Many stomach troubles and other ailments can be traced back to this source. These dangers are overcome by the use of our

SANITO COOKING UTENSILS

These are specially made to reproduce the old German cooking utensils so universally used abroad. SANITO ware has a special lining which cannot crack or scale off. This lining is absolutely acid proof, and the vessels are always sweet, clean and wholesome. SANITO ware should be used for all ordinary culinary purposes. It will prove particularly valuable in preparing food for the sick or for infants.

Our Offer A set of SANITO ware consists of 6 pieces—2 bake pans (1 & 2qts.), 2 cooking kettles (2 & 4 quarts) and a 2-piece roaster. We will ship the complete set upon receipt of $2.50

Pleased with Remembrance

A few Sundays ago the Rev. W. L. Sawtelle read from the Presbyterian pulpit letters from all living ex-pastors of the church. One from Rev. Mr. Lord so pleased Mr. H. N. Gilbert, who was a member of the church during Mr. Lord's pastorate, that he wrote to the son, Mr. Chester S. Lord, of New York city, expressing his gratification at hearing the letter. Mr. Lord replied as follows:

Dear Mr. Gilbert: Thank you sincerely for your kind letter with reference to my father and his communication to the Presbyterian Church people. I am delighted to know that he is remembered so kindly and so affectionately there. He always considered that his work in Fulton was the best work of his life, and I am sure that he looks back to his pastorate there with greater gratification than to any other. He is hale and hearty in his eighty-eight year, goes fishing occasionally, and I think was out with a gun looking for squirrels last fall. His letters to me are quite as intelligent and as legible as any he has ever written. I think his later days have been very happy ones, aside from his grief occasioned by the death of my mother.

With thanks again for your very great kindness, believe me.

Always cordially yours,
Chester S. Lord.

A Calm Witness.

A lawyer was cross examining a witness with a view to getting him muddled in his testimony. The following questions and answers occurred:

"Did you see the plaintiff faint a short time ago?"

"Yes, sir."

"People turn pale when they faint, don't they?"

"No, sir; not always."

"What! Do you mean to tell me that a person can faint and not turn pale? Did you ever hear of such a case?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you ever see such a case?"

"I did, sir."

"When?"

"About a year ago, sir."

"Who was it?"

"'Twas a negro, sir."

The lawyer excused the witness.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

A Very Timely Story.

Apropos of the spitting notices posted throughout the city, the following squib in the May Lippincott's, which also contains many other articles worth reading, seems very timely

A mother whose little boy always suffers from car-sickness found it necessary to take him with her while shopping the other day, and as the distance was rather far to walk, she decided to risk taking him on the car. All huddled up in a corner he sat and his face kept growing paler and paler, while all the while his eyes seemed fastened with a hard, glassy stare on the car wall opposite him.

"I think we'd better get off for a little while," said his mother, watching him.

Out in the air the little fellow felt better, and with his voice quivering from earnestness he said.

"Muvver, did you see that sign in the car? That one that said five hundred dollars fine if you spit on the floor? Now, what do you think it would have cost my poor papa if I had womited?"

Do the right thing if you have Nasal Catarrh. Get Ely's Cream Balm at once. Don't touch the catarrh powders and snuffs, for they contain cocaine. Ely's Cream Balm releases the secretions that inflame the nasal passages and the throat, whereas medicines made with mercury merely dry up the secretions and leave you no better than you were. In a word, Ely's Cream Balm is a real remedy, not a delusion. All druggists, 50 cents, or mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York.

Not In His Line.

"They tell me," said the new reporter, who was doing an interview, "that you have succeeded in forging your way to the front."

"Sir," replied the self made man coldly, "you have been misinformed. I'm no forger."—London Globe.

National American Woman Suffrage Association.

The National American Woman Suffrage Association voted at the Chicago Convention that the only worthy memorial we could offer to Miss Anthony while her life work "The Enfranchisement of The Women of The United States" remained unfulfilled, was to raise a one hundred thousand dollar fund with which to push the work; this fund to be immediately available for use in the work. Twenty-five thousand dollars was pledged at the convention, but it must be remembered that this seemingly large amount included the annual pledges ordinarily made by States and individuals for the running expenses of the Association.

The Business Committee recently in session at Miss Shaw's home voted that in order to realize our memorial to Miss Anthony, extraordinary efforts must be made to bend every energy to reach our sympathizers and ask of them, not only a personal contribution, but their co-operation in an effort to interest women generally to recognize their individual debt to Miss Anthony, by a financial contribution as generous as it is possible for them to make.

It was accordingly decided to set apart the first week of June as a "Self-Denial Week" and to ask our members to consecrate during this week some service, deny themselves some luxury, in order to give some financial return to the fund. One week of sacrifice in recognition of the sixty years of sacrifice made for womankind by "Our Great Leader" is a small thing to ask of any woman, much less of those who believe in the absolute justice and necessity of our cause.

Make returns to the National Treasurer, or through your State Treasurer if you prefer. Stamps will gladly be received in payment.

Woman's Home Companion for May

Herman Pfeifer's beautiful prize cover gives much distinction to the May Woman's Home Companion. Another notable feature of this magazine is a full page reproduction of William Balfour Kerr's painting, "Memories." An aged Civil War veteran is carrying his company's colors in a Decoration Day Parade, his eyes almost closed in reverie. Behind him crowd the vague, shadowy forms of the gallant youths who followed the colors with him nearly half a century ago.

Dr. Edward Everett Hale gives some good advice to young married folk. In "Are We Ready for Our Children?" Christine Terhune Herrick approaches the problem of the child in the family from an actually new point of view.

Mrs. Sangster talks to the American woman of her duties in entertaining her friends. The Summer fashions, the Dressmaking Lesson, the Making of Lingerie Waists, are found in Grace Margaret Gould's Fashon Department. The other departments contain: "What to do With the Garden in May;" receipts for twenty different kinds of salads by Fannie Merritt Farmer; reviews of books.

The May issue is rich in fiction—"Dog in-the-Manger," "A heart Specialist," "Pancake Neighbors," "The Gentle Highway Man," are titles which will give some idea of the entertainment this magazine contains.

Kodol for Dyspepsia has helped thousands of people who have had stomach trouble. This is what one man says: "E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago, Ill.—Gentlemen: In 1897 I had disease of the stomach and bowels. I could not digest anything I ate and in the spring of 1902 I bought a bottle of Kodol and the benefit I received from that bottle all the gold in Georgia could not buy. I still use a little occasionally as I find it a fine blood purifier and a good tonic. May you live long and prosper. Yours very truly, C. N. Hoding, Ga., Aug. 27." Sold by druggists.

Remarkable Story of Frederick Jeffs, Who Was Marooned Alone on a Barren Island In the Pacific Ocean — Modern Robinson Crusoe For Whom Warship Was Sent.

LIKE a tale of the Robinson Crusoe brand is the story of Frederick Jeffs, American sailor, marooned on a barren island in the Galapagos group, off the coast of Ecuador. There is a good deal of up to dateness in the story, however, inasmuch as the United States navy department caused one of the vessels of Admiral Evans' great fleet to be detached and sent steaming over the southern seas to attempt his rescue.

It appears that this man was left on Indefatigable island last October as the sole human inhabitant. He had shipped on the bark Alexandra from New South Wales. The vessel became as "idle as a painted ship upon a painted ocean"—in other words, utterly becalmed—in the region of the Galapagos islands. Her captain and crew put out in the small boats to search for water when that necessity of life run out aboard ship. The mariners landed on Indefatigable, their boats were swept away, and for more than five months they subsisted on turtle meat and pelicans. They discovered plenty of fresh water.

Indefatigable island is said to be about fifty miles long. The ship's crew of captain and nine men landed upon one end, where they remained several months, improvising a camp. In the meantime members of the crew had made explorations inland and finally crossed to the other end of the island, where they found a harbor which they named Trappers' cove. The men reported back to camp with the recommendation that the party move to Trappers' cove, which was deemed a more favorable point from which to be picked up by a passing vessel.

Everybody was willing except Frederick Jeffs. Some of his mates declared that Jeffs was a stubborn person and bluntly refused to make the tiresome trek along the backbone of the rocky island. From later evidence it appears that the man was afflicted with pleurisy, and his companions abandoned him after he had stated that he did not care to risk the long tramp. They left him some food and a fire.

"There were plenty of turtles and pelicans," remarked one of these modern mariners, "and he could keep himself in provisions."

It required several days of rough walking to reach the opposite end of Indefatigable. After a few days at that point the sailing vessel Isidra Jacinta espied the castaways and took them aboard. Captain Bohnhoff of the rescuing vessel upon learning that Jeffs had been left on the other end of the island tried to reach that point and rescue the man, but was balked by opposing currents. The vessel landed the men at Guayaquil, Ecuador, where Captain Peterson of the lost Alexandra reported the plight of Frederick Jeffs to the American vice consul, Robert R. Jones. Mr. Jones notified the government at Washington, which in turn notified Mrs. Henry J. Claridge of Norwalk, Conn., a sister of Jeffs.

Mrs. Claridge prevailed upon the navy department to make an effort to recover her brother. She had but slight hope that he would be found alive. His shipmates differed from her in this respect. They said that Jeffs was a very hardy man, capable of withstanding much privation and exposure. His youth was in his favor, he being only twenty-nine years of age. The sailors had found pelican and turtle sufficient diet, though not much for variety.

Accordingly the great republic directed Admiral Evans to send the tender Yankton, a swift steamer, to Indefatigable island and bring off the Crusonian inhabitant if found alive.

Admiral Evans called for volunteers to undertake the rescue. Much of the sea area around the Galapagos group being uncharted, navigation there is perilous. Many men of the fleet responded to the call, including Lieutenant W. R. Gherardi, who was placed in command. The Yankton steamed away on her hazardous mission, the commander and his men landed upon Indefatigable, native guides from another island in the group were secured and a thorough search for the abandoned sailor was made. The camp of Jeffs was found, but the only things indicating his former presence there were a signal pole which he had reared in the hope of succor and a rusty razor with the sailor's name engraved on it.

After exhausting every effort to find Jeffs the Yankton reported back to the fleet. Lieutenant Gherardi expressing his keen disappointment. The fate of Frederick Jeffs is still a mystery.

FULTON HERO NO. TWO.

Brainard M. Pratt, aged 34 years, enrolled August 19, 1862, at Fulton to serve three years; mustered in as Captain Company A, 110th, August 25, 1862; discharged August 19, 1863. He was a small, slender man, with dark hair and keen black eyes, with considerable snap, ambition and business ability. As we were encamped in Patterson Park, Baltimore, Company A was the first company on the right of the Regiment, Company F, under Captain E. H. Boyd next, who was the ranking Captain and entitled to be Major. Captain Pratt wept aboard the Ericson in the officers' state room because he could not have the position. Colonel Littlejohn gave it to a stranger, James Hamilton, outside the Regiment. Captain Pratt left us to go on a plantation with Colonel Sage on the Mississippi.

Post Schenck received a letter from Iowa a few years ago for the purpose of establishing Captain Pratt's identity.

Local and Personal

Mrs. Isaac Hale has returned from Michigan.

Miss Lucy Gilbert is confined to her home by illness.

Mr. Carl Townsend, Rochester, has been the recent guest of Fulton friends.

Miss Mary Hoyt, Syracuse University, spent Sunday with her sister, Mrs. Harry Goodelle.

Mrs. W. M. Dunham was called to North Syracuse on Sunday by the death of her father, Mr. Stevenson.

It is estimated that $75,000 was invested by Fultonians in the stock of the Wisner mining corporations.

Messrs Roger Slater and Elmer Taylor have enjoyed splendid success in disposing of the car load of western horses which they purchased several weeks ago.

The work of reconstructing the portions of the Fort Stanwix canning factory destroyed by fire last Fall, was commenced on Monday. The work will be pushed rapidly to completion.

Mr. Arthur G. Gilbert is in Washington, D. C., where the Great Bear Spring company is erecting a water depot similar to the one they erected in Philadelphia last year.

Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Redhead will leave the last of this week for Baltimore, Md., where Mr. Redhead is a Lay Delegate to the General Conference of the Methodist church which will convene on May 2, and continue for a month.

Mrs. M. B. Clark was called last week to Cleveland, Ohio, by the illness of her son, George, who left Fulton about a year ago. Mrs. Clark spent a week caring for him then removed him to a sanitarium near Buffalo. He is suffering with myrasma and has been ill since December.

The barge canal construction work was a point of special interest on Sunday, the canal bank being lined with spectators all day. The cars used by the contractors for carrying dirt had been tipped into a deep hole by the caving in of the bank under the track, and it was a days work to place them back in position. The operation was watched with interest.

This Wednesday evening there will be a special meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, called by President Emerick, at which considerable important business will be transacted. New by-laws will be distributed; President Emerick will announce his committees; a new industry seeking location in Fulton will be discussed, and much of information to all of our residents will be presented. A full attendance is requested. The meeting is called for the City Hall at 8 o'clock.

Undoubtedly the automobile livery conducted by the proprietors of the automobile garage, North First street, will be a popular proposition this Summer. The proprietors will handle strictly high class machines and will send out none but competent drivers so that the luxury of automobiling will not be denied anyone, providing they possess the inclination. The schedule of prices per hour to per month may be found in another column. Call up the Fulton Garage for further information or when ever you feel like taking a ride.

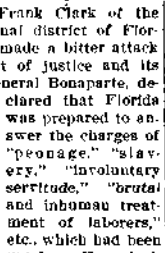
Arthur I. Vorys, Taft Boomer. Governor Toole — Representative Frank Clark. Seth Low and His Public Services.

ARTHUR I. VORYS.

ARTHUR I. VORYS, who is managing the Taft presidential boom, was considered an easy going country lawyer up to a few months ago, but the way he has handled things since, taking hold of the task of promoting and organizing Taft sentiment, has made older and more experienced politicians sit up and take notice. He was born in Lancaster, O., in 1856, went to the grammar schools and the Lancaster high school and for a time attended the Ohio State university. He studied law and in 1880 was admitted to the bar. He was twice city auditor of Lancaster and in 1900 was appointed state insurance commissioner, which office he still holds. He is genial and approachable and built a good deal on the Taft style. It is his busy season now, and between running the Taft literary bureau and straightening out the numerous complications which arise in the course of the canvass he has plenty to think about between now and the month of June.

It is an unusual thing for a governor to resign his office during the middle of his term, and the action of Governor Joseph K. Toole of Montana to this effect has created comment. The governor, who was born in Savannah, Mo., in 1851, and who was admitted to the bar in Helena in 1889, was a delegate in congress from Montana when it was a territory and did much to secure its admission as a state. He was its first governor and has several times been re-elected, the term for which he was last chosen expiring in 1909. In explanation of his resignation of office he refers to his long service and to a clause in the state constitution providing that an elective official shall not absent himself from the state for more than thirty days. He is not in good health and feels that his ailment could not be remedied within that time. He plans to spend some months in southern California and then return to Helena and resume the practice of his profession.

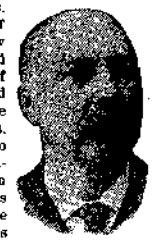


JOSEPH K. TOOLE.

The governor revisited Washington not long ago and registered at the New Willard. It reminded him, he said, of when he used to lodge at the old Willard. "I hadn't been there long," he remarked, "when I discovered that an army of rats made it their home. One day I found a hole as big as a biscuit in one of a brand new pair of custom made oxfords. I took the shoes to the affable Charlie Leavens, chief clerk of the place, and called on him to behold the ruin of my footgear.

"'It's those rats,' said Leavens, 'but leave the shoe, and I'll have it fixed so you'd never know anything ever was the matter.' I did as requested, and the next day my shoe came back very cleverly repaired. Thinking to put on the pair, I hunted up its mate, when, to my unqualified disgust, I found that it, too, had been as badly gnawed in the meanwhile as its fellow had previously been. Another trip to Leavens followed, but this time I took both shoes and told him to put the repaired one in the safe while the other was receiving the attention of the cobbler."

Much significance has been attached to the conference at the White House recently attended by cabinet members, by several eminent corporation lawyers, by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, and by Seth Low, ex-mayor of New York and former president of Columbia university, representing the Civic federation. One of the objects of the conference was discussion over the amendment of the Sherman anti-trust law so as to exempt labor organizations from classification as conspiracies in restraint of trade. In the course of his career ex-Mayor Low, who is a close friend of the president, has done a great deal to reconcile labor and capital. He has served on arbitration committees and has devoted much study to questions pertaining to the relations between employers and employed. Though he is a millionaire, he lives simply and is democratic in his ways, devoting himself chiefly to work for the public good. He gave a million dollars to Columbia university, about one-third of his fortune, and has always given liberally to many worthy charities, preferring to bestow his gifts while alive rather than leave so much wealth for heirs to quarrel over. He is something of a wit in a quiet way. Once while traveling in Rome he was accosted by a fellow American who was seeing the sights of the Eternal City. Wishing to be affable, the tourist said, "Now that you are in Rome Mr. Low, I presume that you are doing as the Romans do."



SETH LOW.

"Not at all," confessed the ex-mayor. "I am too much of an American for that."

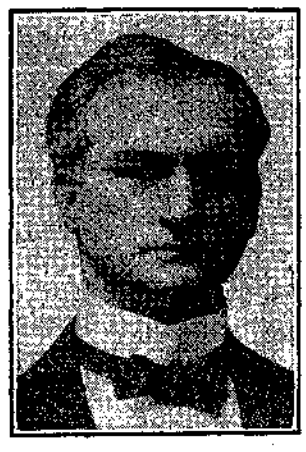
"What a discourtesy, though, to this grand old city!" protested the other, sweeping his hand toward the majestic dome of St. Peter's.

"What!" retorted Mr. Low. "Would you have me, too, engage in the laudable work of fleecing generous Americans?"

Dr. Ernst Brenner, the new president of the Swiss republic, received almost a unanimous vote on elevation to his new office. In Switzerland the president is chosen by votes of the federal assembly, and 185 out of 192 members cast their ballots in his favor. He left the post of chief of the department of justice and police to assume the presidency and is reputed a jurist of exceptional attainments. His knowledge of international law is extensive, and he is a man of wide culture and general experience in public affairs. He is fifty-two years old and a native of the canton of Basel. This is not the first time Dr. Brenner has been chief executive of the Swiss. He was first chosen to the office in 1900. The Swiss choose their president every year, and so the office can be passed around to a good many patriots. There is not much chance for its incumbent to grow rich on the salary, however, for it is only $3,000 a year. The duties of the chief magistrate are not as onerous as those of the American president, and the powers of the office are comparatively small. Dr. Brenner is largely responsible for the unification of the civil law, which has been in progress for some time.

DR. ERNST BRENNER.

Representative Frank Clark of the Second congressional district of Florida, who recently made a bitter attack on the department of justice and its head, Attorney General Bonaparte, declared that Florida was prepared to answer the charges of "peonage," "slavery," "involuntary servitude," "brutal and inhuman treatment of laborers," etc., which had been made. He challenged the truth of the statements of documents issuing from the department of justice. Congressman Clark was born in Eufala, Ala., in 1860 and educated in the common schools of Alabama and Georgia. He was admitted to the bar in 1881 and in 1884 removed to Florida. He has served as United States attorney for the southern district of Florida, has been three times chosen to the legislature and is now serving his second term in congress.



FRANK CLARK.

ANOTHER NEW SENATOR.

Frank B. Gary of South Carolina, Who Fills the Late Mr. Latimer's Seat.

Frank Boyd Gary, who has been chosen to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator A. C. Latimer of South Carolina, is a son of the late Dr. F. F. Gary and a nephew of the noted Confederate soldier Mart W. Gary. He has a brother, Eugene B. Gary, who is a member of the South Carolina supreme court, and still another, Ernest, who is a member of the bench of the United States circuit court. Senator Gary himself has been a special circuit judge. He was born in Abbeyville, S. C., in 1860, and studied at Union college, Schenectady, N. Y. He first entered politics in South Carolina in 1890, when he was elected to the state house of representatives, of which four years later he was chosen speaker. He served in that capacity for five years and in 1902 ran for governor, being the first advocate of local option as between prohibition and the dispensary system. He was again chosen to the legislature in 1906. He is a supporter of William J. Bryan for the Democratic nomination for president, and his nearest competitor for the senatorial post, Legrand G. Walker, recently announced himself in favor of Governor John A. Johnson as the Democratic nominee.

The Concertina.

The accordion, which was a development of a previously existing aeolina, was invented in 1829 by a Viennese named Damian and consists, as every one knows, of a small pair of bellows and a range of keys which regulate the admission of wind to metal reeds. The accordion sounds notes in one key only. The concertina proper was invented on the same date by Charles Wheatstone, who later became a famous man of science. It seems curious that a man whose reputation rests chiefly on his electrical work and discoveries, who was one of the earliest men of science to make experiments in connection with submarine cables and who, moreover, was an extraordinarily skillful decipherer of cryptographic writings, should also have dabbled in musical inventions. But, as a matter of fact, Wheatstone's musical work preceded his scientific discoveries. He went straight from school to the business of manufacturing musical instruments, and it was in 1829, at the age of twenty-seven, that he took out his patent for the concertina. But he was more interested in the scientific principles on which musical instruments are constructed than in music itself, and his acoustical and musical experiments soon drew him into the path which led to his many electrical discoveries.—London Globe.

A Singer's Avarice.

We hear a great deal about the enormous salaries paid to famous prima donnas nowadays, and we also hear a great deal about their charity and good nature. In the reign of Queen Anne one of the most celebrated singers was Mrs. Tofts, who had a veritable craze for money making as well as a great deal of personal conceit. Pope, who never spared any persons or objects that he satirized, wrote an epigram that must have greatly annoyed the avaricious singer:

So bright is thy beauty, so charming thy song,
As had drawn both the beasts and their Orpheus along,
But such is thy avarice and such is thy pride
That the beasts must have starved and the poet have died.

—London Standard.

The Moabite Stone.

The so called Moabite stone was discovered by the Rev. F. Klein in 1868 among the ruins of Dhiban, the ancient Dibon. The stone was of black basalt, rounded at the top and bottom, two feet broad, three feet ten inches high and fourteen inches in thickness, but was unfortunately broken by the Arabs, whose cupidity had been aroused by the interest that was taken in it by the explorers. The fragments were afterward collected and laboriously fitted together, and the stone now stands in the Louvre at Paris. The inscription of thirty-four lines is in Hebrew-Phoenician characters and appears to be a record of Mesha, king of Moab, mentioned in II Kings iii, referring to his successful revolt against the king of Israel.—New York American.

Excise Blanks Arrive.

County Treasurer Moore has received the new excise blanks and is prepared to issue licenses, which must be obtained by May 1.

It is reported that a large number of saloons have been blacklisted by the bonding companies and that there will be fewer licenses granted than usual. The new excise year will commence hereafter, on Oct. 1, instead of May 1, as for many years. Ten of the blacklisted vendors are reported to reside in this city.

THE FULTON TIMES

[Entered as second class matter, April 12, 1882, at the postoffice at Fulton, New York, under the act of Congress of March, 3, 1879.]

E. K. HUGHES, Editor
W. E. HUGHES, Proprietor

Issued Every Wednesday at No. 66 South First street, Fulton, N. Y.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 29, 1908

President Roosevelt has again intimated that he might exercise his veto power if Congress does not act according to what he thinks best in connection with the proposition to amend the anti-trust law.

The Secretary of the Treasury has transmitted to Congress an estimate of $13,000 for the payment of messengers of the respective States for carrying to Washington the votes of the electors for President and Vice President in the coming elections. Twenty-five cents a mile, one way, is the basis of payment.

The recent tour of some of the largest cities of this country by the distinguished Japanese business men and women, has served to call attention in more ways than one to the rapid progress Japan is making in competition along Occidental lines. It was significant, for instance, that each member of this party of sixty or more Japanese had his luggage marked in English letters.

Five hundred and forty-six delegates to the Republican National Convention to be held in Chicago on June 16, have now been chosen—a little over one half of the membership of the convention which was fixed in the National Committee's call at 980. Of these 546, so far named, 256 delegates are either instructed for Taft, committed to his support by resolutions of indorsement or preference, or have publicly announced in connection with their election their intention to vote for him at Chicago. Only this past week twenty Taft delegates were elected in Minnesota, giving Mr. Taft the solid delegation from that State, and in Massachusetts ten Taft delegates were elected.

The lavish entertainments of rich American diplomats, who have taken this means to establish a social standing abroad, have been severely condemned by Congress. Mr. Longworth, President Roosevelt son-in-law, declared that Emperor William had based his objections to Dr. David J. Hill, as Ambassador to his court, solely on account of that gentleman's lack of fortune and the fear that he would not be able to maintain an establishment equaling that of the present American diplomatic representative. Of course the aim of all the speakers has been to show that all these difficulties and embarrassments could be avoided if Congress would provide residences for its diplomatic representatives and compel them, by law, to occupy these houses during their term of official service.

Let us hope that the matter of the site for the Grant monument has been finally settled by the letter to one of the members of the Grant Memorial Commission from General Frederick D. Grant, who says, among other things: "The location in the Botanic Garden, ... is the one most beautiful and most appropriate for the memorial of my dear father, and the placing of the monument on that site would tend more toward beautifying the City of Washington than locating the monument on any other site within the District of Columbia. . . . . I beg, ... that you will use your valuable influence to have father's monument placed in the Botanic Garden and to prevent any change being made in the site which has been decided upon, as I am most anxious about this matter."

MARRIED

On Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Spencer, occurred the marriage of Miss Belle Spencer, formerly of this city and Mr. Henry King of Syracuse, the Rev. Mr. Betts of Syracuse officiating. The bride, who was gowned in grey broadcloth, was attended by Miss Nellie Roach of Syracuse as maid of honor. Her gown was of pink silk. Mr. King of Oswego was best man. A luncheon followed the ceremony and Mr. and Mrs. King are residing at No. 173 Grace street, Syracuse.

Fulton Chapter No. 167, R. A. M.

The Royal Arch Degree was worked by Fulton Chapter No. 167, R. A. M., in full form, in their tabernacle on Tuesday evening. There was a large attendance of local members, which was augmented by a delegation of ten members from Oswego River Chapter No. 250, led by Excellent Companion C. F. Loomis and H. D. Fox. At the conclusion of the degree work, refreshments were served and an adjournment was taken to the Masonic Club parlors, where an enjoyable social evening was spent. The Fulton Chapter is making excellent progress, and the constantly increasing number of applicants for membership this year may prevent the usual Summer recess. Mr. Charles Loomis has recently been appointed a member of the permanent body of the Grand Chapter of the State of New York by Grand High Priest Willis W. Rice.

A Communication.

The firemen of Fulton are deserving of great praise. I don't believe ever in the history of New York State have firemen answered an alarm so promptly as our Fulton firemen did Monday evening. In less than one minute the department was passing the Union Pacific Tea Store, 28 East First street, which is nearly a block from the engine house. In the last ten years I have seen departments in many large cities run against record time, but never have seen any that could beat our Fulton department, for quick, active men and finely trained horses. It was one of the prettiest runs I ever saw.

Now, Commissioners and citizens, don't forget our brave firemen—we have a department to be proud of.

Board of Public Works.

At the weekly meeting of the Board of Public Works held on Monevening, permission was granted the Fulton Contracting company to lay a narrow gauge railway from the Webb & Marvin coal trestle to the concrete mixer, corner of First and Rochester streets. In its permission the Board incorporates a designation of route along which the road is to be laid, the same crossing South First street above Broadway to the west gutter of said street, proceeding thence northerly in said gutter to a point about fifty feet northerly to the north wall of the Public Library, at which point it shall pass onto State property and continue northerly on the west of the present row of trees to its termination.

The Board requires that the contracting company shall furnish a bond the purpose of which shall be to keep and save the city harmless from all damages, costs and liabilities that might be incurred by reason of the maintenance of said railroad. The company must further make a deposit with the City Chamberlain in the sum of $1,000, the same to be placed to the credit of the improvement fund as security that the company will leave the highway in as good condition when the tracks shall be removed as it is in at present.

A sanitary association comprising several counties and officered as follows: President, Major Dunham, Cape Vincent; vice president, Dr. S. A. Russell, Fulton, and secretary, Dr. Willard, Watertown, was organized. Dr. Russell says he was successful in inducing the State Board of Health to send an illustrated lecture on Tuberculosis and also a Tuberculosis exhibit to Fulton in the near future.

On the Verge.

He considered it a parental duty to see that his daughter kept only the very best marriageable company.

"Mary," said her father, "you have been going with that Mitchell fellow for more than a year now. This courtship must come to a termination."

"Oh, pa, how can you talk so? He is, oh, so sweet and nice!"

"Ah!" And the fond father arched his eyebrows. "Sweet and nice, eh? Has he proposed?"

"Well, pa, not exactly." And the girl hung her head and fingered the drapery of her dress. "He hasn't exactly proposed; but, then, last evening, when we were out walking, we passed by a nice little house, and he said, 'That's the kind of cottage I am going to live in some day,' and I said 'Yes,' and then he glanced at me and squeezed my hand. Then, just as we got by, I glanced back at the cottage, and—and I squeezed his hand, pa."

"Oh, ah; I see! Well, we'll try him another week or two."—London Tit-Bits.

An Emended Sign.

Many a householder at the mercy of the painter will find a bond of sympathy with the students of Stanford university in the incident taken from the San Francisco Chronicle. The score of fraternity houses on the campus were in the process of being cleaned up in preparation for the receptions and luncheons to be given to visitors on the day of the big football game. A man got the contract to paint one of the houses white with the understanding that the job must be done and dry by a certain day. After making a rush start the painter asked permission to hang out his sign. His request was granted, and he put up a conspicuous announcement over the front porch, "These Premises Being Painted by Blank Blank."

Then the work dragged. He would come one day and stay away two. So the impatient collegians added to the sign until the announcement read:

"These Premises Being Painted by Blank Blank, Now and Then."

Cage For a Queen Bee.

When a queen bee becomes unproductive through old age, it is necessary for the bee keeper to supply the colony of bees with a new queen. This he does in the following manner: The old queen is removed from the hive and the bees are left alone for about twelve hours or longer, during which time they find out that they are queenless. The new queen is then put into a cage made of wood and wire cloth, with an opening through one end. This opening is filled tight with a mixture of honey and sugar. The cage thus prepared is laid upon the tops of the frames in the hive. The bees soon discover the new queen in the cage and set to work upon the honey and sugar. In the hive bees recognize friends and strangers by their sense of smell, and a strange queen entering a hive would be very quickly killed by the bees. By the time the queen is liberated from the cage she has acquired the scent of the hive and is therefore no longer a stranger.—London Globe.

Cornish Humor.

The magistrate at the Liskeard police court might well have excused the laughter which greeted the remark of a police witness only a short time ago who said with all seriousness: "He was drunk, your honor, and couldn't stand. I told him to go away, and as he wouldn't I locked him up."

The laugh in another court was against the solicitor who severely asked, "Were you present when you heard this?"

Mixed metaphors are not a peculiar nor indeed a common failing of the Cornishman, but a certain eloquent town councilor quite recently got entangled when in the course of a protracted debate on the momentous subject of the local dust bins he declared indignantly, "It is time we put our foot down with a loud voice."—English Illustrated Magazine.

How to Be Strong.

I would not enter in my list of friends a man who needlessly sets foot upon a worm.—Cowper.

Judicial Ignorance.

"Did the clock stop when you dashed it down cellar?" asked the police judge of the man who was charged with being disorderly.

"Of course it stopped. Did you suppose it went through to China?"

Modern Facilities.

"Who was dis Rip Van Winkle?"

"An old time guy wot slept in de mountains."

"Didn't have no public libraries, I s'pose, in his day?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Cruelty and fear shake hands together.—Balzac.

Good News for Those on the Lookout for Bargains!

.....Thanks to you our Easter trade was wonderfully good—our After-Easter business phenomenal. The sales for April broke all previous records. During the first week in May we're going to make a tremendous effort to excel even our OWN BEST previous efforts.

To stimulate selling to the utmost we will offer, beginning to-morrow morning, the most marvelous values in reliable, desirable, seasonable Spring garments and other Spring merchandise ever presented to you so early.

You know how scrupulously careful we are never to misrepresent facts; how cautious we are never to overstate values and YOU KNOW THAT WE MEAN EVERY WORD when we say absolutely and positively that we have never before offered you such inducements to buy, and if WE have never offered them rest assured no one else has. Selling starts to-morrow. You must not miss THIS sale even if you overlook all others. It would be most improvident—positive injustice to your own pocketbook—to ignore such savings on new Spring goods just when you need them most. Don't let distance keep you away. You can save your railroad fare twice over. Time and money could never be spent to better advantage. Of course it isn't necessary to add that it's to your interest to come early.

CHAPTER XXI.

MR. BILL WILLIAMS arrived in New York on Saturday morning. He had forethought enough to make the attempt and influence enough to succeed in it to have the limited stopped at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, where he took a fast auto cab, for which he had telegraphed, and was rushed directly to St. Luke's hospital on Cathedral heights. He paid the charge—expressing his firm conviction that the price was half the value of the machine and seven times the value of the thief who drove it—and hurried into the hospital, where he gave his name and begged to be taken to his afflicted son at once.

He was informed by the house surgeon that the patient was doing fairly well, though his temperature was still above normal. The physician thought, however, that the father's presence might rouse the patient's flagging spirits, but suggested that the first interview be short. A trim, fresh cheeked nurse was summoned, and without further ado she led the way to the elevator, which took them to the fourth floor. At the door of his son's room the old rancher paused.

"My dear," he said, "are you the young lady who has nursed my poor boy through this spell of sickness?"

"Yes, sir," answered the brisk young person in a tone somewhat more cheerful than the gravity of the occasion seemed to warrant.

"God bless you!" the anxious father murmured in a voice choked by his emotion. "Did—he—ask for me—often?"

The experienced young person hesitated, hanging for an instant between uncompromising truth and the wish to spare this kind old gentleman unnecessary pain. Womanlike, she decided upon charity rather than veracity.

"Oh, yes," she answered nervously, "though you know, of course, he—he has been just—well, a little delirious, I fear. You must be careful not to excite him, to control your feelings, sir."

The Texan's great heart was touched. His boy had been shouting out his name, even while pain and fever held him in their raging grip. The father, who could have faced a battery of artillery in action without blanching, was greatly overcome by what he read in the nurse's halting words. He leaned for support against the wall and furtively brushed his eyes, then looked up, striving to smile, and asked:

"Was he conscious when my telegram arrived? Did he know? Was he glad to hear that I was coming?"

"Very," answered the adroit young woman, blushing to the roots of her chestnut hair, that peeped from under a saucy little cap. She had made the first plunge and had no hesitation in going the limit.

The father's heart went out at once to this dainty angel of mercy and efficiency who had ministered to grief and suffering. He fumbled in his pocket and produced a large, double figured note, which he pressed into her hand.

"For you, my dear," he smiled, "a ribbon or something. There, there; it's nothing."

"But, Mr. Williams," she protested in charming confusion, "this is not at all necessary. I am paid, you know by—really, I couldn't think of"—

"Honey," he interrupted, while he gave her plump shoulder a fatherly pat, "it's just a little secret between you and me. Now run along. I want to see Dickie alone."

Again the nurse hesitated and, like her prototype in the proverb, was lost. It was best to be present at the interview, yet how could she refuse so simple a request from this moist eyed, generous old dear?

"Very well," she nodded; "I will stand outside. You promise to be very quiet?"

"I promise," answered Bill Williams huskily. Then he opened the door, closed it after him and tiptoed softly across the room.

The father found himself in a bare walled little room that was scrupulously clean and neat. The shades were drawn, yet by the dim religious light he espied a bandaged form apparently asleep upon a narrow brass bed. The face of the patient was in shadow, yet the Texan felt instinctively that he had found his martyred son at last. For a moment he could not speak. His emotions choked him, while two great tears rose up and rolled unheeded down his weather beaten cheeks. He sank on his knees beside the bed, stretched out his trembling arms and murmured brokenly:

"My boy! My boy!"

The Earl of Croyland rolled over on his back and stared at the sobbing apparition in wonder struck amaze. In dropping into a doze he had forgotten to remove his monocle, which by years of habit remained tight set in his noble eye.

"'Ow way!" he muttered feebly. "Don't be a silly ass!"

Bill Williams still remained upon his knees, his mouth wide open, into which the two tears aforementioned trickled unheeded. He was too bewildered fully to realize his ridiculous position all at once. That he had traveled over 2,000 weary miles for the dubious pleasure of kneeling by the bedside of this glass eyed lunatic was a thought which at first refused to percolate through his stunned cerebrum. He returned the stare and answered, with a series of hoarse, inarticulate gasps:

"Wha—you! My son—you—eh? Who—who the devil are you?"

The earl drew the sheet about his neck, closed his eyes and turned on his pillow languidly.

"No card—in fay—ah—nightshirt. I'm Richard Williams—San Antawnee—Texas. Get out!"

"You're a liar!" burst out the old man angrily, rising to his feet.

The Earl of Croyland pulled the bell above the head of his bed and waited in unruffled calm till the nurse appeared. He opened his eyes and pointed to his visitor.

"Er—show this odious person out, I wish to—er—sleep."

The girl stepped forward, laid a gentle hand upon the sufferer's forehead and whispered soothingly:

"There, there, Mr. Williams! Don't excite yourself. This gentleman is your father. Don't you know him?"

"Rot!" said the earl. "I haven't a father; been dead for fifteen years or I wouldn't be an earl—I mean—ah—it's dem nonsense!"

The nurse looked toward Bill Williams appealingly, indicating by a cautious gesture that he would better leave the patient for the present, but the visitor was otherwise disposed

"Go way!" he muttered feebly. "Don't be a silly ass!"

His face had turned a livid purple, and the flow of speech which had stuck in his throat now burst forth in a furious torrent:

"Good God!" he roared. "Do you think I ever had a thing like that for a son? He's not my boy, I tell you. What, this double jointed son of a one eyed cayuse. My Dick! Look here, young woman, I'll put the sheriff on to this asylum of yours! Oh, I know you!" he cried, excitedly pointing a shaking finger at the astonished earl. "You have swindled me. It was a trick to get me away from Texas while some of your black hearted confederates went for my deep water barber bill! You and Jacob Renwyck—that's it! I see it now, but I'll fix you yet. I start back for God's country as soon as I find my boy, and we'll see who's running the freeborn legislature of the great state of Texas, by gad! You"—

"Oh, Mr. Williams," the nurse broke in excitedly, "please, please be reasonable! Listen. It is some dreadful mistake—some similarity of names—some, oh, can't you see that we are not to blame? Calm yourself, for the sake of the patient—for your own sake—for my sake! There, now! Let's talk it over quietly and see if we cannot straighten out the tangle." She turned to the earl. "This gentleman," she said, indicating the visitor, "has traveled all the way from Texas to see his son, whom he learned had been hurt and brought to this hospital. Perhaps there are two Richard Williamses, and a very natural mistake may have arisen in"—

"O-h!" said the Earl of Croyland, a light of understanding slowly piercing the fog of his intelligence. "By Jove! Are you Dickie's governor?"

"Yes," snapped the Texan. "I am. What of it?"

The Englishman lay back on his pillow and laughed. It was an American joke, but he saw through it. Bravo!

"O-h," he sputtered, "really, you know, 'pon my word, it's droll—ha, ha—dash me—immense, by Jove!"

"Stop it," commanded Bill Williams sternly and turned to the nurse in charge. "Just leave us for a few moments, will you? There; you needn't be afraid. Nothing is going to happen. This gentleman and I will talk the matter over between us calmly, and I'll leave in ten minutes."

"It's all right, nurse," the earl seconded; "leave us, please. I understand the situation, but hanged if it isn't rippin. All the way from Texas, eh? Ha, ha!"

The puzzled nurse departed, leaving the two incomprehensibles to themselves, and so soon as the door had been closed the elder of the lunatics demanded an immediate explanation. The Earl of Croyland gave it to him, wondering the while how this droll old party could fail to appreciate a joke of so clear and so excellent a quality. He told of his meeting with Richard, the automobile accident and his own craftiness in assuming his friend's name and why he did it. Croyland had never seen Richard's father while in Texas, for he had visited the son on the latter's own ranch while the boy and his father had been temporarily estranged.

"Oh, I say," he asked, "don't you think it was awfully clevah of me to think of that on the spur of the moment, we might say, without any preconceived thought whatevah?"

"Brilliant," said Mr. Williams, with dry irony. "But let me tell you one thing, young man—it's a good thing that you're a cripple."

"Er—why?" asked the Briton vacantly.

"Why?" echoed the giant of the Lone Star State in genuine disgust. "Why? Because if you weren't one already it would take a bigger doctor's shop than this to patch you up. Who sent me those telegrams? Where's my son?"

"Don't know anything about either of 'em," the other responded carelessly, while he marveled at the Texan's show of spirit. "The last I saw of Dick he was going up to Irvington to call upon the Renwycks—Jacob Renwyck, ye know—millionaire and all that sort of thing."

"What!" gasped Mr. Williams. "My son gone to call on Jacob Ren— Drop it! Drop it! No nonsense now! What are you talking about?"

Lord Croyland explained, but the very fact that Richard had dared to communicate with Jacob Renwyck, even to oblige a friend, put the father in a new fury.

"Of course," said the earl, "he couldn't possibly be out there now, but you might phone and make certain. I dare say they have a telephone."

"No, sir," stormed the old gentleman, walking up and down excitedly. "No more long distance lies for me. I've had enough of that already. I'll just go up to Irvington myself and pick up his trail. I want my boy, I tell you, and I'm going to find him. If he isn't at Irvington my trip won't be wasted after all. I'll have the satisfaction of wringing Jacob Renwyck's neck. I'll bet he's responsible for those wires and the whole thing. Where's the infernal place, and how do you get to it?"

Lord Croyland, who was not particularly interested in Mr. Renwyck's neck, gave directions cheerfully, and the distracted father started on his way. When he had gone the nervous nurse came once more to the patient's side.

"Mr. Williams," she asked, "is there anything that I can do for you?"

"Yes," lisped the earl, with a languorous smile. "I'm not at home to any one else to day unless Miss Sempton calls, and now just open the window, will you, my dear, and let the—ah—sulphur out? A most disagreeable old party—really."

KEPT HER PROMISE.

Rosie Boote Said She Would Wed a Nobleman and Did So.

The Marchioness of Headfort, who is visiting this country with her husband, was formerly a music hall favorite. The Marquis of Headfort, a nobleman who, with the exception of the Duke of Abercorn and Duke of Leinster, enjoys the highest title in Ireland, fell madly in love with her when as Rosie Boote she was doing the part of Mazie in "The Messenger Boy" at the London Gaiety. He determined to wed the fascinating actress despite the protests of his mother, the colonel of the Life guards, of which he was a member, and the king himself.

THE MARCHIONESS OF HEADFORT.

When the marchioness was singing at the Gaiety and before she had met her present husband she had a particularly fetching song which ran thus:

Some day I mean to wed a duke—don't doubt me!
And none will dare to hint rebuke about me.
The biggest swells will come to me
On Thursday afternoons for tea,
And emperors will make their bows
When I'm at Cowes.

When the marquis heard her sing the lines he determined to help her fulfill her promise. Among the obstacles in the way was the opposition of the king. This led to the nobleman's writing the famous note to his majesty which concluded thus: "The lady I am about to marry is Miss Rosie Boote of the Gaiety theater, who doubtless is known to your majesty." The marquis was reprimanded by the colonel of the Life guards on account of this letter. He was ordered to duty in India, but resigned from his regiment rather than give up his fiancee.

REAR ADMIRAL SPERRY.

The Naval Officer Who Will Bring Our Big Fleet Home.

It will be a unique honor which will come to Rear Admiral Charles Stillman Sperry in taking the battleship fleet now in the Pacific from San Francisco across the widest of the oceans to Samoa and Hawaii, Australia and the Philippines and then through the Indian ocean and the Suez canal and back to Hampton Roads. The illness of Rear Admiral Evans, which compels him to yield up the command of the fleet on its arrival at San Francisco, is a piece of good luck to Rear Admiral Sperry. But his responsibilities will be heavy in conducting the battleships, which will number eighteen on leaving San Francisco, on this part of their cruise. During the Spanish war he was equipment officer in the New York navy yard. He did not figure in the fighting with Spain, but a little later he took command of the Yorktown in Philippine waters and directed the actions of the landing party on the eastern shore of Luzon. The episodes of this movement made it one of the most exciting in the campaign against Aguinaldo. The Yorktown's landing party was captured by Aguinaldo's men. Some were wounded, and all were carried away as prisoners. Then began the famous chase after the insurgents and their prisoners throughout the length of the island, resulting in the release of the captured men at Aparri. The task of the officers and soldiers who went to the rescue of the Yorktown men was popularly known as the "hare and hounds" expedition. The men endured great hardships.

Admiral Sperry was born in New York in 1847. He married Edith Marcy, a granddaughter of the famous Governor William L. Marcy of New York, graduated from the Naval academy in 1868 and became a rear admiral in 1906. He was a delegate to The Hague peace conference of last year, has been president of the war college and participated in the voyage of the "white squadron" to Europe and South America in 1891-3.

A Disgusted Poet.

One day Charles Baudelaire, the French critic and poet, came to Maxime du Camp's rooms with his close cropped hair dyed green. Du Camp affected not to notice it. Baudelaire did all he could to direct attention to it, and finally, as his author-artist friend persisted in not noticing it, he burst out, "Don't you see anything strange about me today?" Du Camp answered: "Not at all. Lots of people have green hair." Baudelaire left at once, disgusted.

NEW KENTUCKY MEMBER.

Unique Character and Career of Senator Elect William O. Bradley.

Ex-Governor William O'Connell Bradley, who was recently chosen to the United States senate from Kentucky, was the first Republican ever elected chief executive of the state. His choice for this office occurred in 1895, and he filled it for the four years succeeding. There are a number of unusual things about his career. Born in Girard, Ky., in 1847, he had little opportunity as a boy for gaining knowledge, yet at eighteen he was admitted to the bar by special act of the legislature. When only twenty-three he was chosen prosecuting attorney of his county. He tried as a boy of fifteen to enter the Federal army while the civil war was in progress, but could not get in until he was eighteen and had served only a few months when the war came to a close. When he was twenty-five he made a canvass for election to congress as a Republican, his district being at that time hopelessly Democratic. He ran for congress time and again, and he was his party's candidate for senator four times before he was chosen to that office. In 1887 he was an unsuccessful candidate for governor, and in 1888 he received 100 votes for the Republican nomination for vice president. He was one of the famous 306 who stood out for a third term for General Grant at the Republican national convention of 1880. He is a typical old school Kentuckian, as his father was before him. The elder Bradley rose from the position of a poor farmer's boy to that of leadership at the bar. As a gawky lad he once visited the county sent.

"What is that?" he asked of some man who chanced to be passing.

"That's the courthouse, you fool," was the response.

"And who is that talking so loud?"

"That's a lawyer making a speech."

"Can I go in?"

"Yes."

Bradley sneaked in and took a sent on the rear bench. The eloquence of the speaker so impressed him that he decided then and there to be a lawyer.

The Clever Romans.

It seems quite surprising that the ancient Romans did not acquire the art of printing with movable types, inasmuch as they came so very near to it. They had wooden blocks carved with words in reverse, by means of which they stamped those words on pottery while the latter was as yet unbaked and soft. Incidentally it may be mentioned that they knew the modern method of mending broken pots by means of rivets, and many pieces of pottery thus restored have been dug up. In ancient Rome there was one daily newspaper, which was written entirely by hand. Furthermore, the Roman senate had a publication which corresponds to the Congressional Record, being a report of the daily proceedings of that important legislative body. It likewise was written by hand. Speaking of baked clay, one might mention the fact that the little boys of Rome 2,000 years and more ago were accustomed to play knuckle down with marbles of that material just as children do now.

He Was a Judge.

One of the consuls to Persia during a visit home said at a dinner in Chicago:

"Lady Drummond Wolffe once got permission to visit the late shah's harem. She took a friend with her who was about to be married. The two Englishwomen wandered over the palace, and presently the shah encountered them.

"'Come here,' he said to Miss Blank in his crude French.

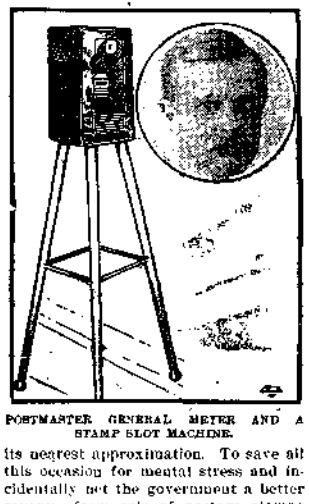
"'You are about to be married?' he said.

"'Yes, your highness.'

"'It's late!'"—Boston Post

The Knock-out Blow.

The blow which knocked out Corbett was a revelation to the prize fighters. From the earliest days of the ring the knock-out blow was aimed for the jaw, the temple or the jugular vein. Stomach punches were thrown in to worry and weary the fighter, but if a scientific man had told one of the old fighters that the most vulnerable spot was the region of the stomach, he'd have laughed at him for an ignoramus. Dr. Pierce is bringing home to the public a parallel fact; that the stomach is the most vulnerable organ out of the prize ring as well as in it. We protect our heads, throats, feet and lungs, but the stomach we are utterly indifferent to, until disease finds the solar plexus and knocks us out. Make your stomach sound and strong by the use of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and you protect yourself in your most vulnerable spot. "Golden Medical Discovery" cures "weak stomach," indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver, bad, thin and impure blood and other diseases of the organs of digestion and nutrition.



The "Golden Medical Discovery" has a specific curative effect upon all mucous surfaces and hence cures catarrh, no matter where located or what stage it may have reached. In Nasal Catarrh it is well to cleanse the passages with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy fluid while using the "Discovery" as a constitutional remedy. Why the "Golden Medical Discovery" cures catarrhal diseases, as of the stomach, bowels, bladder and other pelvic organs will be plain to you if you will read a booklet of extracts from the writings of eminent medical authorities, endorsing its ingredients and explaining their curative properties. It is mailed free on request. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. This booklet gives all the ingredients entering into Dr. Pierce's medicines from which it will be seen that they contain not a drop of alcohol, pure, triple-refined glycerine being used instead.

Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page Illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser will be sent free, paper-bound, for 21 one-cent stamps, or cloth-bound for 31 stamps. Address Dr. Pierce as above.

DROP IN YOUR PENNY.

Then if You Are Lucky You May Get a Postage Stamp.

To be able to buy a postage stamp with as little trouble as one can get a package of chewing gum out of a slot machine would be a great convenience. When the postoffice is not open or is not near at hand the usual thing is to bother the nearest druggist if one is in need of stamps. Oftentimes the drug clerks are all busy putting up prescriptions, and to get one little two cent postage stamp may involve waiting until patience ceases to become a virtue and only induces profanity or its nearest approximation. To save all this occasion for mental stress and incidentally net the government a better revenue from sale of postage stamps Postmaster General George von L. Meyer proposed that slot machines for this service be tried. There are a number of such inventions, and some thirty-five of them have been undergoing tests in several large cities.

In several instances at least attempts to beat the machines by imposing counterfeit coins upon them have been quite successful. It is claimed that others, however, are able to distinguish between the true coins and the false. Usually the machines are built in series, some furnishing one cent stamps when the proper coin is placed in the slot, some two and five cent postage, etc. In the case of one machine to obtain a two cent stamp it is necessary to insert two pennies, one at a time, the first releasing a lever and the second causing the stamp to protrude from the aperture. If the machines are approved, it is the intention to place them in hotel lobbies, drug stores and other places convenient to the public.

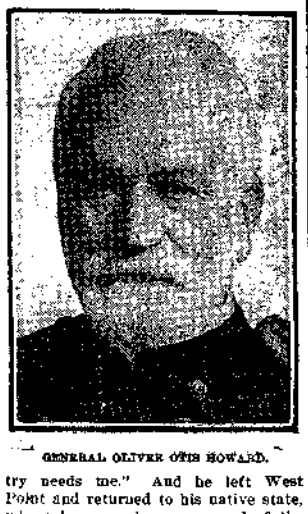
In the Drinking Days.

A once well known individual who had lived every day of his life and gained from it a great experience left the following advice—and little else—to his sons: "Drink slow; do not mix your liquor; never sit with your backs to the fire." It was an excellent precept for the era in which it was given—the times when the dining room door was kept locked that there might be no shirking the claret and when the only chance at the circuit mess of escaping intoxication was to drop under the table "like the rest," as Lord Cockburn tells us he did, and lie quiet—nay, even when our judges resented that discredit should be brought on drinking by misconduct. Everybody drunk, and much too much, in those days, but especially the upper classes. A well known politician discharged his coachman for overturning him in his carriage. "I had certainly drunk too much, sir," urged the poor man, "but I was not very drunk, and gentlemen, you know, sometimes get drunk." "I don't say you were very drunk for a gentleman," returned his master, "but you were exceedingly drunk for a coachman!"—London Illustrated News.

General Howard

Famous Soldier and Philanthropist For Whom a Higher Rank Is Proposed—Once an Indian Fighter.

It was the late Senator Redfield Proctor of Vermont who introduced in the senate the bill afterward passed by that body placing General Oliver Otis Howard on the retired list of the regular army as a lieutenant general. The movement to honor the distinguished general in this way did not originate with him, for he is as modest as he is courageous. The suggestion was at once indorsed all over the country, for it was felt that such a recognition of the services of the last surviving corps commander of the Federal forces in the civil war would be most fitting. It is considered doubly deserved because of the great value of General Howard's work as a citizen in the field of philanthropy and education as well as his heroism upon many battlefields. He is a veteran of two wars and of numerous Indian campaigns, and as a soldier of the cross and an ambassador of peace he has earned the undying gratitude of his countrymen. He has received the degree of LL. D. from several institutions of learning, has been made a chevalier of the French Legion of Honor, has received a medal of honor from congress and has been president of the Medal of Honor Legion.

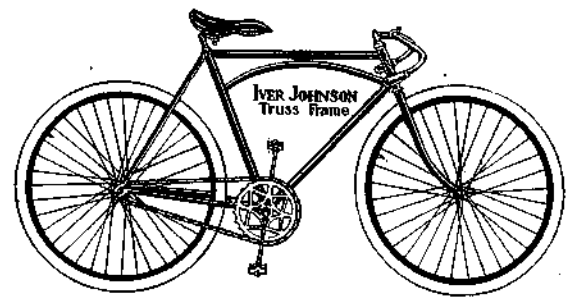


General Howard will be seventy-eight in November. Leeds, Me., was his birthplace, and he graduated at twenty from Bowdoin college. Four years later he graduated from West Point academy and saw his first field service in the Seminole campaign in Florida. He was a professor of mathematics at West Point when the civil war broke out and at once asked for a leave of absence, but it was refused him. "Well, then, here is my resignation," said young Howard. "My country needs me." And he left West Point and returned to his native state, where he was given command of the Third Maine volunteers, the first three year regiment from the state. To mention the battles in which he participated would be almost an enumeration of the big battles of the war. He was a leader in twenty-two noted engagements, marched with Sherman to the sea, lost an arm at Fair Oaks, several times had his horse shot under him and in 1864 was appointed commander of the Army of the Tennessee. His great work immediately following the civil war was performed as commissioner of the Freedmen's bureau. During the nine years from 1865 to 1874 he served in this capacity, distributing $13,000,000 and solving for the government the problem of putting the liberated slaves on their feet. Then came his service in Indian campaigns. He commanded in the Nez Perce campaign and in the Bannock war and has written several books about his experiences with Indians, many of whom he has won over from hostility to loyalty to it. He reached the rank of major general in 1886 and in 1894 went on the retired list.

General Howard has always been noted for his moral as well as physical courage and stood out against intemperance and profanity in the army when it was not very popular to do so. At Bowdoin he was known as "pious," but he could whip any man in his class. Going through New York on his way to the front in 1861, he was tendered a banquet at the Astor House. Much wine was drunk. When it came his turn to respond to a toast he raised a glass of water and said:

"Gentlemen, our country is in danger. I go at its call to do my duty. The true beverage of the soldier is cold water. In this I pledge you."

It is said that while a student at Bowdoin a classmate went on a disgraceful spree, and report had it that young Howard was the offender. He was engaged at the time to a Miss Wait of Portland, and her parents forbade him to visit their home. It was six months before the real facts became known, and during that time Howard suffered so much that he never afterward touched liquor.



In talking of the battle of Fair Oaks the general once said: "I was shot in the wrist. Twenty minutes after my first wound I was hit by a ball in the left elbow which passed to my right arm and shattered the bone. I was so intent on victory that I did not know I was hurt. Later I was placed on a table and put to sleep, and when I awoke my strong right arm was gone."

A Mercenary Boy.

"When I was a boy," said the man who insisted that men were more mercenary than women, "I had a little friend named Willie. Willie appeared one day with a fine apple.

"'I'll give you this apple,' he said to a little girl, 'for twenty kisses.'

"The little girl was amazed. That was not at all like Willie. Nevertheless she consented.

"'Shut your eyes,' said Willie. 'Sit down here and shut your eyes. And, mind you, if you open them the bargain is off.'

"The little girl obeyed, and slowly, very slowly, the kisses began to fall upon her lips. One, two, three, four (a long pause), five, six (another long pause), seven (pause), eight, nine, ten (intolerable pause).

"'Oh, Willie, hurry!'

"'I'm not Willie.'

"The little girl opened her eyes in astonishment and drew back her pretty mouth from the advancing lips of a strange boy, a very common, shabby sort of boy, whom she had never seen before.

"'Why, where's Willie?' she cried.

"'He's down the street,' was the reply, 'sellin' yer kisses for two apples apiece. Better shut yer eyes again. The next three boys is terrible ugly.'"—St. Louis Republic.

A Fair Jury.

In a suit some years ago between father and son before an Indiana justice of the peace the sextet comprising the jury came in after three hours' deliberation with the following impartial verdict: "We, the jury, agree to find judgment for neither plaintiff nor defendant and find that each pay half the costs." It is said the verdict struck every one as being so unusually fair that even the parties to the action were satisfied.—Case and Comment.

His Feelings Were Hurt.

It is strange how unreasonable some people are in business—how unreasonable and how inconsiderate of the feelings of others. As an example, there is the case of a fidelity company in New York which suddenly and arbitrarily canceled the bond it had issued for a man attached in a fiduciary capacity to an important concern. It was the most natural thing in the world for the man to display some feeling and to demand to know the reason for such action. And the inconsiderate head of the bonding company wrote him to this effect:

"Because you were convicted of forgery under another name in the year —— and served a term in the state prison at ——."

The recipient of the note felt so hurt that he couldn't reply. He still is silent.—New York Globe.

THE OLD FASHIONED WAY OF BANKING has been ours for twenty years. No matter what others may do we do not change. The old fashioned way of doing things in banking has always proven to be the best. The old time friendships, the old home, the old memories and the things we love, and the old fashioned bank we never can forget. Some folks change their ideas or methods from the old to the new once in a while, but somehow after a time they wander back to the old home where they feel acquainted, where the hand clasp is firm, the look from the eye is straight, and they feel secure. In these days of speculation and extravagance, of storm and stress, it behoves every man and woman to stop and think. A Tennessee congressman enjoys telling a story of a darky in his district who in a way is something of a philosopher.

Some one was saying to Mose one day: "You're always in trouble, Mose. Why can't you try to do better? You're a likely sort of darky, and you could get along very well if only you'd behave yourself—keep a steady job instead of drinking bad whisky and getting yourself behind the bars half the time."

"Excuse me, boss," said Mose, with a grin, "but it looks to me like I makes more money this way. When I works hard I gets $7 a month and my board. When I gets arrested the jedge he says to me that it will be $10 or thirty days. How kin I afford to work for $7 a month when I'm worth $3 more in de lockup?"—St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

Our new pastor, Rev. Summers, of Oswego, was invited to be present that the people might meet him, and he and his wife came. Rev. Pullen has been with us four years and during that time our church has been thoroughly repaired to the expense of over $1,500, most of which is due to the untiring efforts of Rev. A Remarkable Suicide.

A man who had visited Paris was telling of an extraordinary suicide he had heard of in that gay city. "He was a Frenchman, who was nothing if not original," said the teller of the tale, "and even when he grew despondent he planned his death in a most original fashion. He locked the door of his room in the Rue Nitot and, removing the weights of the window cord, fastened them to the window itself. He added to the weight of the window by attaching six flatirons. On the sill he adjusted a large triangular bread knife, such as is used by chefs, and made ready a small balloon, capable of lifting fifty pounds. The ingenious Frenchman then put his head out of the window after attaching the balloon to his neck and by releasing the clamp that held the window cut his head off completely with the improvised guillotine. The decapitated body was discovered several days later, but it was not until the balloon and the head were found a week later in the field of a peasant, eighteen miles from Paris, that the method of suicide was really known."

Making Animals For Noah's Ark.

One of the quaintest industries of Germany is the manufacture of wooden toys, which has been carried on for centuries by the famous toymakers of Nuremberg and its environs at the edge of the Black forest. The 1,400 inhabitants of Seiffen live by work on wooden toys, their specialty being animals in pens and the Noah's ark. One family makes the cows, another the horses or goats and still another the lions and elephants, etc. Each family sells its products directly to toy agents who come periodically to buy the separate pieces. The manufacture of wooden animals is quite simple, but does not want for ingenuity. The work starts with a specially prepared circle or wheel of white wood, which is turned and grooved to make the outline of a pony, horse or deer. The toymakers slice these wheels as a loaf of bread is sliced. The roughly outlined pieces then pass into other hands in the family and by stages are gradually brought to a finished state.—Popular Mechanics.

Leading Enactments of Session Just Closed—Banking Reform.

GOVERNOR WON AND LOST

Had Over Twenty Bills Passed, but Measures He Most Desired Were Defeated—Important Codifications of Laws—Special Session Is Unpopular

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

Albany, April 29.—A retrospect of the legislative session of 1908 reveals a curious situation. The curious part is that scarcely any person or interest bearing any relation to the legislature is satisfied with the result of the session.

Governor Hughes is dissatisfied because of the wholesale slaughter in both houses of the legislation in large part that he has recommended, notably the anti race track bills, which were beaten in the senate; the direct nomination bill, beaten in the assembly; the various ballot and primary reform measures and the bill putting telegraph and telephone companies under the control of the public service commission.

The senators went away from the capital dissatisfied because of the wholesale slaughter of senate bills in the assembly. The reverse of this statement affected the lower house.

The Democratic party is unhappy because of the small amount of important legislation of general effect that the majority party allowed it to put through the legislature. The Republicans are dissatisfied because their governor has announced his intention of bringing them back to Albany for an extra session when there is seemingly no hope for a reversal of legislative opinion on any of the measures that have been considered. It is safe to state that no bill defeated this year will be enacted at the session called to open May 11 at 8:30 in the evening.

SENATOR HORACE WHITE OF SYRACUSE.
(Senator White is a possible Republican nominee for lieutenant governor. As chairman of the cities committee he has considerable power in the upper house. He is one of the wealthiest members of the legislature.)

Number of Bills Introduced.

The session of 1908 has been one of the busiest of recent years, except that of 1907, which in several respects was a record breaker. This year about 1,600 bills were introduced in the assembly and about 1,000 in the senate. Last year 1,987 bills were introduced in the assembly and 1,198 in the senate. But of course it is not sound to judge of the success of a session by the number of bills introduced. The smallness of the number of bills introduced rather than the largeness of the number should be considered mark of merit.

Banking Reform.

The most important accomplishment of the legislature of 1908 was the reformation of the banking laws of the state under the supervision of Governor Hughes and the superintendent of banking, Clark Williams. Senator Percy Hooker handled the bills in the senate, and Assemblyman James Francis of New York took care of them in the assembly. Grady in the senate and Palmer and D. C. Robinson in the assembly led the attack on the bills.

Probably the most important of the banking bills was that signed by Governor Hughes last week providing for the transfer from the attorney general to the state superintendent of banks initiative in the matter of liquidation of moneyed corporations. This bill, which was introduced by the assembly committee on banking, also gives the superintendent of banks control in such cases similar to that enjoyed by the federal comptroller of the currency over national banks.

The new law provides, among other things, that an institution of individual bankers of whose property the superintendent has assumed charge may resume business only with the permission of the superintendent and on conditions specified by him.

The superintendent is to conduct the liquidation through one or more special deputy superintendents.

In all twenty-one banking reform bills were passed and became laws.

The new restrictions placed on banking operations are based on the lessons taught by the recent panic and are calculated to do away with recurrence of many of the unfortunate developments of the late financial troubles.

Telegraph and Telephone Companies.

The defeat of the measure putting telephone and telegraph companies under the jurisdiction of the public service commission was unexpected. After passing the senate its final adoption by the assembly was deemed certain. But the assembly as a body did not get a chance to act on it, as the assembly rules committee would not report it out.

New Highway Law.

A very important accomplishment of the legislature was the codification of the highway laws of the state and the laying out of an immense system of new roads and road improvements. This work will prove of great value to present and future generations.

The new highway law, in creating a state highways commission, which will take charge of state road construction and maintenance beginning Jan. 1, 1909, takes from the state engineer's department a large amount of work and responsibility.

New Military Code.

The military laws of the state have been codified in a manner entirely satisfactory to the state authorities and the men and officers of the national guard, though many serious difficulties arose in the solving of difficult problems.

The fish and game laws have also been thoroughly revised and codified and now provide for hunters' licenses.

Other Bills Passed.

The session passed laws promoting the advancement of barge canal construction, several laws of decided benefit to New York city and others reorganizing the state fair management and the mode of conducting various of the state institutions.

The assembly passed bills providing for investigation of bovine tuberculosis, for an official primary ballot, a bill in aid of alien poor and an important pure food bill.

Killing of Election Bills.

General disapproval of the radical changes in the present election laws was evidenced by the holding of the direct nominations and Massachusetts ballot bills in committee in both senate and assembly. The initiative and referendum bills were also "smothered" in committee.

The most important excise bill passed was the Whitney bill, formulated by the excise department and later amended. Among other things, the Whitney bill provides that any liquor license shall be revoked if gambling is permitted on the premises covered by the license.

The much agitated "three platoon" police bill was passed in senate and assembly through the efforts of Assemblyman Francis of New York, who labored unceasingly in favor of it. The bill affects cities of the first and second classes.

While Governor Hughes had a total of over twenty bills passed that he advocated, he was most vitally interested in the anti race track bills and the attempted removal of Superintendent of Insurance Otto Kelsey. It is believed that the defeat of the anti-racing bills is the reason why the special session was called. The election in the Niagara-Orleans district, no matter how it results, will not affect the fate of the racing bills. Their opponents already have two other senators weaned from the governor's side.

After a bitter fight the anti bucket shop bill passed at the very last moment.

No Jackson Investigation.

The failure of the session to take up the subject of investigating the department of Attorney General Jackson was due to the disinclination of the Republican party leaders to add to the length of the session. Investigations always prove lengthy. The resolution made very little headway in the senate. The passing of the optometry bill, which puts out of business many irresponsible venders of eyeglasses, was an important step and places the oculists on much the same footing as dentists and osteopaths. If the governor signs the bill, every person who prescribes eyeglasses will have to pass an examination directed by the state board of regents and receive a certificate to that effect.

Much spirited opposition developed against the optometry bill, aroused by many physicians who were strongly opposed to the bill.

Bill Introducing Records.

The senators who introduced the largest number of bills were Carpenter with about eighty, Saxe forty-eight, Ackroyd thirty-eight, Grady thirty-five and Armstrong thirty.

The assemblymen with the longest bill introducing records were Cuvillier of New York with a total of seventy-six, Merritt fifty-five and DeGroot thirty-five. Assemblymen Rose, Shutta, Morgan and T. R. Staley were unique in introducing only one bill each.

The biggest appropriations of the session were for the support of government, the educational and the lunacy departments.

Fire insurance is not suffering to the extent that is asserted prevalent among life insurance companies, according to the insurance department.

Fire risks aggregating $5,440,407,457 were written by fire insurance companies in the state in 1907, according to the report of Superintendent Kelsey. This is an increase of $261,700,070 as compared with the preceding year. In the same period the marine and inland risks written amounted to $581,595,813, an increase of $76,959,174 over 1906.

Assemblyman Cuvillier of New York talks so much and introduces so many bills that practical jokers are always on the lookout to play some trick on him to "get square" with him for wasting so much of the lower house's time. One day before the session closed a wag put in the bill box a measure signed with Cuvillier's name wiping out the government of the city of New York. Mr. Cuvillier indignantly repudiated the bill when its title was read in the house by Clerk Ray Smith and

Some years ago a western man entered J. G. Brown's studio and seemed to gain satisfaction in finding its familiar features unchanged. He told the artist that in his boyhood he had worked in the streets of New York and, with others of his class, had served as a model for one of the pictures of street boys. He had gone west and had prospered and now had returned with a desire to become the owner of the group picture in which he and some of his boyish cronies appeared. He wanted it as a reminder of the struggles of his boyhood. He looked back on those days as being quite as happy as any he had ever known. The picture, says W. Howard Standish, discussing J. G. Brown, a painter of humble folk, had long ago been sold, and, although the would be purchaser offered to give his check for $25,000 for the work, the artist was unable to supply any clew to its whereabouts.—New Broadway Magazine.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Articles of Incorporation Filed. New Bylaws and Resolutions Adopted — Status of Federal Building — Committees Selected.

A special meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was held last Wednesday evening, at which considerable business of importance was transacted. President L. W. Emerick called the meeting to order and explained that articles of incorporation has been secured from the Secretary of State. New by-laws had been drawn up, and as Secretary A. T. Jennings explained, they were not radically different from those previously adopted, except that they conformed to the new order of things, they were adopted and ordered printed.

Mr. Emerick spoke of a new industry, which he thought would be a desirable acquisition to Fulton. He had suggested to the representative of the concern that a definite proposition to the Chamber be presented at the earliest practical moment. Until that time, no action could be taken.

The Albany Chamber of Commerce has sent an invitation to attend a conference relative to the waterways of the State to be held in the Capitol City. Mr. W. A. Butts was selected to represent the Fulton Chamber of Commerce at the conference.

Mr. H. L. Paddock presented the following resolution, which he hoped the Chamber would adopt. He stated that the manufacturers of newspaper from pulp wood desired only fair treatment at the hands of the Congressional Committee recently appointed to take action in the matter. It was feared by the manufacturers that both sides of the question would not receive favorable treatment, and as the manufacture of paper was one of Fulton's staple industries, he hoped the Chamber of Commerce would go on record against precipitate action.

Mr. Thomas Hunter and Mr. E. R. Redhead also spoke in favor of the adoption of the resolution as a matter of fairness and largely because of the local interests involved.

The following were the resolutions:

Whereas, A strenuous effort is being made to induce Congress to remove the duty on wood pulp and printing paper imported from other countries into the United States; and,

Whereas, The wood pulp and paper manufacturing industry of the City of Fulton, N. Y., is among the most important industries in this city, employing upwards of six hundred men; and,

Whereas, It is the sense of the Fulton Chamber of Commerce that the removal of duty upon wood pulp and printing paper would work a great hardship and injury to the industry in this city and would be a discrimination against the business, which is not justified by any existing conditions; and,

Whereas, The House of Representatives has recently passed a resolution appointing a select committee of six members to investigate and inquire into the elements and conditions involved in the production of wood pulp and printing paper to the end that the members of the House may be informed as to the real conditions existing in the industry throughout the United States. Now therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Fulton Chamber of Commerce hereby protests against any action of Congress repealing the duty on wood pulp and paper until the said committee has had opportunity to investigate and report; and,

Resolved, That we respectfully request each member of Congress in the State of New York to vote against the removal of or any reduction in the tariff on wood pulp and printing paper at the present time, and to do all he honorably can to prevent any such action by the present Congress.

Mr. Frederick G. Spencer did not agree with all that had been said in favor of the adoption of the resolution, as he thought from the discussion of the measure printed in the newspapers that publishers had a grievance. He, however, favored the resolution in so far as it deprecated inconsiderate action by Congress.

The resolution was adopted as presented and the secretary was authorized to mail a copy to each of the Congressmen representing New York State districts.

It was deemed advisable to issue a leaflet or small pamphlet describing Fulton's many advantages as a manufacturing section. This matter was referred to the Committee on Statistics and Publication with power to act.

The status of the proposed new Federal building was explained by Postmaster W. E. Hughes. Many inquiries of a statistical nature had been received from the department, and Congressman Knapp was certainly doing all in his power, but whether anything definite could be accomplished during the present session was a problem not easily solved. The matter was still in committee stage, and it was devoutly wished that some good might result, as the necessity for such a building in this city was certainly great.

Mr. Redhead, as a member of the Committee, also stated that he was very much encouraged through a recent conversation with Congressman Knapp, but believed that more earnestness should be shown by the Chamber in pressing such a claim on the attention of Congress.

President Emerick appointed the following Committees for the ensuing year:

Membership—D. L. Lipsky, J. R. Sullivan, L. Fowler Joy, W. J. Hartnett, J. F. Collins, A. Z. Wolever, F. L. Porter.

Industrial—W. A. Butts, George Johnston, F. J. Switzer, M. Katz, M. M. Conley, W. H. Patterson, N. L. Whitaker.

Municipal Affairs—Geo. E. True, A. W. Wiltsie, B. W. Bennett, G. B. Palmer, Arvin Rice, L. C. Foster.

Statistics and Publication—H. L. Paddock, J. J. Morrill, B. A. Loreless, A. T. Jennings.

A motion to adjourn prevailed.

At a subsequent meeting of the Board of Directors the new bylaws were formally adopted.

Secretary Jennings wrote Congressman Knapp several days prior to the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce and the following letter which is self explanatory, was received after the meeting had been held.

April 29, 1908.

Mr A. T. Jennings,
Secretary, Chamber of Commerce,
Fulton, New York.

My dear Sir:

Your favor relative to the status of a federal building at Fulton came duly at hand. I have delayed answering by reason of the fact that it has been expected from day to day that the Public Buildings Bill would be reported, but there is still delay. I, however, think one will be reported the last of this week or the first of next.

I have done all that I could in the matter of a federal building for Fulton and hope at least to secure an appropriation for the site, which, if obtained, will insure a federal building there. The demands are so great from all over the country and the condition of the revenues such that the usual course now being pursued is to first make appropriation for a site, then, under the next subsequent bill, follow it with an appropriation for the building. This is done in almost every case.

I have, however, done, and shall continue to do what I can and all I can and will report the result as soon as the bill is presented to Congress.

With great respect, I am
Very truly yours,
Chas. L. Knapp.

Get Out the Sprinkler.

We have a sprinkling cart, plenty of water and men and horses can be secured. We also have high winds and dusty streets. Why cannot the former be placed in commission at once to allay the latter? The sprinkling tax would be microscopic compared with the benefit to humanity and the satisfaction to the merchants and their patrons. It is a hardship to traverse First street this Spring with the air full of dust particles, and a sprinkling of the street two or three times a day would make conditions at least bearable.

DIED.

Frederick, the 3-months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Stoughtenger died on Wednesday and was buried on Thursday.

On Sunday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Edwin Thomas, occurred the death of Mrs. Mary A. Chapman, a resident of South Granby for fifty years. The funeral services were held from the late home this afternoon and interment was made at Bethel.

Catherine Meagher, aged 78, died on Wednesday at her home in Emery street. The funeral services were held from the Catholic Church on Saturday and interment was made in St. Mary's. The deceased is survived by two sons, Thomas of Syracuse and John of Fulton; one daughter, Marion, of Fulton and one sister, Mrs. Margaret Wiseman of Kingston, Ca.

Mrs. William H. Case, aged 75, died on Friday, May 1, at her home in Tohyhanna, Pa. Mrs. Case will be remembered by many of our residents as she had been a frequent visitor at the home of her brother, Mr. Horatio A. Allen. The funeral services were held on Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Horatio A. Allen and Mr. and Mrs. H. Putnam Allen of this city attending.

The death of Margaret J. Casey, aged 39, occured at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Casey, in Hannibal street on Saturday. The funeral services were held from the Catholic church on Tuesday. Interment in St. Mary's Cemetery. The deceased is survived by her parents, five sisters—Agnes of this city, Mrs. John Ward of Seattle, Wash., Mrs. John Erhardt of Los Angeles, Cal., Mrs. James Walters and Miss Catherine Casey of Denver, Col., and two brothers—James of this city and Thomas of Denver, Col.

Comptrollers Report.

District Attorney Baker and County Treasurer Moore have received copies of the report from Comptroller Glynn, relative to the findings in the examination of the different county offices. The methods pursued by the County Treasurer were severely censured, although any dishonest intent on the part of ex-Treasurer Moore was disbelieved. The conduct of the County Clerks and the County Superintendent of the Poor's offices were commended. The Sheriff's and Coroner's offices are criticised greatly.

District Attorney Baker and County Attorney Coville are looking over the report carefully and if they discover any violation of the law on the part of any of the officials they will lay the matter before the Grand Jury. If the cases of overcharge are a misconstruction of the law of rate, the matter will be given the Board of Supervisors and Civil suits commenced that the county may be reimbursed. Mr. Baker says he may be able to make a report by this Wednesday evening as to the action to be taken.

BOARD OF EDUCATION

Action Taken Regarding Recent Reprehensible Conduct of Scholars—Minimum Penalty Imposed.

After carefully considering all phases of the recent entrances effected into the High School building by students in the school and others, the Board of Education met on Monday evening and adopted the following:

On the nights of March 31, April 22, and April 23, the persons below mentioned criminally entered the Fourth Street school building and in a spirit of vandalism damaged in no small degree, school and private property—some beyond repair.

The act of entering the building was criminal—the acts committed inside the building were criminal—but the Board of Education, actuated by the desire to keep the participants free from the legal stain of criminality, have decided, if possible, to keep the matter out of the courts and have unanimously adopted the following resolutions which they feel is the minimum penalty they can justly impose.

Resolved: That William Kendrick and Leonard Roy be expelled from school.

Resolved: That Robert Cook, Allen Foster, Frank Hare, Francis Rafferty, Clarence Roy, Gilmour Van-Wagenen, and Arthur Wolever be indefinitely suspended from school. After June 24, 1908, these may, if they wish, make application to the Board of Education for re-instatement and if their conduct in the interval justifies it, the Board will consider such applications.

Resolved: That Harry Allen, Earl Mace, Frank McCaffrey, James Reavey, and Phillip Stevenson (participants not members of the school) each pay a fine of $10 for damages done. All these fines to be paid on or before Saturday, May 9, at 5 p. m.

Resolved: That Milton Allen, Frank Blodgett, and Charles O'Brien—all of whom were parties to the affair, but did not enter the building—be allowed to re-enter school on probation as soon as all fines are paid.

J. R. FAIRGRIEVE,
Secretary.
JOHN HUNTER,
President,
Board of Education.

Baseball Matters.

The baseball schedule as arranged for Fulton games by President Roche of the Empire League was as follows: At home—Oneida, June 19th, 20th, 26th, 27th; July 3d, 22d, 23d; September 4th, 5th; Oswego, May 22d, 30th, A. M.; June 12th, 30th; July 4th, P. M., 10th, 11th, 20th; August 12th, 14th; September 7th, A. M.; Auburn, May 27th, 28th; June 2d, 24th, 25th; August 3d, 4th, 24th, 25th; Geneva, June 5th, 6th; July 6th, 7th, 29th, 30th; August 10th, 11th, 28th, 29th; Lyons, May 29th; June 8th, 9th, 15th, 16th; July 17th, 18th; August 7th, 8th, September 2d, 3d. There may be slight changes made before the local powers will be satisfied.

Manager Thomas J. Donovan arrived in Fulton on Saturday and the local fans are confident that he will produce a fast team before he will be satisfied. He has taken a room at the Clark house. Mr. James Caffrey has been appointed a committee of one to attend to placing the grand stand in safe condition before the season opens. The stand is now closed pending an examination of its condition.

The uniforms decided upon for the home team are grey with trimmings of maroon, stocking and cap to be of maroon. Mr. M. M. Conley has the purchasing of the uniforms in hand.

Manager Donovan has notified McDonough and Woods of last year's team to report for practice on May 12. Fennell will also be given an opportunity. Charles Van Slyke of Oneida, outfielder; Vincent of St. Lawrence University, Scudder and Schafer of this city and Harmon of Watertown will be tried out. Samuel McCallister of Mechanicsville, a mute, will appear to try out for pitcher.

"Cooked" and "Well Cooked" Food

Good food and a good cook are not enough to produce a good meal. Much depends on the vessels in which the food is prepared. Unless these are scrupulously clean, there will be a disagreeable odor or a taste of tin or iron, not to mention the danger of ptomaine poisoning. Many stomach troubles and other ailments can be traced back to this source. These dangers are overcome by the use of our

SANITO COOKING UTENSILS

These are specially made to reproduce the old German cooking utensils so universally used abroad. SANITO ware has a special lining which cannot crack or scale off. This lining is absolutely acid proof, and the vessels are always sweet, clean and wholesome. SANITO ware should be used for all ordinary culinary purposes. It will prove particularly valuable in preparing food for the sick or for infants.

Our Offer A set of SANITO ware consists of 6 pieces—2 bake pans (1 & 2qts.), 2 cooking kettles (2 & 4 quarts) and a 2-piece roaster. We will ship the complete set upon receipt of $2.50

Mrs. Mack is spending a few days with Mrs. Cass Hill.

Dell Coe and Levi Walker are visiting at G. View's.

Maud Ives and Maud Rowlee spent a night at Jasper Rowlee's last week.

The trouble with most cough cures is that they constipate. Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup does not constipate, but on the other hand its laxative principles gently move the bowels. Pleasant to take and is especially recommended for children, as it tastes nearly as good as maple sugar. Sold by all druggists.

The United States Minister to Venezuela, William W. Russell—Congressman Vreeland and His Bill—Dr. MacArthur.

WILLIAM W. RUSSELL.

THE United States minister to Venezuela, William W. Russell who figures prominently in the controversy between the state department at Washington and President Castro, succeeded Herbert W. Bowen at the Venezuelan capital. It will be three years in June since he assumed his present post. His immediate predecessors, Messrs. Bowen and Loomis, had each clashed with the Venezuelan executive, and it was realized at the time that Mr. Russell's path would not be strewn with roses. But he had served as secretary of legation at Caracas for eight years and had got along pretty amiably with every one under both Mr. Loomis and Mr. Bowen despite the troubles these diplomats had with President Castro. It was thought that if anybody could keep on the good side of the latter Russell was the man to do it, so he was named for the place. But he, too, has found the complications of Venezuelan politics rather vexatious.

Minister Russell is a son of an admiral in the navy and is a graduate of the United States Naval academy at Annapolis. He left the naval service in 1883 and engaged in civil engineering. For several years he was assistant engineer in charge of the location of the railroad line from Merida to Santa Barbara, in the state of Los Andes, Venezuela. He was appointed secretary of legation at Caracas in 1895 and later served as charge d'affaires at Panama and as minister to Colombia, being transferred from the latter post to his present one.

Edward B. Vreeland of Salamanca, N. Y., author of the financial measure introduced in the house of representatives as a substitute for the Aldrich bill, is regarded as one of the coming men in congress on the Republican side. He is serving his fifth term and is fifty years of age and has in the last few years been connected with several important pieces of legislation. He never held any office before being sent to congress, but was for some years active in the affairs of his party. He is a lawyer, but for the past fifteen years has been engaged in banking, still being president of the Salamanca Trust company. Speaker Cannon early discovered his ability as a parliamentarian and often placed him in the chair to preside over the committee of the whole. As a member of the committee on naval affairs he has been the right hand man of Chairman Foss and has handled several important investigations.

EDWARD B. VREELAND.

The Rev. Dr. Robert S. MacArthur, who advocates isolating all anarchists on an island by themselves, has been for over thirty-five years pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, New York. He once told his congregation a very "touching" story of John Eliot, the famous missionary to the Indians, one of whose traits was his unbounded generosity.

"Out of his salary of £50 a year he gave large sums to charity," said Dr. MacArthur. "On one occasion the secretary of the Society For the Propagation of the Gospel when paying Eliot his quarterly stipend sought to do him a service. He hit upon a plan of safeguarding the missionary's money, knowing that in all likelihood Eliot otherwise would give away every penny of it before he reached his home. The wily secretary took Eliot's handkerchief and tied up some of the money in one corner and some in another, and so on with the four corners. And firm, hard knots he made of them before handing the handkerchief over to its owner.

REV. DR. R. S. MACARTHUR.

"It chanced that Eliot on his way home fell in with a worthy woman whose appearance told of dire poverty and distress. He stopped to speak to her, and pretty soon, his heart being touched, he pulled out the handkerchief. He intended to give a sovereign to her. For some time he tugged and strained at the knots; but, try as he might, the corners refused to come untied. Then, calmly rolling the handkerchief up into a ball, the missionary placed it in the astonished woman's hands, saying, 'My good woman, I think the Lord meant you to have it all.'

"The ushers," Dr. MacArthur added, "now will pass the baskets for collection, and you can imitate John Eliot's example—if you are so minded."

And the congregation dug deep.

Drastic Measures.

All the Gold IN GEORGIA Could not Buy-

Reding, Ga. August 27, 1906.

Messrs. E. C. DeWITT & Co., Chicago, Ills.

Gentlemen:—

In 1897 I had a disease of the stomach and bowels. Some physicians told me it was Dyspepsia, some Consumption of the Lungs, others said consumption of the Bowels. One physician said I would not live until Spring, and for four long years I existed on a little boiled milk, soda biscuits, doctors' prescriptions and Dyspepsia remedies that flooded the market. I could not digest anything I ate, and in the Spring 1902 I picked up one of your Almanacs as a poor emaciated Dyspeptic wreck will grasp at anything, and that Almanac happened to be my life saver. I bought a fifty cent bottle of KODOL DYSPEPSIA CURE and the benefit I received from that bottle ALL THE GOLD IN GEORGIA COULD NOT BUY. I kept on taking it and in two months I went back to my work, as a machinist, and in three months I was well and hearty. I still use a little occasionally as I find it a fine blood purifier and a good tonic.

May you live long and prosper.

Yours very truly,

C. R. CORNELL.

The Syracuse Journal prophesies that the new trolley line between Syracuse and Oswego will be ready for operating by Nov. 1, and adds, "The new bridge on the Lake Shore & Northern road at Phoenix is now being swung across the river. The building of the Lake Shore from Fulton to Oswego is a matter which only the condition of the money market will settle. Just as soon as the market loosens that work will be taken up. Mr. Nottingham is now at work upon the foreclosure of the Oswego roads and, as soon as the legal proceedings are out of the way, the Oswego roads will be put into shape."

When you think of indigestion think of Kodol, for it is without doubt the only preparation that completely digests all classes of food. And that is what you need when you have indigestion or stomach trouble—something that will act promptly but thoroughly; something that will get right at the trouble and do the very work itself for the stomach by digesting the food that you eat and that is Kodol. It is pleasant to take. It is sold by all druggists.

FULTON HERO NO. 3.

In August, 1862, Allan C. Livingston of Fulton went as First Surgeon in the 110th Regiment. He was considered one of the first physicians in Oswego county, and showed his devotion to his country by leaving a large practice and responding to her call for his services in her time of great need. He rendered good service to the Regiment the year and a half that he remained.

Active men became tired of the hum-drum monotony of camp life, and realizing that the war was to be prolonged and observing the great opportunities for money making and higher promotion in other regiments, a great many of our principal officers resigned—Colonel Sage, Dr. Livingston, and Captain Pratt all resigned.

Dr. Livingston and our Second Assistant Surgeon, Dr. Alfred Rice of Hannibal, probably dealt out wagon loads of quinine into the 110th until their systems were filled with it. It seemed to be the only remedy for some of the diseases in that tropical climate, one being the chill fever which used to be called fever and ague. Often every other day at 2 p. m. we would be freezing, then burning, with bones aching and headache. An Irishman one morning says: "Well Doctor, I want another dose of 'queenane'."

I have had charge of a squad of men for the surgeons, call morning after morning (of from 8 to 15 men) for medicine, and to get excused from duty. Twice in the history of the Regiment I have known only four or five men in each company fit for duty.

Mrs. F. D. Torrey who was operated on last week in Norwalk, Ct., for appendicitis, is doing as well as could be expected although suffering a great deal of pain. Her many friends in this vicinity are hopeful for her speedy restoration to health.

The membership contest in the Brotherhood Class of the First Methodist church between the Reds and the Whites, closed last week, the Whites defeating their opponents by a large majority. On Friday evening the vanquished side gave a supper to the victors in the church parlors.

Within a month it is expected that the County Clerk will have received licenses required by the new fish and game laws providing that all sportsmen and others desiring to to carry a gun, must secure a license, the fee for residents being $1; for non-residents, $20.

It is well that the police department is requesting that more care be exercised in the blasting necessary on the barge canal work. Several narrow escapes from flying stones and splinters have been narrated. On Sunday a large stone was blown over the Hunter Arms factory and struck the deck of the State scow, crushing the timbers and falling into the bottom of the boat.

That was a great game Wednesday afternoon between the barge canal office contingent and the High school nine. Five innings were played and the result was disastrous to the backers of the High school squad, by a score of 5 to 8. In the first three innings the local residents had everything their own way and commenced to oil up the bird of victory to be in readiness to crow, but in the fourth inning the barge canal men let out a hitch and they almost made the High school boys forget their friends, so fast and furiously did they put the runs all over them. The High School lads are conquered but not convinced, and are making ready the war paint preparatory to issuing a challenge for a return date with the victors.

Gardner, Mrs. Gifford, Mrs. James Kelly, Mrs. James Langdon, Mrs. Amos Langdon, Mrs. Merriam, Mrs. McIntyre, Mrs. John Reynolds, Miss Genevieve Rice, Miss L. A. Schenck, Mrs. Strickland, Mrs. Van-Sanford, Miss E. J. Waugh.

Miss May Rice of Buffalo is spending several weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Rice.

The May American Boy.

The fine picture of a yacht bowling along under a full spread of canvas on the front cover of the May American Boy speaks eloquently of the seashore and warm summer breezes. He will be a curious boy whom the contents of this number does not fully please. Jimmy Jones, Pirate; Four Boys on the Mississippi, and That Dillingham Boy increase in interest. Of the larger articles: Hughie the Hittite, being a most interesting talk with Hugh Jennings, the great baseball manager, will delight every reader. Forty Stunts in Magic, Hints on Trapping, Keeping Tab on the World, A Paris Cemetery for Pets, Talks with the Doctor, and the various departments are full of pleasing and instructive information. In addition there are 88 illustrations. $1.00 a year. The Sprague Publishing Co., Detroit, Mich.

THE FULTON TIMES

[Entered as second class matter, April 12, 1882, at the postoffice at Fulton, New York, under the act of Congress of March, 3, 1879.]

E. K. HUGHES, Editor
W. E. HUGHES, Proprietor

Issued Every Wednesday at No. 66 South First street, Fulton, N. Y.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 6, 1908

THE President has once more struck the keynote of exact justice. In his latest special message to Congress he denounced the boycott and the blacklist. He deprecates the demagogue and the agitator. Then he says, "But his counterpart in evil is to be found in that particular kind of millionaire who is almost the least enviable and is certainly the least admirable, of all our citizens; a man of whom it has been well said that his face has grown hard and cruel while his body has grown soft; whose son is a fool and his daughter a foreign princess; whose nominal pleasures are at best those of tasteless and extravagant luxury, and whose real delight, whose real life work, is the accumulation and use of power in its most sordid and least elevating form."

WHISKEY manufactured abroad and alleged to be misbranded under the American pure food law will hereafter be allowed to come into the country, after which it will be subject to the adjudication of the courts under that law, according to a ruling which has been arranged recently among the departments of State, Justice, the Treasury and Agriculture. This new ruling is the result of an investigation of a complaint from London regarding alleged discrimination against certain shipments of Scotch whiskey, and is a reversal of the former regulation which made it possible to hold up such shipments before they entered into the markets of this country.

THE development of the past week in the financial world which commanded overwhelming attention was the successful international flotation of the Pennsylvania Railroad's $40,000,000 loan, by the assured sale of that amount of forty-year four per cent bonds. The important significance of this transaction is the proof it affords of the return of confidence in the future of our greatest railroads; and it means, of course, that Pennsylvania is to continue its preparations for handling increasing traffic. With the Pennsylvania prepared so to increase its facilities it is fair to assume that other great systems hold similar views.

THE President has said recently to friends, that the plutocrats and the powerful politicians thought they could prevent the nomination of a man in sympathy with his policies and he has "shown them a thing or to". Now they are saying they will make him take the nomination against his will and he believes he can still show them their mistake. He is absolutely confident that Mr. Taft will be nominated on the first ballot.

On the eve of another great election it is good to reflect that the American people have never yet chosen for their leader a man of evil life nor of empty head and it is a remarkable testimony to their good sense and decent morals. From Washington down, the list averages in dignity and ability above that of any of the rulers of other countries.

IF Congress enacts into law a provision in the sundry civil bill reported to the House, iron tablets bearing Lincoln's celebrated address at Gettysburg will be placed in the seventy-seven national cemeteries throughout the United States. The sum of $3,000 is made available for the purpose.

Street Sweeper a Nuisance.

The new street sweeper is certainly a nuisance and an effort should be made to compel a different usage of it. The only explanation vouchsafed when the question is raised as to the benefit to be derived from its use, is the remark that, "if the man did not forget to sprinkle the streets prior to its use, it would be alright." Houses, stores, walks, people—all are covered inch deep with the dust from the street whenever the sweeper traverses the road.

A little insistance upon the part of someone that no sweeping be done without a previous dampening of the street, would be appreciated by our residents along the routes covered.

Scholars' Field Day.

The first annual field day of the public schools will be held on Friday next, Arbor Day, on the Oswego County Fair grounds.

All pupils will form at 1:30 p. m. in front of the Fourth street school building, and, headed by the Odd Fellows Band, will march as follows:

Cayuga street to First, thence to Oneida street and across lower bridge to West First, to Broadway and the Fair grounds.

An address will be given by Mr. John Hunter, President of the Board of Education, and a base ball game will be played between the Baldwinsville and Fulton High school teams.

Fearful Tortures.

Some years ago I was a teacher in Afghanistan, and during my stay in that country I was often an unwilling witness of some horrible exhibitions of torture. Here is one they use in the case of women to extract testimony: It consists in prying off the finger nails by means of a small chisel or brad awl, which is shoved in slowly, but firmly, from the finger tip downward under the quick of the nail, which is then lifted up and out.

This is another that I once saw used in the case of a small child who would not own up to some petty theft: Sticks were thrust between its fingers and the fingers then squeezed together, so that the sticks crushed into the bones. So much for women and children. Here is a method of eliciting information from an unwilling man: The culprit is stripped to the waist, and then boiling oil is flicked on to his back. This seldom fails to find the man's tongue.

The above are the chief forms of "fahana," or torture, for the purpose of eliciting information, but it must be stated that such inflictions as nipping of noses, tearing out tongues or splitting eyeballs do not come under the heading of "fahana," they being punishments rather than tortures.—London Standard.

Duchesse and Anarchist.

Upon one occasion the Duchesse d'Uzes and Louise Michel met at the bedside of a poor sick woman whom they were mutually aiding. They met here frequently for a brief period. The woman died. Louise Michel, who was present at the death, wrote to the duchesse: "Madame—Our poor friend is dead. I have looked among her few belongings for a souvenir for you. Here is a small piece of passementerie done by her hands. Accept it." A few days afterward Mme. la Duchesse d'Uzes, nee Mortemart, went to the home of Louise Michel, the anarchist—a bizarre abode at Levallois where the poor found always both a good word and a piece of bread—to thank the "red virgin" for her letter and her gift. A friendship so was cemented between the oddly assorted pair th was later not without result in the operation of the most gigantic charity of the Duchesse d'Uzes—Boulangerism.—Harper's Bazar.

He Left at Once.

He had been worshiping her for months, but had never told her, and she didn't want him to. He had come often and stayed late—very late—and she could only sigh and hope. He was going away the next day on a holiday, and he thought the last night was the time to spring the momentous question. He kept it to himself, however, until the last thing. It was 11:30 by the clock, and it was not a very rapid clock.

"Miss Mollie," he said tremulously, "I am going away tomorrow."

"Are you?" she said with the thoughtlessness of girlhood.

"Yes," he replied. "Are you sorry?"

"Yes, very sorry," she murmured. "I thought you might go away this evening."

Then he gazed at the clock, wistfully, and said good night.—London Scraps.

The Power of the Whale.

If the whale knew its own power, it could easily destroy all the machinery which the art of man could devise for catching him. It would only be necessary for him to swim on the surface in a straight line in order to break the thickest rope, but instead, on being struck by the harpoon, he obeys a natural instinct, which, in this instance, betrays him to his death. Not having an air bladder, he can sink to the lowest depths of the ocean, and, mistaking the harpoon for the teeth of a swordfish or a shark, he instantly descends, this being his manner of freeing himself from these enemies, who cannot bear the pressure of a deep ocean, and from descending and ascending in small space he thus puts himself in the power of the whaler.

The Popinjay.

The origin of the application of the term "popinjay" to a dude was as follows: The popinjay was a figure of a bird shot at for practice. The jay was decked with particolored feathers so as to resemble a parrot and, being suspended on a pole, served as a target. He whose ball or arrow brought down the bird by cutting the string by which it was hung received the proud title of Captain Popinjay for the rest of the day and was escorted home in triumph.

He Had Not Forgotten.

Artist William M. Chase told a story of the eccentric Jimmy Whistler. It was at a dinner party after all the guests had been seated, when Chase gently drew Whistler's attention to the fact that he had forgotten his tie. "Forgotten?" shrieked Whistler. "Nothing of the kind. Why should I spoil the effect of a good linen collar, with excellent lines, by sticking on a foolish little piece of flimsy lawn?"

And the dinner proceeded.

Unfeeling.

"Bilger eloped with his cook, the unfeeling wretch!"

"Well, I don't know. Why shouldn't he if he wanted to?"

"But his wife was just going to give a dinner party."—Life.

Charter Amendment Adopted.

A special meeting of the Common Council was held on Saturday evening when the amendments to the charter were favorably acted upon. The amendments provide for the transfer of city moneys from one fund to another; for one official newspapers instead of two; amends the sections of charter relating to pavements and cleaning sidewalks of snow and ice; provides for the manner of executing certain city contracts and adds five sections to the charter in relation to the acquisition and maintenance of a city hospital; streets may be improved without the consent of property owners, providing the cost is not more than 75 cents per front foot. At the next general election taxpayers may vote upon the proposition to raise by taxation the sum of $1,500 for the maintenance of a hospital. It is also provided that the hospital board shall consist of sixteen directors, the Mayor being a member ex officio.

You will want to read McCutcheon's latest work of fiction, The Husbands of Edith. It may be found in the Lasher Reading Club and you can rent it for 2 cents a day. It certainly is a good story, improbable but fascinating.

The beautiful Irish setter belonging to Mr. J. Harroun Howe, died on Monday as the result of poison administered by some unknown person. The beast is a harmless one and it is a wonder that anyone was vile enough to poison him.

The Misses Alice Tucker and Cornelia Rice were in Syracuse last evening as guests at an entertainment given by the Alumnae Chapter of Alpha Phi, to the active chapter. The entertainment was given at the home of Mrs. William Nottingham.

It is reported that Dr. and Mrs. T. H. Fox were awakened one night last week by some one in their sleeping room, the intruder making a rapid exit as soon as he found they were awake. The man ran across Cayuga street toward Third and disappeared.

The highest March wind never produced such a tempting display of hosiery as may be found in the J. C. O'Brien store this week during the sale of Hermsdorf hosiery, upon which prices unprecedentedly low have been placed. There is not a cheap stocking in the lot; there is not a high price upon one of them. Read the advertisement in another column.

The one-legged man was chided by his spouse for purchasing a pair of shoes, she claiming that he only needed one shoe. His reply was that they were such good values for the money that he could not help it, and that if she would go to the shoe sale now in progress at the Butts Shoe Shop she would see for herself. Mr. Butts is so sure that he has some rarely good bargains in high class, seasonable foot wear that he is spending a lot of money to let you know about it. Read his advertisement in the Times this week.

The Times is in receipt of a pamphlet from Dr. H. P. DeForest of New York city, surgeon in the Thirteenth Regiment, Coast Artillery, National Guards. The subject matter is a reprint from directions for preserving the health of soldiers, issued during the American Revolution by Benjamin Rush, M. D., with a biographical sketch and portrait of Surgeon Ebenezer Alden, all compiled by DeForest. It is a really unique paper.

A number of boys, varying in age from 12 to 15 years, have occasioned the New York Central officials considerable trouble of late. Last week several of them entered a freight car in which was stored several cases of soft drinks consigned by J. J. McGinnis to an Oswego party. The boys opened several bottles and drained their contents before they were discovered. The names of a dozen boys have been secured and in all probability the order will come from headquarters to punish them to the full extent of the law.

The Lasher Reading Club shelves have been augmented by a number of the latest and most popular works of fiction. Among the number are, The Husbands of Edith, McCutcheon; Some ladies in haste, Robert W. Chambers and The coast of chance, Esther and Lucia Chamberlain. Take any or all of them to your home and read them at your leisure, the only obligation on your part is the paying of 2 cents per day per book while you are reading it.

The report of Chief Ross for the month of April shows 22 arrests divided as follows: for public intoxication, 8; for assault in the third degree, 4; petit larceny, 2; for being a disorderly person, 1; on miscellaneous charges, 3; for violations of section 426 of the Penal Code, relating to the jumping off and on moving trains, 4. Three were discharged and nineteen were convicted. Fines to the amount of $68 were imposed and $46 were collected.

Verner Shattuck and Milton S. Terpening of South Hannibal ordered a car load of lime last week—28 tons for $10 per ton. Farmers from South Hannibal and Ira were in town after it Saturday. They intend to drill it in with oats this spring for fertilizer and to sweeten the soil and to prevent sorrell from coming in.

It commences to look like old times when one sees nearly all the windows in the woolen mill alight every evening. Fulton has felt the business depression, but her people have for the most part cut their garment according to the cloth they had laid away for a rainy day, and philosophically accepted the temporary stringency. Conditions are brightening all the time now, and the outlook is very satisfactory.

C. A. Duvall and Frank Beecher of Syracuse were in town last Friday evening to attend the banquet of the Brotherhood class. There was a large attendance and refreshments were served. The pastor, Rev. John Richards, acted as toastmaster. Telling speeches were made by the pastor, Mr. Duvall, H. L. Paddock, Prof. George B. Deuel and Messrs. Albring, Waugh, Beecher and Smith.

Bribes For Clergyman.

"Three or four attempts have been made to bribe me," said a clergyman. "My friends of the cloth tell me that they, too, have been occasionally tempted with bribes.

"Once it was the advertising manager of a health food. He offered a subscription of $100 to our mission school if I would tell from the pulpit how much good the health food had done me. I made him give me the money for the mission under threats of exposure, but, of course, I did not mention his food in the church. The church is no place for health food talks.

"The widow of a drunkard and general good for nothing offered me $50 if I would lie in praise of her husband in his funeral sermon. I praised the man heartily in the sermon—no matter how bad a man may be, if you examine his character you will find in it many traits worthy of praise—and to the widow I wrote a note of gentle rebuke.

"Often we are asked to date back marriage certificates, to say a couple were married in six months or a year before they really were. A man once offered me $1,500 to perpetrate a wrong of this sort. I thrust a tract in his hand and turned him out of doors."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Rain and Animals.

"Lions, tigers and all the cat tribe dread rain," said a zoo keeper. "On a rainy day they tear nervously up and down their cages, growling and trembling. We usually give them an extra ration of hot milk. That puts them to sleep. Wolves love a gray day of rain. They are then very cheery. Treacherous as the wolf is, no keeper need fear him on a rainy day. He is too happy to harm a fly. Snakes, too, like rain. They perk up wonderfully as the barometer falls and the damp makes itself felt in their warm cases of glass.

"Rain makes monkeys glum. They are apt from instinct, when they see it through the window, to clasp their hands above their heads and sit so for hours. That attitude, you know, makes a kind of shelter. It is the primitive umbrella. So, when it rained, the naked primitive man and woman sat gloomily in the primeval swamps of giant ferns."

A Mouse and a Candle.

At the end of the bathing season, a few years ago, a candle was left on the mantelpiece of a family in Pouliguen, France. When they returned the next spring they found, according to La Nature, that a mouse had done these things:

Climbed somehow a marble chimney piece, there being no piece of furniture near enough to leap from and no way of descending from above.

Climbed the candlestick itself, which was of highly polished silver, over ten inches high, with a broad flare at the cup.

Climbed the candle, began eating at the top, eating evenly all round down to the base, leaving the bare wick standing up perfectly straight.

If the mouse had begun at the base of the candle, its weight would have caused it to topple over. It must have taken the mouse a good many days to eat the candle down to the bottom.

A Persistent Friend.

Mr. George Weir, an English actor, in his early days appeared one night in the role of Hamlet in an improvised theater at Stroud, in Gloucestershire, and suffered much embarrassment from the demonstrative attentions of an enthusiastic former schoolfellow, who sat in the front of the tent and kept up a running comment on the performance. "That be Gafgy Weir," exclaimed the admirer. "I knows Gargy! I used to go to school along wi' he." After many expostulations the interrupter was turned out, and all went well until the audience was hushed to deadly silence while Hamlet was going through his soliloquy. Then suddenly a still, small voice came cheeringly from the back row of seats, "Garge, I be in again!"—Bellman.

Kaffirs' Courtship.

The Kaffirs are a very light hearted people and do not worry about the future. As soon as the girls have finished their work they may take up the igubu, which is an elementary musical instrument, consisting of a taut bow fixed to a gourd, and march across country twanging the string with a little piece of reed. The instrument, as a rule, gives but one note, but to the girl's sweetheart such music is "the food of love."—World's Work.

What's the Use?

"Does wealth bring real enjoyment?"

"Naw. They won't let you eat the grub you like or wear the clothes you consider classy or listen to the music you understand or even put a cast iron dog on the lawn."—Kansas City Journal.

Envious of the Immune.

Little Henry (at the table, to the visitor)—I wish I were like you. Visitor (flattered)—Why, little man? Little Henry—Because no one boxes your ears when you eat with your fingers.—London Opinion.

CHAPTER XXII.

MR. BILL WILLIAMS took the first train for Irvington, settled himself with a long black cigar in the smoking car and began to churn his brains for answers to many perplexing questions. That his enemies were trying to euchre him was as clear as day. His son might have sent one wire of warning, but why a dozen? That was Jacob's fine Italian hand. If Richard was at liberty, why had he not written? Why had he left his baggage at the St. Regis without returning? How dared he go to Irvington? Where had he gone thereafter? Where was he now? The old gentleman gave it up and chewed the end of his cigar in savage impatience. Of one thing only was he certain—he would get on Richard's trail and follow it to the end.

On reaching Irvington he hurried to the telegraph office and sent the following dispatch to his representative at Austin, Tex.:

Watch harbor bill. Skin game on. Learn when legislature will adjourn and answer.
BILL WILLIAMS.
Irvington, N. Y.

There was some considerable delay in sending his wire, which he further lengthened by telephoning to his New York representatives, making an appointment with them for later during the day. As he had plunged straight for the telegraph office, he neither saw nor was seen by Mr. Jacob Renwyck when that gentleman, accompanied by two plain clothes men, got off the rear car of the same train, rushed across the platform, jumped into a waiting surrey, the only carriage that happened to meet that train, and drove rapidly away. Nor did he hear several people inquire of the station agent for walking directions to Mr. Renwyck's place. First there was a well groomed, somewhat pompous, official looking Englishman, with a red face and white side whiskers, evidently a man of authority and importance. Next there was a tall, blond young woman, with a "ripping" figure, who expressed surprise that no vehicle was there to meet her. And finally there were an excited old farmer, a hard featured man in plain clothes—also with an official look—and a fussy little representative of a motor company, if one could judge by his cap and general automobile rig.

In despair of a carriage all of these walked slowly up the hill in the direction of Restmore, although in the fact that, save the farmer and the plain clothes official, each pursued his way alone, holding no communication with the others, was conclusive proof that their simultaneous arrival and their common destination were merely coincidences. Mr. Renwyck and his companions arrived long before the others. With the two detectives he went immediately into the library, where he met his wife and Mr. Corrigan. The safe was wide open, showing the tumbled contents just as they had been found when the door was unlocked two hours earlier by Uncle Michael. In utter silence the two sleuths made an examination, but beyond one tiny scratch near the keyhole of the inner door the safe showed no evidence of having been tampered with. Besides Mr. Renwyck, there was no one else who knew the combination except the old butler, who was confined to his bed with rheumatism in a small village several miles away and who was quite above suspicion anyway. Clearly, then, the thief had in some way learned the combination or else he was an experienced cracksman.

On hearing of the robbery the first thought that flashed into Mr. Renwyck's mind was his curious meeting in the library with his English guest at 3 o'clock in the morning, with the window open and the burglar alarm turned off. The prowler's explanation had been quite simple. Mr. Renwyck had honestly striven to persuade himself that it was entirely satisfactory, although he could not drive away a sneaking suspicion that everything was not just right. In the light of present developments his mind recurred to this suspicion with added force. Then there was that draft which the earl had so inexplicably refused to sign after first offering to do so, a small matter in itself, yet coupled with the strange nocturnal wanderings of a gentleman who wished to seek for a book at a quarter past 3 o'clock in the morning—well, it troubled Mr. Renwyck not a little. All the way to Irvington he had turned the matter over in his mind, yet on meeting Lord Croyland on the front veranda he was forced to admit that the frank appearing young man looked as little like a burglar as himself.

Mr. Corrigan was the first to give his evidence. He explained about the tramp with a cast in his eye and told how he had first observed the man on the train coming from New York, then how the same man had come to Restmore begging. He offered to bet his brother-in-law a thousand dollars to five hundred that the cock eyed fellow was the robber, but Mr. Renwyck coldly declined to take the wager.

Mr. Corrigan described the appearance of the man with enthusiastic minuteness, at which the foremost of the detectives smiled an oily smile.

"Well, by gad," he exclaimed indelicately, "if that doesn't bit Jack Bibbs, then I'm a Dutchman! If Jack's got your shiners, Mr. Renwyck, you'd better whistle for 'em."

"Why?" asked Mr. Corrigan.

"Because he's the slickest crook in seven states," returned the sergeant, nodding vigorously. "He's a hundred and fifty miles away by this time, sure."

"Um!" said Uncle Michael. "If you had listened to me, Jake, instead of trying to be humorous, you"—

"Oh, shut up, will you?" growled Mr. Renwyck. "This is no time for recrimination. You'd argue the sun, moon and stars out of the sky together if you found any one to listen to you."

"Now, who ever saw sun, moon and stars in the sky at the same time?" queried the irrepressible Michael.

"There you go," retorted his brother-in-law. "Your story of the tramp is just as absurd now as it was in the beginning. Come; let's get down to business. Call everybody in. These officers will question every inmate of the house. Gentlemen," he said, turning to the detectives, "you have my permission to proceed in any manner which seems best to you. We are entirely in your hands."

"All right, sir," answered the detective sergeant, whose name was Flint. "We'll take the servants first."

Richard was crossing the hall in a vain search for Harriet when he chanced to overhear this last remark. His heart went down again. If Woolsey Bills were questioned it would mean far more than turning a guilty villain over to the authorities. He, the master, would be forced to explain also, and, taken in conjunction with his own meeting with Mr. Renwyck in the library, the outcome would be ghastly, to say the least. Yet he must act on the detective's suggestion at once.

"Shall I send for my man?" he asked of Mr. Renwyck, who at that moment came out into the hall.

"No," said his host; "we'll take my own servants first. James," he called to a sphinxlike butler in the hall, "tell all the servants to come into the library—all of them. Understand?"

"Yes, sir," answered James, with a solemn bow, and departed on his mission.

Richard's heart went up again. He had a slight reprieve. It would last perhaps twenty minutes, yet much might happen in that span of time. He wondered idly if they would put handcuffs on him, but dismissed the thought in his determination to pay for the stolen diamonds, inasmuch as he felt responsible for Woolsey Bills. When the time came he would confess like a man and take his medicine. He would be denounced. It would be dramatic, like the play of the "Man and the Bird," only the name would be changed. It would now be the "Man and the Jailbird." How simple to have opened that library window, while Bills went out into the night, boarded a freight and deposited the plunder in New York! The Texan was innocent, of course, but would other people think so? Yet she would. There was comfort in that. If she believed in him, nothing else mattered very much.

At this stage of the proceedings there was quite a commotion on the front porch, due to the arrival of several visitors. Harriet and Imogene went out and greeted Miss Sempton nervously, explaining the state of affairs briefly, while Mr Renwyck also came to the door, impatient at the unlooked for interruption.

"Sir," questioned the pompous English gentleman, who had arrived a few minutes after the lighter footed young lady, "am I correct in assuming that that is Mr. Jacob Renwyck?"

Mr. Renwyck bowed.

"H'm! My card," went on the visitor. "I am, as you see, Sir Rodney Hickwich, British ambassador at Washington. I have written repeatedly on matters of most urgent business to a gentleman who I learn has been a guest at this charming home, but my letters and telegrams have elicited no reply. Humph! I allude, sir, to the Earl of Croyland. Does he chance to be still with you?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Renwyck. "Come in. I must apologize for our upset state, but the fact is we have just discovered a serious robbery. Pray be seated, Sir Rodney. Lord Croyland was here a moment ago. I will send for him."

"I shall be obliged, I'm sure. I regret to disturb you under the circumstances, but it's really most important, you know, and"—

"Not at all," said Mr. Renwyck courteously. "James," he called to the butler, "send some one to Lord Croyland with this card."

"Yes, sir," answered James. "I think I see him on the lawn, sir. He's coming now."

Richard, having spied Miss Sempton coming up the path, had promptly moved out upon the lawn in order to postpone the inevitable discovery as long as possible. He saw her go with Harriet and Imogene up the stairs; then he turned once more toward the house. At the steps he was stopped by a farmer, the hard featured official and the fussy little mechanical individual who seemed to have joined forces on the way.

"That's one of 'em now," loudly declared the rustic, pointing a grimy finger at Richard. "I recognize him, officer. He was there all right."

"What's this—what's this?" demanded Mr. Renwyck, hastening out at the sound of the exc land?"

"Yes, it is," answered the puzzled master of Restmore. "What is all this fuss about? It is very annoying to have you people coming here at this time. What do you want? Be brief."

"My name," said the man, "is Parker—John Parker of the Layton Motor company. Lord Croyland here rented one of our machines a week ago and never brought it back. We learned incidentally that he smashed it up and failed to report the accident. We inquired for him at his hotel, but he had left without giving an address. We had a great deal of trouble in locating the damaged motor, but found it at last at New Rochelle. And we have had more trouble in locating him here too. I have a heavy bill against his lordship."

But here the farmer broke in angrily:

"Yes, an' he broke up my waggin an' kilt my dawg. I'll have the law on him. Here, you," he cried, turning to Richard—"you got to come along with us back to New York! My lawyer says you've got to pay a thousand dollars damages. This man has a summons fer you. That's him, constable. Take him in."

Mr. Renwyck turned to the Texan with a look of refined astonishment.

"Really, Lord Croyland," he began, but Richard smiled brazenly and checked further speech.

"Mr. Renwyck," he said, "I must apologize to you for this unfortunate interruption. I did have an automobile accident, it is true, but I paid to have the damaged machine towed to the nearest garage and thought, of course, that the matter would be reported promptly by the officer employed. I gave my address and heard nothing further from the owners of the automobile nor from this worthy farmer whose wagon and dog were both hurled into kingdom come." Richard turned to Mr. Parker. "At what hotel did you inquire for me?"

"Hotel Astor, sir, the address on our books."

"Ah!" snilled the Texan. "That accounts for it. I had changed my address to the St. Regis. Meet me there on Monday morning at 11, both of you. The matter will be adjusted to your entire satisfaction."

"There," said Mr. Renwyck impatiently to the farmer and Mr. Parker. "Does that satisfy you?"

"No, it don't!" protested the rustic one. "He's a slick one, I kin tell ye. He didn't give no sich name as Croylan' w'en he run me down. I disremember wot it was, but it warn't Croylan'. No, sir, that man's tryin' to squirm out'en it."

"Get off my place!" shouted Mr. Renwyck furiously, these successive contretemps proving too much for his unstable equilibrium. "Is my house to be overrun by every imbecile in the state of New York? Take him away, Mr. Parker, before I forget myself and have him ejected forcibly!"

Mr. Parker looked doubtful, the farmer was obdurate, the officer handed Richard a paper, while Uncle Michael looked on, rubbing his plump white hands and chuckling softly. At this juncture Sir Rodney Hickwich happened to spy a monocle in the eye of a gentleman outside. At the same time he caught the name of Croyland. He rose from his seat in the drawing room and appeared upon the scene. He had been greatly troubled over the fact that Lord Croyland's plans for purchasing submarines for Japan had been disclosed to the authorities at Washington, at the instance of the Russian ambassador and unless the plans were dropped forthwith grave complications were certain to follow. For this very reason he had made a flying trip to New York in an endeavor to save his friend from serious blunders. He had not been able, as he said, to get a reply to three telegrams and five letters and was the more anxious to learn the reason of this inexplicable silence. He was a little nearsighted, but he was sure he recognized his friend among the group upon the porch.

"Why, Croyland," he exclaimed, "how are you?"

"How d'ye do?" returned Richard audaciously, taking the outstretched hand and shaking it cordially. "By Jove, old chap, I'm glad to see you!"

Sir Rodney stared at this strange young man before him, gasped and took a backward step; then he jerked his hand from the other's grasp and turned to Mr. Renwyck.

"This isn't the Earl of Croyland, Mr. Renwyck."

"Er—bless my soul," he spluttered, "is this the—eh?"

"The Earl of Croyland, of course," answered Mr. Renwyck, striving to control his growing impatience at all these interruptions.

"Of course," said Richard solemnly. "Didn't you just recognize me yourself?"

"Fellow! Chap! This isn't the Earl of Croyland, Mr. Renwyck. He's an imposter, sir. You are being grossly deceived."

If a lyddite shell had been exploded on the lawn of Restmore it could not have created a more profound sensation. There were several startling exclamations, short and sharp, then a sudden silence, which finally the farmer broke.

"Dog my cats!" he roared exultantly. "I knowed he was tryin' to woozle us!"

"Come into the house," said Mr. Renwyck sternly, "all of you. We'll sift this matter to the bottom."

The assemblage which gathered in the large wide hall was indeed a mixed collection. Besides the haughty Miss Schermerly and the dismal Mr. Van der Awe, there were one wondering English gentleman, two detectives, a constable, several more or less terrified servants, a farmer, an automobile agent, a lawyer, a financier and a scapegoat. This is not counting Mrs Renwyck, who found herself in a frightened state of agitation which Miss Schermerly could not soothe, nor Miss Chittendon, who was worse off; nor Miss Renwyck, nor Miss Sempton, who was displaying her "leaping" figure from a point of vantage on the stairs between the other two.

"Now," said Mr. Renwyck, facing the scapegoat in the center of the hall—"now, sir, pray be good enough to give an account of yourself."

"What would you like to know first?" asked Richard in an exasperatingly level voice.

"Are you an Englishman?"

"An Englishman! Well, rather not," sneered the ambassador.

"No, thank God!" came the fervid answer. "An American and proud of it!"

Sir Rodney's face flamed redder than before. So did Miss Harriet's, but hers from a very different cause.

"Oh, I say"— interposed the ambassador.

"Him English!" laughed the farmer. "Gosh!"

"I knew there was something wrong," began Miss Schermerly in malicious triumph. "I always thought his manners had not the repose that"—

"Silence!" commanded Mr. Renwyck, glaring about him savagely. Then he turned once more to Richard. "You have imposed on my hospitality, sir. Who are you?"

"Now, whom do you think I am?" asked the Texan, with a most engaging smile.

There was silence for a moment; then Miss Sempton spoke:

"Pardon me, Mr. Renwyck, but I think I can supply that information. He is—or says he is—Peter Wilson, chauffeur for the Layton Motor company. He learned to drive a car on a broncho."

"On a broncho!" exclaimed Miss Harriet, to whom an illumination was dawning.

Letter From Freeman Johnson.

Mrs. H. Johnson has received newspapers and an official souvenir program of the carnival held in Manilla in March, which were most interesting documents. The program was artistic and portrayed the floats, giving a brief history of each float. Accompanying the literature was a letter, a portion of which follows. Mr Freeman Johnson, the writer, is well known to Fulton young people, all of whom are pleased to hear from him at all times.

They are having a big time here in Manilla this week, having a carnival similar to the Ka-noo-no in Syracuse. It's the first time in the history of the Far East that anything like it has been attempted, and it's sure a success. Of course it's no where near as elaborate as the ones they have back home, but it's sure good for the Philippines. I've been over two different nights and had a fine time both nights. The carnival city reminds me more of the old County Fair at home than anything else I can think of. All the side shows, merry-go-rounds, hit the babies, 3 for 5 cents, etc., are there, and for the big attraction they have an immense arena erected. It will seat 12,000 people, and there they have a regular Wild West show and circus combined. The infantry and cavalry furnish the bandits, sheriffs, Indians, scouts, etc for the wild west part of it, and say mother, some of the finest feats of horsemanship I ever saw accomplished are executed by our cavalry men. The infantry and artillery gave some exhibition drills that would just bring you on to your feet every time after seeing the boys do the "stunts" they did. I tell you it made me feel proud of the men from the U. S. I don't believe any nation on earth can trim our soldiers at riding, drilling, fighting or anything else in their line of business, and the Navy can hold her own, if they are ever called upon to do so, which I sincerely hope they won't be, as far as fighting goes. I didn't write much about Vladivostok, because I didn't go ashore there, so didn't see anything but the waterfront. There was no snow there. I haven't seen a snowbank since I left the states over two years ago, but it was bitter, freezing cold weather. I noticed it more than usual on account of having lived in a tropical climate for the past two years.

A great many people imagine they have heart trouble when the fact is that the whole trouble lies in the stomach. The pains in the side around the region of the heart are not necessarily heart trouble. We suggest that you start with the stomach and whenever you feel a depression after eating or whenever your food seems to nauseate take Kodol. It will not be very long until all these "heart pains" will disappear. Take Kodol now and until you know you are right again. There isn't any doubt about what it will do and you will find the truth of this statement verified after you have used Kodol for a few weeks. It is sold here by all druggists.

Diagnosed the Case.

A successful oculist recently put in a day of two with his new shotgun in the marshes. He soon noticed that when using the left hand barrel he generally brought down the game, but when using the other barrel he invariably missed. He finally tacked a small target to a bush near the river's bank and fired at it several times with each barrel in order to bring the matter to a test. The result confirmed his suspicions. One barrel was all right, or nearly so, and the other was all wrong.

"Well," said the oculist to a friend who was with him, "as nearly as I can make out this gun has a severe case of strabismus, with strong symptoms of astigmatism!" — Modern Society.

WILLIAM S. SIMS.

Lieutenant Commander in Navy Whose Testimony Made a Sensation.

Lieutenant Commander William S. Sims created a sensation when in his testimony before the senate committee on naval affairs he declared. "The most disgraceful exhibition ever witnessed on the face of the globe was the shameful state of inefficiency displayed by the United States navy during the Spanish war."

Other witnesses before the committee disagreed with the statements of Commander Sims, particularly Rear Admiral Capps, who maintained that conditions in the navy at the time of the encounter with Spain were not nearly so bad as represented by Sims. The latter was a participant in the Spanish conflict and an inspector of target practice in the navy, and this fact made his testimony more impressive when he said regarding the battle of Santiago: "Nine thousand projectiles were fired, and only 120 hits were recorded, or about 1½ per cent. The exhibition of marksmanship was disgraceful. If there had been any decent display of marksmanship on the part of the Spaniards, they would have got away, and our guns would not have stopped them. Cervera did not have proper ammunition to fit his guns. If he had, he would have made trouble for our fleet. As it was, he was worse off than our ships."

According to Commander Sims, conditions were bad up to 1902, but have been greatly improved since then. As to armor belts, he thinks they are placed too low on all our battleships.

Lieutenant Commander Sims is naval secretary to President Roosevelt. He was appointed to the navy from Pennsylvania in 1876.

Old Maps of Louisiana.

An interesting exhibit in the Louisiana State museum is a collection of old maps that show the state of Louisiana extending from Canada, which was then called New France, on the north to the gulf of Mexico on the south and from Virginia and Carolina on the east to the Pacific on the west. These maps were printed in Italy and Holland and France and were evidently largely works of fancy and imagination on the part of the geographers, as they depict mountain ranges where none exists and lakes and rivers distributed around in places where they are not found today. One of the most charming of these maps represents the Mississippi river as making a graceful turn along what is now the roadbed of the Louisville and Nashville railroad and emptying into the gulf in Florida. Along a strip of this country about where English Lookout and peaceful Bay St. Louis are located is a fearsome spot marked as the land of the man eaters.—New Orleans Picayune.

Eccentric Editions of Books.

Mr. George Somes Layard in a book entitled "Suppressed Plates, Wood Engravings, Etc.," writes of the ridiculous people who value such books as the first issue of the first edition of Dickens' "American Notes" just because there is a mistake in the pagination, or a first edition of Disraeli's "Lothair" because the prototype of "Mgr. Catesby" is divulged by misprinting the name "Capel," or "Poems by Robert Burns," first Edinburgh edition, because the Duke of Roxborough appears as "the Duke of Boxborough," or Barker's "Breeches" Bible of 1594 because on the title page of the New Testament the figures are transposed to 1405, or the first edition in French of Washington Irving's "Sketch-Book" because the translator, maltreating the author's name, has declared the book to "traduit de l'Anglais de M. Irwin Washington," and in the dedication has labeled Sir Walter Scott "baronnet."

The Modesty of Women

naturally makes them shrink from the indelicate questions, the obnoxious examinations, and unpleasant local treatments, which some physicians consider essential in the treatment of diseases of women. Yet, if help can be had, it is better to submit to this ordeal than let the disease grow and spread. The trouble is that so often the woman undergoes all the annoyance and shame for nothing. Thousands of women who have been cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription write in appreciation of the cure which dispenses with the examinations and local treatments. There is no other medicine so sure and safe for delicate women as "Favorite Prescription." It cures debilitating drains, irregularity and female weakness. It always helps. It almost always cures. It is strictly non-alcoholic, non-secret, all its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper; contains no deleterious or habit-forming drugs, and every native medicinal root entering into its composition has the full endorsement of those most eminent in the several schools of medical practice. Some of these numerous and strongest of professional endorsements of its ingredients, will be found in a pamphlet wrapped around the bottle, also in a booklet mailed free on request, by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. These professional endorsements should have far more weight than any amount of the ordinary lay, or non-professional testimonials.

The most intelligent women now-a-days insist on knowing what they take as medicine instead of opening their mouths like a lot of young birds and gulping down whatever is offered them. "Favorite Prescription" is of KNOWN COMPOSITION. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 21 one-cent stamps for paper-covered, or 31 stamps for cloth-bound.

If sick consult the Doctor, free of charge by letter. All such communications are held sacredly confidential.

Dr Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate and regulate stomach, liver and bowels.

A Famous Regiment.

It is doubtful if any other one regiment furnished an equal number of distinguished officers during the civil war as did the Second United States cavalry. Among the officers were Albert Sidney Johnston, colonel; Robert E. Lee, lieutenant colonel; William J. Hardee, brevet lieutenant colonel; George H. Thomas, major. Robert E. Lee and A. S. Johnston became generals in the Confederate army, and Hardee became lieutenant general. Thomas became a distinguished general in the Federal army. Among the captains were Earl Van Dorn, E. Kirby Smith and N. G. Evans, all of whom became generals in the Confederate army. J. N. Palmer, George Stoneman and R. W. Johnson held the same positions in the Union army. Among the subalterns John B. Hood, Charles W. Field, Chambliss and Pfifer became southern generals, and R. Garrard and others attained the same place in the northern army. Captain Evans left the United States' service before Colonel Robert E. Lee did, and when they parted at Fort Mason, Tex., Colonel Lee said: "I'm sorry to give you up, Evans. Don't know what may happen before we meet again. Perhaps they'll make you a general."

Helping Him Out.

Mr. Lord looked so grave one evening that his wife, a very young one, noticed it and asked what was the matter.

"I suppose business is troubling you," she surmised shrewdly. "If you've struck a snag, why don't you tell me, and perhaps I may be able to help you?"

After more affectionate adjuration Lord admitted that his payroll bothered him.

"I've made it up as far as the workmen go," he said, "but if I pay the stenographer there won't be a penny left for Davis and me. Davis says he can't stand Cat. He must have some money this month."

Lord's wife was momentarily grave; then her face brightened.

"Why don't you give the stenographer a month's vacation," she suggested eagerly. "Then divide what there is with Davis? It seems to me," judiciously, "that would be fair all round."—Youth's Companion.

The Story of Starlight.

"Once there was a group of sportsmen who were all quite broke," said a Jocky club official. "They must, however, get in to the races, and one at a time they presented themselves at the paddock gate.

"'I am the owner of Starlight,' the first said. He was well dressed and imposing. They believed and passed him in.

"'I am Starlight's trainer,' said the second. His red face and bluff manner bore out his story, and they admitted him.

"'The third man, small and thin, next appeared.

"'Starlight's jockey,' he said shortly and hurried through the gate.

"The fourth and last man of the group was very shabby indeed.

"'Well, who are you?' they said impatiently when he presented himself.

"'I am Starlight,' was the meek reply."—Los Angeles Times.

"The Morning Tub."

A few years ago a sister of mine called in to see an old lady who lived in a little cottage in Lincolnshire and in course of conversation happened to mention that she had a cold sponge-down every morning.

"Law, miss," said the old lady, "and does your mother know?"

"Yes, certainly, and she quite approves."

"Well," said the old lady, "Ah washes mi face ivvery daay, an' Ah washes mi neck once a week, but Ah've nivver bin washed all ower since Ah was a baby."

This good lady lived to the ripe old age of ninety-three.—Cor. London News.

Irish Players.

Dublin Actors Who Are Appearing In American Theaters—William B. Yeats and the Irish Revival.

THE Irish literary revival has attracted so much attention that special interest attaches to the visit to New York of the players belonging to the Irish National Theater society of Dublin, headed by William Butler Yeats, poet and playwright and one of the foremost leaders of the intellectual awakening in Ireland. These genuine Irish actors are showing Americans the difference between the brogue of Kilkenny and that of the vaudeville Irish comedian. They are of the soil as truly as the peat from the bog. They play the parts they live and when at home in Dublin often act in the evening and engage in other occupations during the daytime. They do not act with shillalahs, and there is not a fight in one of their plays. It has been said that the difference between the Irishman of the New York stage and of Dublin is more than 3,000 miles. The members of this company illustrate the saying. It includes the comedienne Miss Bridget O'Dempster and the famous Fay brothers.

Mr. Yeats, Dr. Douglas Hyde and Lady Gregory of Galway are perhaps the most conspicuous of the leaders in the Gaelic section of the Celtic movement. Mr. Yeats is the eldest son of the well known Irish artist, J. B. Yeats, and was born to the love of beauty. Educated in Dublin, he was often at the home of his grandparents in the county of Sligo, where he looked upon what he has termed "a most wild and beautiful scenery, under a sky ever loaded and fantastic with dying clouds." His imaginative nature enabled him very early to grasp the poetic quality of the folklore of his race, and he was led to make it his life mission to reveal that quality to the world. A glimpse of his character was had when he visited this country about four years ago. He was then only thirty-four years old, but had several volumes of poems, plays and essays to his credit. On landing in New York he was besieged by reporters, who of course asked him the inevitable question, "What do you think of our skyscrapers?" Mr. Yeats paused a moment and then said:

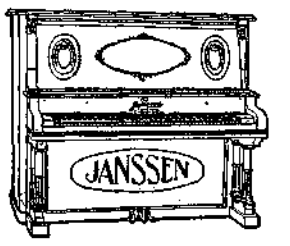
"They are wonderful, very wonderful, if for no other reason than that they make you Americans sometimes look up at God's beautiful sky."

The exquisite phrasing and poetic imagery of Mr. Yeats' verse had established his place among writers of the English language before he threw himself into what has been termed the Celtic literary revival. That revival, so far as the Irish are concerned, has in view fostering the use of the Gaelic language, the presentation of plays in that tongue and the renewal of interest in Irish music. Mr. Yeats considers his own special work in this revival the support of the Irish theater and presentation through it of Irish dramas. The poet got some of his folklore tales from "a little bright eyed old man named Paddy Flynn." He once paid a tribute to his memory in the following terms:

"Paddy Flynn is dead. A friend of mine gave him a large bottle of whisky, and, though a sober man at most times, the sight of so much liquor filled him with a great enthusiasm, and he lived upon it for some days and then died."

When Mr. Yeats was in this country four years ago he gave Kipling admirers something of a shock by remarking, "Kipling had a soul to sell, and he sold it—to the devil."

Some people think a poet has an easy vocation. That this is a mistake is inferred from the following lines by Mr. Yeats:



We sat together at one summer's end,
That beautiful mild woman, your close friend,
And you and I, and talked of poetry.
I said: "A line will take us hours maybe,
Yet if it does not seem a moment's thought
Our stitching and unstitching have been naught.
Better go down upon your marrowbones
And scrub a kitchen pavement or break stones
Like an old pauper in all kinds of weather,
For to articulate sweet sounds together
Is to work harder than all these, and yet
Be thought an idler by the noisy set
Of bankers, schoolmasters and clergymen
The martyrs call the world."

Referred.

"Anything in that rumor that you're going to get a divorce?"

"Really, I don't know," replied the theatrical star languidly. "You might ask my press agent."—Philadelphia Ledger.

ORGANS! PIANOS!

Musical Merchandise, Phonograph Records, Etc.

We wish to call your attention to a few facts regarding the selection of a PIANO. Buy an instrument of standard make; deal with a firm that handles such makes. Our experience in tuning and repairing has shown us beyond doubt the faulty construction, poor finish and thin tone of many pianos that are presented to you as just as good as the product of old reliable manufacturers. Untruthful advertising, bold assertions may catch the ignorant and unthinking, but the intelligent man or woman, in buying, pay little attention to such stuff. WHEN WE TELL YOU we have supplied some of the most critical people in this city and surrounding country; when we tell you we carry a larger stock than any dealer in Oswego county; when we say we have the product of some of the oldest and most reliable piano manufacturers in the country, WE TELL YOU THE TRUTH.

These pianos are never found in department stores, dry goods shops or with the smaller dealer who usually buys on consignment.

But great care is exercised by these makers to place their agencies with the oldest and best known dealers in each county. WE HAVE THEM and would be pleased to have you call and inspect our stock.

THE OLD FASHIONED WAY OF BANKING has been ours for twenty years. No matter what others may do we do not change. The old fashioned way of doing things in banking has always proven to be the best. The old time friendships, the old home, the old memories and the things we love, and the old fashioned bank we never can forget. Some folks change their ideas or methods from the old to the new once in a while, but somehow after a time they wander back to the old home where they feel acquainted, where the hand clasp is firm, the look from the eye is straight, and they feel secure. In these days of speculation and extravagance, of storm and stress, it behoves every man and woman to stop and think. Saving is but a habit, acquire it, and teach it to your children and your friends.

Mrs. Gertrude E. DeLong of Fulton and James T. Parks of Elmira were married on Thursday afternoon by Rev. C. J. Taft, at the parsonage of the Congregational church, Binghamton. A wedding supper was served at the parsonage by the Rev. and Mrs. Taft and later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Parks took the train for Elmira, where they will make their future home. Mr. Parks is a well known liveryman of Elmira.

At 7 o'clock on Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Moody, occurred the marriage of Miss Mamie Moody to Mr. Frank B. Norton. The home had been prettily decorated with green and white flowers, a wedding bell being suspended over the young couple during the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Charles Olmsted, pastor of the Congregational church. Miss Maude Cole presided at the piano; Miss Florence Moody was flower girl and Miss Ruth Switzer, maid of honor. The bride was gowned in white satin. After congratulations, a bridal supper was served the guests who were the immediate relatives and friends. Mr. and Mrs. Norton left on the late train for a visit in Saratoga. At the train they were met by Mrs. Norton's Sunday school class and they were given a merry Good speed and plenty of rice and confetti. After May 1 they will be "at home" to their friends at No. 410 West Second street.

VIRGINIA SPOOKS.

It was an afternoon in June, when Phill (a Colored Boy working for me) said. Capt., I wants to go over home to-night, carn't I get off a little early? Yes, I said, do up the chores so as to get away about seven, how will that suit you? Dat suits me fus rate. It was about eight o'clock when I said to Phill, I thought you wanted to go over home to-night, if so, you had better be going, it's getting late to go down the cut and over the creek. Well, su, that's what I'ze been studying about and I ain't gwine. Not going, I thought you wanted to go over home to-night, you are not going to let a little dark prevent you from going, are you? Well su, I ain't gwine. Has you ever been down thar in de night? Yes, I have driven through there in the night. Well den, hasn't you ever sperienced any strange sights or had haunts talk to you? No Phill, can't say that I have. Lor then, yous about the fust man dat ever went down through dat cut and crossed de bridge what ain't had jack-o-my-lanterns follow him, and su, it's a fac, they's led many poor niggers off in dem swarmps, dats neber been heard of. No su, I ain't going down there to-night. Nonsence Phill, nothing will harm you, go along if you want to. No su, I wouldn't go down dat cut, and over dat bridge to-night, for a deed of 40 acres lan', I's had sperience wid dem jack-o-my-lanterns and if I hadn't knowed jus what to do, you'd neber had me wucking here, but I knowed what to do, but sar, dey came powerful nigh to gittin me one night. I was going down dat cut and jus as I got to de bottom and fore I could do furst thing, I was jus following one of dem jack-o-my-lanterns off in de swamp, jus as quiet as if he had a blind bridle on me, but presently I sort'a come to and got my senses jus as it was leading me through some soft mud and I jus reached down an' grabbed a big handful and then I tuck off my hat and turned it 'rong side out and put de mud on top of it and put it on my head, and su, dat jack-o-my-lantern, he jus stopped right dar and go out. Den I waller thru de swamp back to de road. And I went up dat Rollins Hill mighty quick and when I got long about where Abram Holmes lives and jus cross de road from whar dat Wilks Booth was killed, I heard a kinder rushin' sound and jus as I look over my lef sholder to see what it was, something said kinder soft, "Phill, it's you and I to-night." Well, su, de fus lep I took I went right out from under de hat I had on and I run jus about as fas as a hound does, when he fust breaks out de fox. Well, su, I couldn't keep dat lick up long and presently I 'gan to slacken up and fus thing I knowed, he wus right long side me and saying, "Phill, it's just you and I to-night." Gord, wasn't I scared, but I jus lit out again, but I couldn't gain a bit on him, he jus kept right 'long side of me, and when I did slack up again, he'd say, "Phill, it's jus you and I to-night." Den I bus right out crying and said, what yer gwine to do wid me, and he say, "Phill, it's just you and I to-night."

Well, su, dat turn me 'stracted and the fust ting I knowed wuz wen I waked up in de bed at home and my mammy wus sittin' side me and sez youse bin sic and stracted for foah days. Well, Phil, did you have any idea who that was that came along side of you and said, "Phill, it's just you and I to-night". Well, su, I'se always thought it wus dat Wilkes Booth, and I'se never been by dat place after dark since dat night.

Methodist General Conference.

The Methodist General Conference opened in Lyric Hall, Baltimore, on Wednesday of last week. Seven hundred and eighty seven delegates were present and all climes were represented.

In the distribution of work the delegates from the Northern New York Conference are assigned to the following committees: Rev. C. C. Townsend is on Episcopacy, Education, Sunday Schools, Freedmen, Deaconess Work and Evangelism. Rev. W. D. Marsh, D. D., is a member of the following committees: Itinerary, Revision and Foreign Missions. Rev. S. J. Greenfield is on the State of the Church, Temperance and the Book Concern. Rev. E. B. Topping is assigned to Boundaries, Temporal Economy, Home Missions and the Epworth League.

To the lay delegates is allotted places as follows: E. R. Redhead—Itinerancy, the Book Concern and Epworth League; G. W. Sanborn of Utica—Episcopacy, State of the Church and Foreign Missions. D. S. Brown of Watertown—Boundaries, Revision, Home Missions, and Deaconess Work. F. G. Moore, Adams—Temporal Economy, Temperance, Education and Sunday Schools.

Delegates to this great Congress come from 37 counties, where Methodism has its followers.

In the order of importance the Committee on Episcopacy will be headed by the honor under who got the largest number of votes at his Conference. This falls to Rev. C. C. Townsend, Presiding Elder of St. Lawrence District, and formerly of Fulton

The "Sun" of Baltimore, says—"at the hotels late at night travelling salesmen were being turned away for the first time in many months, and when Baltimore went to sleep it did so on a closed town."

Fultonian Reported Killed.

On Monday morning Samuel Hadden of this city received a communication from one R. B. Chase of Burlington, Iowa, saying that David Crocker had been instantly killed on May 9, by a train on the C. B. & Q., R. R. tracks, on which he was walking in company with Floyd Halstead, the two young men having left Fulton for the west two weeks ago. Halstead was uninjured. The deceased is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Crocker and is survived by his parents, four sisters and one brother. It is expected that the remains will be brought to Fulton for interment.

Cornell Can Have New Trial.

The judgment of conviction in the Editor F. M. Cornell case, in which he was convicted of criminally libelling Judge Stowell, was last week reversed by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court and a new trial was ordered. Presiding Justice McLennan dissents from the opinion of his co-associates.

DIED.

In a sanitarium in Wayland on April 29 occurred the death of George B. Kitts, at one time proprietor of a hotel in this city and later of the Doolittle house, Oswego. At the time of his last illness he was conducting a hotel in Corning. Among the surviving children are Messrs Henry and Nathaniel Kitts of this city.

The remains of Maryette Williams, aged 61, were brought to this city from Ilion Friday; death occurred at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Cora Corey. The funeral was held on Saturday from Powers Corners church and interment was made in the Rural Cemetery, Granby. The deceased is survived by her husband Henry C. Williams of Ilion; two daughters, Mrs. Hattie Bacon of this city and Mrs. Cora Corey of Ilion; three sisters, Mrs. Helen M. Hamilton of Lysander, Mrs. Angie Sharp and Mrs. J. H. McMahon of Canastota, and one brother, Isaac Terpening of Granby.

Alice, aged 56, wife of Mr. Marvin A. Thomson, passed to rest early on Friday morning, after years of semi-invalidism, during which she had been a great sufferer. The deceased was a favorite with all who knew her and her death is regretted by a large circle of acquaintances. Besides her husband, she is survived by her father, Mr. Elisha Hyde and one sister, Mrs. Philip Culver of Rochester, and two brothers, Messrs Horton and Salem Hyde of Syracuse. The funeral services were held on Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the late home, the Rev. John Richards officiating.

On Sunday morning, at her home in Cayuga street, occurred the death of Mrs Ida W. Walker, aged 56, after months of suffering with cancer, during which she manifested great patience, and her cheeriness would have given one little idea that for over a year she had been momentarily expecting the grim summons. A few weeks ago the sister, with whom she made her home, passed away, and from that time Mrs. Walker gradually failed. She was an active member of Zion Episcopal church and was intensely interested in its different societies, especially in the Girls Friendly Society, of which she was president for several years. She had a host of friends in this vicinity, all of whom regret her death. The funeral services were held on Tuesday afternoon from the late home, the Rev. A. H. Grant officiating. This Wednesday morning Undertaker E. S. Brown, in accordance with a request which the deceased made of him several months ago, and stipulated in a letter found with her burial clothing, took the remains to Buffalo, where they will be cremated, and the ashes will be placed in the family lot in Mt. Adnah. One sister, Miss Belle Smith of Syracuse, and two neices, the Misses Smith of Syracuse, survive

Grand Jury Did Not Investigate.

District Attorney Baker and County Attorney Coville devoted all the time possible to the reading of the tardy report of Comptroller Glynn but felt that they could not prepare a report to be submitted to the Grand Jury then in session. Mr. Baker then gave out the following statement regarding the matter last week: County Attorney Henry D. Coville of Hastings and myself spent the greater part of Monday and yesterday in examining this report. Both Mr. Coville and myself came to the conclusion that in nearly all instances of illegal fees being received by certain persons, as reported by Comptroller Glynn, the proper procedure is by having taxpayers' actions commenced, which course is also recommended in Comptroller Glynn's report. The Oswego County Board of Supervisors will be called together in a short time in special session to consider this report and also the report of Mr. Farrell, the expert accountant employed by Oswego county, at which time, no doubt, the bringing of taxpayers' actions will be directed by the board.

There are several matters which may require presentation to a grand jury and these matters will be presented at the proper time. I received this report from the Comptroller Saturday. The report shows it was submitted to Comptroller Glynn on March 24 last, at or shortly after which time I should have received the copy made for me by the examiners. I am unable to account for the delay, especially in view of the Comptroller's letter to me under date of January 26, in which he stated: "I shall be very glad to send you a copy of the examination report as soon as it is made."

In order to properly present any matter requiring consideration by a grand jury, it will necessarily require considerable time to prepare and brief the facts. Inasmuch as court will adjourn next week, and may possibly close this week, it will not be possible to make the necessary examination and preparation at this time.

"Cooked" and "Well Cooked" Food

Good food and a good cook are not enough to produce a good meal. Much depends on the vessels in which the food is prepared. Unless these are scrupulously clean, there will be a disagreeable odor or a taste of tin or iron, not to mention the danger of ptomaine poisoning. Many stomach troubles and other ailments can be traced back to this source. These dangers are overcome by the use of our

SANITO COOKING UTENSILS

These are specially made to reproduce the old German cooking utensils so universally used abroad. SANITO ware has a special lining which cannot crack or scale off. This lining is absolutely acid proof, and the vessels are always sweet, clean and wholesome. SANITO ware should be used for all ordinary culinary purposes. It will prove particularly valuable in preparing food for the sick or for infants.

Our Offer A set of SANITO ware consists of 6 pieces—2 bake pans (1 & 2qts.), 2 cooking kettles (2 & 4 quarts) and a 2-piece roaster. We will ship the complete set upon receipt of $2.50 All charges prepaid east of the Mississippi. For points beyond we prepay charges to the river. Safe arrival guaranteed

Local and Personal

The Spring of 1908 is certainly a cold, rainy one.

Mr. W. A. Butts has returned from Albany.

Victor Foster of New York city has been the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Foster.

Mr. T. C. Giroux has disposed of his First street barber shop to Maurice Gomon.

Mrs. I. C. Curtis has returned from Orange City, Florida, where she spent the winter.

Miss Mary Nichols of Syracuse has been visiting in the family of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Forsyth.

The annual meeting of the Oswego County Medical Society will be held in this city on Tuesday, May 19

The Woman's Auxiliary to the Hospital Association will give their annual supper in the City Hall on Saturday evening, May 23.

Miss Sam Lewis will leave the last of this month for Texas where she will spend sometime with her friend, Miss Kuteman, who is at present her guest.

A final degree of divorce was filed in the case of James H. Townsend against Frances L. Thompson, formerly Mrs. Townsend.

Mr. C. L. Foster has purchased from Photograper Darrow, his business located over the Post Office. Mr. Foster has had twelve years experience in photography and will continue the business, using the most modern methods, and he guarantees satisfaction in all work entrusted to him.

Insist upon DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. There are substitutes, but there is only one original. It is healing, soothing and cooling and is especially good for piles. Sold by all druggists.

Miss Clara Hart has accepted a position as engraver in Charlotteville, Va.

Mrs. Emma McRea has returned from Houston, Texas, where she spent the Winter with her daughter and daughter-in-law.

Mr. and Mrs. I. C. Cary of New York City have been spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Lewis. They are en route to Corning where they will remain for several weeks.

The Republican convention to nominate a school commissioner to succeed Commissioner Herman Kant, will be held in Pulaski on June 25. Mr. Kant will undoubtedly receive the nomination.

Dr. and Mrs. Edward Frank Marsh of Brooklyn have been spending a few days with Dr. and Mrs. H. P. Marsh and Mrs. Edward Marsh, returning to their home on Monday.

Mr. Frank M. Darrow left on Thursday for Syracuse where he will continue in the photographic business. Mr. Darrow has conducted a studio in this city for several years and has made many friends who regret his departure, but who wish him success in his new home. Mrs. Darrow and their son, Ernest, opened a studio in Syracuse about a year ago and their rapidly increasing business makes necessary Mr. Darrow's disposing of his studio in Fulton that he may assist them in Syracuse.

Mr. and Mrs. B. S. McKinstry left on Thursday for Louisville, Kentucky, where they will remain until early in June. The trip is taken for the benefit of Mr. McKinstry's health, he having applied himself so closely to business and without vacation, as to be completely tired out. A host of friends wish for them an enjoyable and beneficial trip.

Atlantic City Excursion.

Via New York Central, Thursday, May 21, at $10.00 round trip. Tickets good ten days, and allow stop-off at New York on return trip. A delightful trip at small expense. Consult Ticket Agents.

Union Memorial services will be held at the Congregational church on Sunday, May 24, at 7:30 p. m.

Rev. Charles Olmstead went to New York this week to attend the reunion of his class, and the graduating exercises at Union Theological Seminary. He will also attend the meeting of the State Association at Patchogue, L. I., May 19-21.

Next Sunday, May 17, Rev. Charles Olmstead will exchange with Rev. J. N. Taft, Ph. D., of Elizabeth, N. J. Dr. Taft is a brother of the late W. S. Taft of this city, and when a boy worked in the woolen mills here. His theme in the morning will be "What is life?" and in the evening "Be sensible." As a prelude to the evening discourse he will speak of a national character who passed "from factory to fame."

The action of Jemima Crane of Fulton against the Fulton Savings Bank, Charles Phillips and others, is to be tried in open court according to a stipulation filed last week. This is an action to determine the title to about $1,300 which is in the bank. This case was referred by S. C. Huntington, who found for the defendants. The Appellate Division revised the referre's decision and ordered a new trial. Coon & Coon represent the plaintiff, F. T. Cahill the defendants, except the Fulton bank which is represented by Piper Rice & Wilson.

ALLIED CRAFTS.

The writer cheerfully subscribes to the belief of the late Robert G Ingersoll, in as far as he believed that—

Finding little children and bringing them to their own
Is a great sight better business than loafing 'round a throne.

Verbally the above quotation may be incorrect but in sentiment it is Ingersollian.

It appears that hundreds are putting this theory into practice and in many towns, some of them no larger than Fulton, the theory is finding expression in the Allied Crafts. And good incalculable is resulting therefrom. The plan as carried out is for a church or a federation of churches to equip a room with all tools and paraphenalia necessary for the learning of the trades—the carpenters, the masons, the printers, the painters, the blacksmiths—on through the list. It may be commenced with a few tools and contributions be solicited until a complete craftsman's shop is secured.

The tools are not necessarily new. Good second hand ones may be secured for a very little money. A suitable superintendent is engaged to keep an oversight and prevent the destruction of the instruments and also to teach the boys the proper manner of handling the tools belonging to whatever trade he prefers to follow. After school hours, until ten o'clock at night, this room is open and, ready for boys of any age, creed or color and in it he may follow out his bent. Orders may be taken for window boxes, tickets, etc., and the boys fill the order to the best of his ability, the money received being expended for the better equipment of the shop.

In this manner the boys are kept from the streets, they are taught a trade and are receiving discipline which will fit them for future useful lives. In towns where such shops have been established it is almost impossible to find a boy on the streets. Young loafers are the exception and the result has been most gratifying to the promoters of the allied crafts.

Frank Munsey

Hustling Editor Who Owns Three Big Daily Newspapers and Half a Dozen Magazines—His Views Concerning Journalism and His Offer to Arthur Brisbane.

It is not an exaggeration to speak of Frank A. Munsey, who recently purchased the Baltimore News, as a human dynamo. His record in the publishing field indicates that he is as full of energy as a 5,000 horsepower electric generator. The fact of his purchase of the Baltimore News is suggestive both of his seemingly exhaustless supply of motive power and of the boundless possibilities of his policy as a publisher, for Mr. Munsey now owns three daily newspapers and over half a dozen magazines and still yearns for more journalistic fields to conquer. Besides the Baltimore News, his newspaper property includes the Boston Journal and the Washington Times, and his magazines are known as Munsey's Magazine, the Argosy, the Scrap Book, the All Story Magazine, the Railroad Man's Magazine and the Ocean. The Scrap Book is practically two magazines, as it is issued in two sections. This is an age of combination, and Mr. Munsey does not see why the principle that has been applied so often in commerce and industry should not also be applied in the publishing field. As he himself puts it:

There is no business that cries so loud for organization and combination as that of newspaper publishing. If the extortions of the paper trust are to be met, organization is necessary to the very existence of many newspapers. The waste under existing conditions is frightful and the results miserably less than they could be made.

For one thing, the number of newspapers is at least 60 per cent greater than we need. As a result of the overproduction the publishers suffer, and as a direct consequence the public suffers.

If I controlled 500 newspapers, I would have them as small in size as business conditions admitted, but every line in them would be as nearly a masterpiece of editing and reporting as it was possible to turn out.

Think of the possibilities involved in a chain of 500 newspapers under a single control. Such a faculty could be maintained as no college could support; the greatest authors, artists, essayists, engineers and statesmen would write with authority on every question of importance, each of the 500 papers getting the benefit of these great minds, while maintaining their individuality on purely local matters. There could be a $100,000 or a $200,000 a year man at the head of the editorial force and another God made genius in charge of the business end.

As to paying $100,000 to an editor in chief, there is evidence that Mr. Munsey would be willing to back up his theory on this subject. The evidence came out quite accidentally at a dinner given not long since by the Periodical Publishers of America in compliment to Stephen Lauzanne, the French journalist, then on a visit to America. There was a little good natured sparring between Mr. Munsey and Arthur Brisbane of the New York Evening Journal, and the latter remarked in the course of it: "I will tell you a secret. Mr. Munsey offered me $52,000 a year to run the Daily News for him. I declined, and the Daily News is dead."

Mr. Munsey was on his feet at once. "I don't believe now that even Brisbane could have kept the Daily News alive," he exclaimed. Mr. Munsey said his recollection was that he had first offered Brisbane $25,000 a year, then had doubled the sum. There was a lively dispute between the two over circumstances upon which their recollections did not agree. Finally when it was adjusted the magazine publisher suddenly exclaimed, "Anyway, I will double the offer again if you will come with me."

Mr. Brisbane bowed his appreciation of what evidently was more than a mere compliment, but explained that he had just signed a new contract with William R. Hearst.

Mr. Munsey is fifty-three and exemplifies the saying of Tennyson, "Better fifty years of Europe than a cycle of Cathay." He was born in Maine and learned telegraphy as a young man, being placed in charge of the Western Union office in Augusta. Becoming possessed of the idea that he could succeed as a publisher, he started for New York and there began the issue of the Argosy, which last December celebrated its twenty-fifth birthday anniversary. In his earlier career he went up against obstacles which would have completely discouraged men of less determination and perseverance. Time and again it seemed that he would surely be down and out, but in the end successful in establishing himself as an important factor in the publishing world.

MILTON D. PURDY.

Noted "Trust Buster" Who Has Been Nominated For Federal Bench.

Milton D. Purdy, who has been appointed to the federal bench of the district of Minnesota by the president, has won a reputation while an assistant attorney general of the United States as one of the principal "trust busters" of the administration. He has had chief charge of the prosecution of cases under the anti-trust laws and has made a record which has marked him as a lawyer of exceptional ability. He is rather young for the position to which he has been nominated, being but forty-one, and the two senators from Minnesota favored a man of sixty-three, W. E. Hale of Minneapolis. The president has adopted a policy of not appointing to the federal bench a man over fifty years of age except under unusual circumstances; hence his determination to name Mr. Purdy instead of the lawyer favored by the Minnesota members of the senate. The rise of Mr. Purdy to his present position of influence in his profession was not anticipated by those who watched him as a boy in Summit county, O. He finally obtained a good education, graduating from the University of Minnesota and from the college of law of that institution. But as a youngster he was considered rather lacking in ambition. His father had a pottery shop, and young Purdy worked in it. He had no desire at the time to be anything but a maker of pots, but his mother insisted that he should go to high school, and after that came college. Speaking of his work in the pot shop, the jurist of the future once told of his earnings there as follows:

"I was employed on Saturdays and during vacations as a bull maker. In those days each potter had a boy to weigh his clay and to work out the air bubbles by cutting it to pieces with a wire and then kneading it into a compact mass. I picked up the trade in that fashion, and my father gave me a wheel and a journeyman's wages. If I had jugs or crocks I would make about $2 a day. One Saturday I earned $5 with tops for snuff jars. That was so exceptional, however, that I have never forgotten it."

A BOODLER'S PUNISHMENT.

The House of a San Francisco Grafter Which Was Wrecked by a Bomb.

It is often hard to administer appropriate punishment to persons guilty of "boodling" or "grafting," and this fact has sometimes led indignant citizens to impose on such malefactors penalties not prescribed by the regular courts. An instance of this is the punishment visited upon James L. Gallagher, chief of the boodling supervisors in San Francisco. His house was wrecked by a dynamite bomb which shattered the front of the building and came near killing its occupants. Many windows in surrounding buildings were broken by the shock. The photograph reproduced herewith tells the story of the vengeance taken upon a recreant official in a graphic manner.

Decision in Favor of Stephens

Among the decisions handed down by the Appellate Division last week was one in the Stephens vs. the O. & W. Railroad Company, which decision affirms the report of Referee Mattison of Utica, that the company must pay Mr. Stephens $10,000 damages. An appeal to the Court of Appeals will be taken.

The case has been in the courts nineteen years and the question of damages involved how much damages Mr. Stephens, formerly of Fulton, is entitled to for a track remaining on his property without authority.

In 1869 Mr. Stephens consented that the old Midland Railroad Company lay tracks in Second Street, Fulton, opposite his property and in 1889 he sued to have the company remove the tracks. The Court of Appeals held that the company could have one main track, but no additional tracks. The second track was not laid until two years after the first one and the Court held that the company interpreted the consent to suit itself so as to lay the additional track. The present trial is to adjust damages for the use of the extra unauthorized track.

Referee Mattison decided that Mr. Stephens was entitled to $10,000 damages and the company appealed claiming that this sum was excessive. The referee has been affirmed by the Appellate Division. H. D. Donnelly and Paul Armitage of New York, represents Mr. Stephens and P. W. Cullinan represents the O. & W. Railroad Company.

Dangerous Business.

On Friday at six o'clock as the people were leaving their places of business for their homes, an unusually heavy charge of dynamite in the old canal walls near the electric light station, sent the rocks flying with tremendous force along First street. Two large stones struck the Phillips block with such force that a was forced in the brick wall, the stones falling to the sidewalk without injuring anyone. This is the second time a heavy blast has done damage in that vicinity in a week, but fortunately without loss of life or limb. It cannot b repeated often with only property damage and the officials upon whom the responsibility for the prevention of such dangerous practices devolves should rigidly enforce the law.

Barge Canal Work Inspected.

Last Wednesday Superintendent of Public Works Stevens, Assistant Superintendent Mead, and Division Superintendents Barrett and Burleigh visited the scene of the local barge canal construction work for the purpose of satisfying themselves as to the truthfulness of the complaints that the work was not being prosecuted as rapidly as it should be.

Mr. Stevens later announced that he was not satisfied with the progress being made in this city nor in Oswego and he purposed sending an expert from the Albany office to this city to inspect the work and help push it.

Mr. Stevens has extended the time for the opening of the Oswego canal, from May 15 until June 1, to permit the contractors to bring their work to a point where they can continue it during the navigation period the coming Summer. Mr. Stevens also says that the canal will not be closed until Dec. 15, unless climatic conditions render it necessary.

The "pure food law" is designed by the Government to protect the public from injurious ingredients in both foods and drugs. It is beneficial both to the public and to the conscientious manufacturer. Ely's Cream Balm, a successful remedy for cold in the head, nasal catarrh, hay fever, etc., containing no injurious drugs, meets fully the requirements of the new law, and that fact is prominently stated on every package. It contains none of the injurious drugs which are required by the law to be mentioned on the label. Hence you can use it safely.

Judge Stowell's Decisions.

Judge Stowell rendered two decisions on Saturday. One was in the case of Thomas Whalen vs. James W. Ball, both of this city. It was an appeal from a judgement by a Justice of the Peace for $180 and $4.85 costs in favor of the plaintiff. Judge Stowell reversed this and ordered a new trial on May 26. It was an action on a promissory note.

In the case of Nettie Nolan against Jay Balls an action on a promissory note, Judge Stowell reversed the judgment of $75 and $2.25 costs rendered in favor of the defendant.

The Worship of Serpents.

The small town of Werda, in the kingdom of Dahomey, is celebrated for its "temple of serpents," a long building in which the priests keep upward of a thousand serpents of all sizes, which they feed with the birds and frogs brought to them as offerings by the natives.

These serpents, many of them of enormous size, may be seen hanging from the beams across the ceiling, with their heads pointing downward and in all sorts of strange contortions. The priests make the small serpents go through various evolutions by lightly touching them with a rod, but they do not venture to touch the largest ones, some of which are large enough to infold a bullock in their coils.

It often happens that some of these serpents make their way out of the temple into the town, and the priests have the greatest difficulty in coaxing them back. To kill a serpent intentionally is a crime punished with death, and if a European were to kill one the authority of the king himself would scarcely suffice to save his life. Any one killing a serpent unintentionally must inform the priest of what has occurred and go through the course of purification which takes place once a year.

The Poor Hungry Fish.

"Here is an interesting thing that happened last summer to a friend and myself," said a New Yorker. "We had gone on a fishing trip in a rowboat, but it seemed that either all the fish were at another place or were not hungry. We decided if those fish were not hungry we were. We had taken our luncheon, as wise fishermen will, and in order to keep the bread as fresh as possible had left it in loaf form. My friend asked me to pass it to him, and in doing so the loaf of bread went overboard. We made out the best we could without the bread and later rowed to another place to fish. On our way back we passed the place where we lost our bread. Then we saw the sight of our lives. On each side of the loaf of bread stood a big fish, and for as far as we could see there was a great line of small fish. We wondered what it was, and then the thought dawned on us—those fish had formed a "bread line" and the two large fish were dealing out the bread. After that we didn't have the heart to try to catch any of those poor hungry fish."

Witherill's Greatest ANNUAL MAY SALE

Of Manufacturer's and Importer's Samples and Overstocks

Grandest Assortments ever brought to Syracuse! And the Values! Absolutely nothing like them ever offered you before! Hundreds of amazing opportunities for saving! Newest Spring garments and dry goods at marvelously low prices! The manufacturers stand the loss!

We take advantage of bargains just the same as our customers do, otherwise we could never plan such a sale as this. We have a standing agreement with the manufacturers and importers and commission houses which supply us with our regular lines, to get all the best of their Spring samples and surplus stocks once a year at about a third to a half regular prices. You can thank them for these bargains. Their's is the loss, not ours, and the gain is most assuredly yours Their season is over—yours will last at least two full months more, and the goods are just as stylish and just as perfect as if we had paid full prices for them.

The sale is now in progress. A sale that takes precedence over all others. A sale that has no counterpart in Syracuse. A typical Witherill bargain sale! We cannot say anything stronger. Last year's offerings were WONDERFUL, This year they are MORE WONDERFUL! There's no such thing as standing still in modern merchandising. Each season must see a betterment. We have scoured the markets to make

THIS SALE BY FAR THE BEST OF ALL!

Positively the only sale that enables you to buy women's elegant new $10 coats for $5; $8 skirts of the latest models for $4; the most desirable children's coats and dresses and bonnets at much less than regular prices; the only sale that offers women's Spring suits at less than the price of the cloth alone; hosiery and underwear bargains that seem almost unbelievable; decisively lower prices on silks and dress goods and domestics; incomparable bargains in notions, toilet goods, muslin underwear, gloves, men's furnishings and almost all other lines now in season and now in demand. A SALE THAT PROVIDES YOU WITH BETTER BARGAINS THAN ANY OTHER SALE EVER DID!

This is a strong assertion but warranted by the facts. We say it with all the force and earnestness at our command. Everybody knows that Witherill statements like Witherill goods can always be depended upon. More than your money's worth in every instance. We can't do justice to the offerings. We want you to SEE them. Actual personal investigation will convince you that we have underestimated rather than overstated their value.

Fish of Oneida. The appointment was promptly confirmed by the Senate, and on Wednesday Dr. Davis received her commision from the Secretary of State. She is a native of Orwell, this county.

When you think of indigestion think of Kodol, for it is without doubt the only preparation that completely digests all classes of food. And that is what you need when you have indigestion or stomach trouble—something that will act promptly but thoroughly; something that will get right at the trouble and do the very work itself for the stomach by digesting the food that you eat and that is Kodol. It is pleasant to take. It is sold by all druggists.

Sothern and Laura Keene.

While in New York and before he had made any hit the elder Sothern had a dispute with Laura Keene concerning some trivial affair at a rehearsal, and Miss Keene went into one of her tantrums. After the quarrel on the stage she retired to her dressing room and, still angry, sent for Sothern and began to rate him fiercely.

"Stop, Laura—stop just a minute!" interrupted the comedian, and, advancing to the light, he deliberately turned it down.

"What do you mean by that, sir?" she demanded, in a rage.

"Oh, nothing," replied Sothern, "but you have always been so lovely to me that I can't bear to look upon your beautiful face when you are in a passion. Now go on!"

Artificial Limbs.

"A manufacturer or dealer in artificial limbs who wears a cork arm or leg himself is much better equipped for business than his competitors who are sound," said a man who uses a cork leg. "In fact, it has become a sort of unwritten law among us to patronize such men when possible. Sentimental reasons may have something to do with the case, but I guess the chief reason is that we consider that if a man can make a limb for himself that fits like the paper on the wall he can make it for others. Manufacturers of artificial limbs know this, and frequently you will find an advertisement like this: 'The So-and-so artificial leg is built by a man who is wearing one and who knows from experience what you want for comfort.' This is a strong argument, for it's no easy thing to get an artificial limb that just fits. Persons who have trouble getting shoes that are just right are in great luck compared to us."—New York Sun.

Where Red Hair is Disliked.

In Cornwall, particularly the Land's End district, it is not advisable to dub a person "a red haired Dane," though in most parts of England, especially inland, the expression would as likely as not provoke no comment at all or be regarded as simply frivolous.

At a police court case heard in 1867 at Penzance town hall it came out in evidence that the defendant had called the complainant "a red haired Dane," and this led to an assault. The strong repugnance of Cornishmen to be dubbed by this strange appellation is as strong as ever.

The Celtic nations hated the Danes and were always fighting them. And not only in Cornwall, but also all along our coasts, where the Danes or Norsemen made their ravages, this deep rooted prejudice against people with red hair, "red headed," more or less remains ingrained in the national character.—J. Harris Stone in "The English Illustrated."

Boone's Portrait in Oil.

There never was but one oil portrait of Daniel Boone painted from life, and that was by Chester Harding, a distinguished artist of Boston, who came to Missouri in June, 1820, and painted it in the residence of Flanders Callaway, Boone's son-in-law, where Boone was then living, near the village of Marthasville, in Warren county. The Rev. James E. Welch, one of the oldest Baptist preachers in the state and father of Aikman Welch, attorney general of Missouri during Governor Gamble's administration, sat in Boone's bed behind Boone for him to lean against while Harding painted the picture, the pioneer being too feeble to sit alone. Harding's portrait of Boone now hangs in the state capitol at Frankfort, Ky.—Kansas City Star.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 13, 1908

In speaking of the speech of Senator Jeff Davis delivered recently on the floor of the Senate to the empty galleries and with an audience of but three Senators, two of whom were discussing the political situation off in a corner and paying no heed to the pyrotechnics of the Arkansas Senator, a prominent politician in Washington rather wittily remarked that "A state whose capital is Little Rock seems perfectly symbolized and fittingly represented by such a small pebble on the beach at Washington."

The celebration by the Roman Catholic Church of the most important occurrence in its history in New York City will stand among the conspicuous events of a religious nature in the history of the country. Such a large number of ecclesiastical dignitaries has not been gathered together in this country since the great Plenary Council in Baltimore.

It is expected that Secretary Taft will return from his visit to the Panama Canal, recently undertaken at the instance of the President in order to deal with certain important questions under consideration there, on the eve of the Chicago Convention.

Republican Caucuses Held.

Parish

The Republican caucus for Parish was held on Tuesday when the following delegates were selected:

County—W. C. David, F. B. Foote, B. F. Weaver, H. Pickens, Charles Whitney, Grant Stone.

The delegates to the County Convention were instructed for W. B. Baker for County Judge, M. F. Tooley for Sheriff, Freelon J. Davis for District Attorney, and Adelbert Stone for Superintendent of Poor.

District—W. C. Richards, A. T. House, Charles Alsever, A. L. De Wolf, G. L. David, W. B. Harter. The district delegates were instructed for Merrick Stowell for Member of Congress and Frank L. Smith for Member of Assembly.

His Great Fault.

"Yes," said the would be author, "I've taken a house in the country, but it will be necessary for me to engage a gardener. There's quite a plot of ground around the house; too much for me to handle."

"Yes," replied Critick, "you never could handle a plot, could you?"—Catholic Standard and Times.

Local and Personal

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Streeter are entertaining Mr. Streeter's aunt from Clyde.

News has just been received in this city of the marriage on May 2, of Raymond G. Clapp, son of Prof. and Mrs. B. G. Clapp, to a young woman, who is a graduate of Pennsylvania Medical College. Mr. and Mrs. Clapp reside in New York city.

The order of the Eastern Star assembled at the home of Mr. Paul Greenwood, on Broadway, for a dime social Wednesday evening, May 6th. The evening was pleasantly spent with games and music. Miss Hazel Guile rendered two vocal solos very acceptably and Mrs. William G. A. Pelley recited, "A Unique Wedding Fee." Dainty refreshments were served.

The annual state convention of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, which will be held in Yonkers May 14 to 18, will be represented by a committee from the Fulton branch consisting of J. A. Torney and Harvey Hewitt representing the Senior branch, and James Brooks, Jr., Vernon F. Jennings and Leo Dexter the Juniors. They will also make a short stay in New York.

Garrick Club Stories.

Major Arthur Griffiths tells a story apropos of the whimsical objections sometimes raised by members to candidates. The story is about Thackeray and the Garrick club. A man of fortune named Hill, self made, but illiterate, who sometimes went astray with his h's, was a candidate for election. "I pilled him because he is a liar," said Thackeray. "He calls himself 'ill' when he isn't."

Theodore Hook was one of the Garrick's most famous members. He generally arrived at the club late in the afternoon and "never went home till morning." He had been told by the doctors, he said, to avoid the night air. A member of the club in Hook's time predicted the advent of the millennium at the end of three years. "All right," cried Hook, "give me a five pound note now, and I will repay you £50 at the millennium."—London Tit-Bits.

Had a Treat For His Wife.

Dr. George Harvey, a local veterinary physician, was called to a stable not long ago to minister to a horse that was down with colic. It was a serious case, and the doctor saw that the only way to save the horse would be to insert a tube in its side, and allow the gas on its stomach to escape. Just because he thought it would startle the owner of his horse Harvey struck a match and lighted the gas at the end of the tube. The man didn't say much at the time, but he was properly impressed. He had never heard of using a horse for an illuminating plant. The next day when Dr. Harvey came around to see how the horse was getting along—it was all over the colic then—the owner tapped him on the shoulder.

"My wife was away yesterday," he said, "but she's home now. Just light up the horse again, will you? I want her to see it."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Chinese Sun and Moon.

In China the sun and moon are brother and sister. The moon is the elder brother, who looks after his rather silly sister, the sun. This is exactly the reverse of our legends, which make the sun the day king and the gentle moon lady of the night. One day in China, so the legend runs, the sun asked the moon if she couldn't go out at night. The moon answered very sternly: "No. You are a young lady, and it would be improper for you to go out after dark." Then the sun said, "But the people keep looking at me when I go out in the daytime." So the moon told her to take the golden needles that she wore in her hair and stick them into the eyes of people when they stared at her. This is the reason why no one can look at the sun without pain.

Navel Oranges.

Possibly not every one has heard the anecdote about the dear old mother whose son had been promoted to be first lieutenant in the navy. He sent her a box of fine navel oranges from Florida and this brief note:

Dear Mother—Just a handful of navel oranges, something you will find especially choice. Devotedly, JACK.

Speaking of Jack to some guests at the house a few nights later as they were enjoying the oranges, she remarked: "Just the very best boy in all the world, dear, dear Jack. What a splendid sailor, and every inch an officer! But he never could learn to spell. Just think of a lieutenant spelling naval with an 'e' and a small 'n.' Isn't it embarrassing to a mother? Still it sounds all the same when you speak it."—New York Press.

The Glass Snake.

The slowworm is the snake which country people tell you has the peculiar property of breaking itself into bits, each piece afterward surviving. The truth differs slightly from the legend. The slowworm is a timid creature and when first captured tightens all its muscles, thus reducing itself to a remarkably rigid state, in which condition it will no doubt snap like a dry twig; but, needless to say, only the upper and vital portions survive the ordeal.—London Globe.

Cooper, who is about to take up his residence at Oberlin, Ohio. Among the many who spoke their regrets were Commander Richard Esmond, of Sumner Post; P. C. Schilling and Arnold, of Winchester Post and Col. Rapp, of Grant Post, and all the members of Tefft Post. Comrade Cooper was well pleased with the outpouring of good wishes, and said so.—Brooklyn Standard Union.

Some of our readers may not have heard of the death of Capt. S. A. Howe of Gardner, Mass. He served as Sergeant and Lieutenant in Co. C. 24th N. Y. Inf., and Lieutenant and Captain in Co. L, 9th N. Y. Heavy Artillery. His record as a soldier was glorious and we notice by a letter from Alfred S. Roe of Worcester, Mass., who served in the 9th Heavy Artillery with him, that Comrade Howe became a prominent citizen and Member of the State Legislature with our friend Roe, formerly of Fulton. Oswego county has good reason to feel proud of such heroic men as Howe and Rowe.

A ruff place—the neck this Spring.

The meeting for the annual election of officers of the Fulton Choral Society will be held at the First Baptist church this Wednesday evening. This meeting will be of interest to every member.

The rural carriers held a meeting at Central Square on Saturday which was a rouser, carriers and their wives from all sections of the county being present. Eight new members joined the Carrier's Association, making a total membership of fifty out of the sixty eight carriers in the county.

Bargain seekers were rather appalled at the announcement in the local papers last week, through the O. Henderson & Co., advertisement, that their superior $1.25 silk had been reduced to $1.49 per yard. A slip of the pencil had converted the 7 into a 2 and created considerable amusement for readers. The silk was originally $1.75 a yard.

The steel fire escapes for the Foster Theatre have arrived and are in position. The doors have been converted into outward swinging doors and automatic locks are on all doors so that it is now presumed that the Board of Health will remove the order recently issued, whereby the play house must remain closed until further orders.

The muslin underwear sale which opens at the J. C. O'Brien store on Thursday morning will eclipse all previous efforts so far as quantity and quality goes. A dull season compelled a manufacturer to dispose of his stock at ruinously low prices and Mr. O'Brien bought lavishly and at his own price. The benefit he will give you.

The multiple fire alarm system has been installed in the High school building and additional steel fire escapes are being placed on the west side of the building. It is now possible for an alarm to be turned in from seven boxes placed in different sections of the school building and location of a blaze can be instantly detected by the locality from which the alarm sounds.

Mr. Charles M. Allen has been appointed president of the Pathfinder Boat club, to succeed Mr. James C. Hunter, resigned. Messrs C. C. Benedict and H. Putnam Allen, with the president, Mr. Allen, comprise the House Committee. Mr. and Mrs. Wilmore have been reengaged as caretaker and cateress at the club house, having given excellent satisfaction last season. The formal opening of the club house and the first Field Day for the season will occur on Friday, May 22, when a choice menu and program of sports will be enjoyed.

Lovers of good fiction will be delighted with the list of new books just placed on the Lasher Reading club shelves. They are all by well known authors and are written in entertaining vein. Among the number may be found Mr. Crewe's career, Churchill; The resurrection of Miss Cynthia, Kingsley; The husbands of Edith, Vayenne, Percey Brebner, The silver blade, Walk; The call of the South, The coast of chance, Some ladies in haste, and a number of others. No red tape surrounds your taking any or all of these books to be read at your home at your leisure. The only expense to you will be 2 cents per day per book while one is in your possession.

Letters in the mail box at the corner of First and Cayuga streets, on Friday morning, had to be taken therefrom by Electrician William Moon, who was compelled to use rubber gloves. A mail carrier in the day, attempting to place a letter in the box, received an electric shock, and the incident was promptly reported by Officer Michael Bray to Postmaster Hughes. The box, which is attached to a telegraph and arc-light pole, was at once covered with a rubber blanket and a danger sign posted. The trouble was caused by the extreme wet weather and a leakage in the wires which resulted in charging the box with electricity.

Majority and Plurality.

In politics the plurality is the greatest of more than two numbers and is also the excess of the highest number of votes cast for any one candidate over the next highest number. When a candidate receives out of 10,000 votes cast 4,000 and two other candidates receive respectively 3,500 and 2,500, the first is elected by a plurality, though he has received less than a majority of the whole vote, and he is said to have a plurality of 500 votes. If the numbers are 6,000, 3,000 and 1,000, the majority is 2,000 and the plurality is 3,000. A majority, therefore, must be more than half the entire vote cast, and a candidate's majority is, then, the difference between the number of votes he received and the combined number of votes cast for all other candidates; his plurality is the difference between his own number and the number received by the candidate nearest to him. Oftentimes a candidate receives a plurality, but not a majority. Unless there is a tie there is always a plurality. — Pathfinder.

Why Sailors Don't Swim.

"You think it's strange, do you," said the sailor, "that us shellbacks can hardly ever swim?"

"Strange and almost criminal," replied the druggist firmly. "Sailors who can't swim—I don't understand it at all."

The sailor frowned.

"Suppose'n'," he said, "on a cold, black night you found yourself in the sea, not a spar left of the wreck, every shipmate drowned, nothin' anywhere but the cold, the blackness, the bitter water. In them conditions," he said, "what would you rather do—swim and swim and swim in agony till you died or sink right down and die at wunst?"

"I think I'd rather die at once," said the druggist, shuddering.

"So sailors think," said the other, "and it's to spare themselves possible long hours of agony that they like not to learn to swim. And they encourage their sons not to learn, too, if there's any likelihood of the lads follerin' the sea."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Moral of Playing Cards.

Playing cards have had their moral side, it may surprise you to know. At the Blenheim club in London, lecturing on the subject of playing cards from the point of view of the collector, Mr. Alfred Whitman said that the most valuable packs were those that taught Biblical history or inculcated moral lessons. In Italy in the eighteenth century it was customary to issue packs of cards with Old Testament scenes engraved upon them. In Germany of the same period playing cards with fables to which morals were attached were customary. French playing cards of the time of Louis XIV. were used to teach geography and history, while in the England of Elizabeth and the Stuarts playing cards were used as political pamphlets. Most valuable were cards issued in France at the time of the French revolution, when figures of Genius, Liberty and Equality took the place of kings, queens and knaves.—London Saturday Review.

He Has Two Signatures.

There is one New York business man who is reasonably proof against the forger, as he has two signatures and the forger must first get hold of one of his bank checks to get any action. Seeing the signature on a letter or hotel register would do the forger no good. The bank would not recognize it. "I don't particularly fear the forger," the business man admitted, "but my two signatures make me feel safer just the same. I am surprised that everybody doesn't hit on the same plan. It's very easy after you get the knack of signing your name two separate and distinct ways."—New York Globe.

Hard to Do Without Pockets.

"The most annoying thing in navy life for a recruit is the absence of side pockets in the uniform trousers," said a yeoman at the navy recruiting station. "The average man doesn't realize how strong is the custom of thrusting his hands in his trousers' pockets until he dons a pair without pockets. I've worn the navy uniform four years now, and I frequently find myself trying to put my hands in my pockets."—Kansas City Times.

The Points Were There.

Little Clara's parents often discuss reincarnation, and the small maiden has acquired some of the phraseology.

"Mamma," she said one day, "my kitty must have been a paper of pins in a previous state of existence."

"Why do you think so?" asked her mother.

"Because I can feel some of them in her toes yet," was the logical reply.

"He isn't," spoke up Mr. Parker promptly, "asking your pardon, ma'am, for contradicting a lady. I belong to the Layton Motor company, and I never laid eyes on this man before in my life."

"'Tain't so!" shouted the farmer. "He is Peter Wilson; I recall it now. I heard him say so himself. The lady hear'd him, too, an' she'll back me up."

"Officer," said Mr. Renwyck, with quiet ferocity, "oblige me by putting that man out of my house."

Sergeant Flint complied willingly, and for the balance of the conclave the rustic looked on and listened from afar. When quiet was restored Mr. Renwyck returned to the matter in hand.

"You admit, then, to having sailed under false colors?"

"I do," said Richard equably.

"Is your name Peter Wilson?"

"No."

Mr. Renwyck's face went red, then deathly pale. He had heard enough. In the excitement of the exposure he had lost sight for the moment of the robbery. He pointed a shaking finger at the Texan and exclaimed in a tone which was loud enough for all to hear:

"Where are my diamonds?"

"I give it up," said Richard cheerfully.

"That's what they want you to do," interrupted Mr. Van der Awe, with a sudden burst of intelligence, which surprised everybody.

"You've got them, my man," said Mr. Renwyck. "Officers, arrest him!"

"Father!"

Shrill and anguished came the cry, and the desperate Texan's warm blood tingled at the sound. To him it meant one friend at least, no matter what his name might be. As Harriet stepped forward Uncle Michael caught her hand, whispered a word in her ear and pulled her gently back.

"Be careful, Jacob," he admonished. "You are laying yourself open to a suit for libel. If you had listened to me at first, you"—

"Hold your tongue," retorted Mr. Renwyck sharply. "This is my affair."

"Oh, all right," agreed Mr. Corrigan, shrugging as he turned away. "I wash my hands of the matter entirely."

This he proceeded to do, but with the proverbial "invisible soap," seeming to derive much joy therefrom.

CHAPTER XXIII.

RICHARD was not angry at Mr. Renwyck's accusation, false though it was. He had expected it all along and had steeled himself to bear it without the turning of an eyelash. This would seem to be his opportunity for confessing his deception, yet now he was checked by the part the two young ladies had played on the previous night. To make a clean breast of it would be to involve them also, and even though it would clear him personally he could not entertain the thought for a single instant.

Yet when Sergeant Flint, the detective, put forth his hand the blood of the Texan seethed into action. There was no evidence of anger, no movement to resist the law, but in his cold gray eye there came a warning glint, which was further backed by a calm, dispassionate tone.

"Don't do that, sonny," he said in words that carried conviction. "There'll be no trouble. But hands off!" Once more he turned quietly to his host. "Now, Mr. Renwyck, kindly explain your charge."

"It is scarcely necessary," answered that gentleman in undisguised contempt, "but if you wish to be further unmasked before this company I have no objection, I assure you. You entered my house under false pretenses and with an assumed name. By your own confession you have abused our trust and hospitality. I find you in my library at 3 o'clock in the morning, fully dressed, while the window is wide open and the burglar alarm switched off. Can you account for this extraordinary proceeding on the part of a guest in a gentleman's house?"

"I can," he answered calmly. Harriet made an involuntary movement at this, but Richard, whose eyes never lost sight of her, in spite of all that occurred, checked her with a motion of his hand. "As I told you, I had come downstairs for a book. The night was warm, and through the window came a very grateful breeze. If I wished to open a window, why should I alarm the entire household with a furious clatter from a big brass gong?"

There were murmurs of approval from several persons among the company, especially the ladies, but this only made Mr. Renwyck more firm in his just convictions.

"Nonsense," he cried, "utter bosh! Do you mean to tell me that you will swear in court—as you certainly will have to—that you opened that library window merely to let in fresh air?"

"There was no other reason," the Texan answered imperturbably.

Mr. Renwyck tried another tack.

"Was there any other man with you in the library last night?"

"There was."

Imogene gasped, and Harriet put an arm around her sobbingly.

"Ha!" cried the financier triumphantly. "Perhaps you will turn state's evidence. Well, who was this other man?"

"You," smiled Richard. "I remember you perfectly on account of your costume, which was—er—quaint in the extreme."

Uncle Michael broke into a jovial roar, while a snigger of amusement rippled among the other listeners. The culprit had scored a point, but it only served to put Mr. Renwyck in a warmer rage.

"Officers," he cried, "do your duty! I accuse this man—he's a thief!"

Miss Harriet stepped forward, a crimson spot glowing on either cheek, but Imogene held tightly to her arm and dragged her back. Mr. Van der Awe was in a state which bordered on despair. He also had been watching Imogene and Harriet, and he saw that they were far more interested in the proceedings of the case than their silence warranted. Three times Miss Harriet had started forward, but her whimpering friend had always detained her, once going so far as to stop an exclamation with a pretty hand across a prettier mouth. What was it Miss Renwyck seemed so eager to tell which Miss Chittendon seemed equally determined to withhold?

At Mr. Renwyck's order to the detectives great excitement filled the room. Sergeant Flint and his subordinate closed upon the Texan, and for a moment it seemed that trouble was inevitable.

"Stop!" said Richard. The tone was incisive, and somehow the wondering company gave obedience. "Mr. Renwyck," he went on quietly, "you have called me a thief before many witnesses. You will be required to answer for this to me! As to the manner of that answer you know enough of men from Texas to"—

This time Harriet broke away from Miss Imogene, whitening to the lips and stretching out her hand to the group beneath her.

"Texas?" she cried. "Then you are"—

"I am," smiled Richard, "and don't you say a single word. We'll get out of this 'mill' too."

Miss Renwyck sank back against the balustrade, trembling from head to foot, while her color came and went, as she stared in silence at the cowboy of her dreams. In her heart she had known it from the first, yet now she recognized the fact that she loved the pseudo Englishman even if he had not turned out to be her hero of the plains. How splendid he looked as he faced the company, striving to shield two helpless girls by taking the blame of the robbery upon himself! For her sake he was being branded as a thief, but this thing should not be!

"Imogene," she whispered, "I must tell. I must, I must!"

But Imogene clung to her appealingly.

"Oh, don't!" she pleaded. "Cornelius will be so angry at me. Look at him glowering now! Just wait a little while. I shall die of shame. Please, please!"

Harriet bit her lip. It was too late now, anyway, for her lover was speaking again, and she did not wish to miss a word.

"Gentlemen," he was saying, "Mr. Renwyck has accused me of a crime. Perhaps he is justified in connecting me with the loss of his valuable property; but, on the other hand, I appeal to you as level headed, thinking men. His evidence is purely circumstantial."

"Can you prove your innocence?" sneered the financier.

"Unfortunately, no, nor am I compelled to do so by the laws of the land," returned the Texan quietly. "But I can weld as strong a chain around any member of this household whom you choose to select."

"Done!" retorted Mr. Renwyck angrily. "Make the choice yourself. Go on."

"Very well," laughed Richard, "I will. Mr. Renwyck, I select you!"

"Me!" stormed the millionaire, starting back in genuine astonishment. "Preposterous!"

There was a chuckle of delight from a distant corner, and Mr. Renwyck had no trouble at all in fixing it upon Brother Michael. Richard stood with his feet slightly apart, his hands in his pockets, while he began to rock forward and backward on his heels and toes. The humor of the situation was coming back again.

"Gentlemen," he said, "and ladies, too, if you will allow me—this is merely for the sake of argument—our honorable host, for whom, believe me, I have the utmost respect and admiration, has unfortunately placed himself in a very ugly light. To begin with, he is involved in a certain financial scheme, the details of which I am not at liberty to disclose. Suffice it to say it requires a vast amount of capital. That Mr. Renwyck is pinched for money is proved by the fact that night before last he urged me to place $100,000 in his enterprise."

"What!" gasped Mr. Renwyck. "Why, sir—why"—

"Wait!" said Richard sharply. "I have the floor." Again he turned to the company. "I declined to invest this amount of money for reasons of my own, though my host was much annoyed thereat."

The speculator, who could not imagine what Richard was driving at, stood speechless with amazement, while his brazen guest went on:

"Failing in this attempt, gentlemen, the prisoner at the bar next looks about him for other means to relieve his need. His daughter is possessed of diamonds valued at much more than the amount required by him. He has these gems in charge and claims to have put them in his safe. Did any one see him do it? No. Can he prove that he placed them there at all? I think not, gentlemen. By his own admission he is the only person who knows the combination of that safe. He was warned by an eminent lawyer to place detectives in his house, and declined to do so for obvious reasons. He did not wish to be spied upon!"

"Bully!" chuckled Uncle Michael to himself behind the shield of a handkerchief stuffed into his mouth. "Oh, bully! I didn't think he had it in him! Go for him, Dicky, boy! Go for him!"

Mr. Renwyck was far too thunderstruck even to defend himself. He glared at his accuser savagely, while his lank cheeks grew paler still with impotent rage.

"Stop!" he shouted. "This is nonsense, infernal nonsense! What! I steal my own daughter's diamonds? Ridiculous!"

"Can you prove it?" asked the Texan suavely. "If so, the court will acquit you gladly. It's up to you, Mr. Renwyck. Fire away!"

"Well, by Jove!" exclaimed Sir Rodney, actually letting his monocle fall in his excitement.

"How dare you, you villain?" cried Mrs. Renwyck.

"Come, come; we'd better git this foolin' over and take along our man," said the detective sergeant.

"And he was going to teach me about English aristocracy!" sniffed Miss Schermerly scornfully, suppressing with difficulty a hysterical desire to scream.

"Where is the real Lord Croyland, I want to know?" asked Mr. Parker, taking advantage of the general disturbance to find voice again.

The old speculator was so handicapped by anger at the impudent assurance of the real culprit that coherent utterance was out of the question. He gagged and spluttered in a most incriminating manner, which gave a certain color to Richard's otherwise unthinkable charge. Beyond doubt a stormy scene would have followed had not Mr. Corrigan at last come forward to take a hand.

"Steady, Jake!" he cautioned, while Mrs. Renwyck, appalled at the turn after the strain of hearing her husband accused of stealing, burst suddenly into tears, requiring the combined ministrations of Miss Schermerly and the three girls. "Jake" declined positively to be steady, so the little lawyer determined to bring matters to a close.

"Look here!" he shouted. "It seems all of you have had your share of talking. I want to do some of it myself." He turned to the company. "As for my brother-in-law, I feel that I must take his side and declare his innocence of theft. As for this young gentleman, he is equally innocent, though I must admit that he has taking ways." Uncle Michael paused to smile in appreciation of his own humor and continued, "As for me, I haven't the least doubt that any of you hot headed people would slap me in jail at once for the simple reason that I have those diamonds in my pocket."

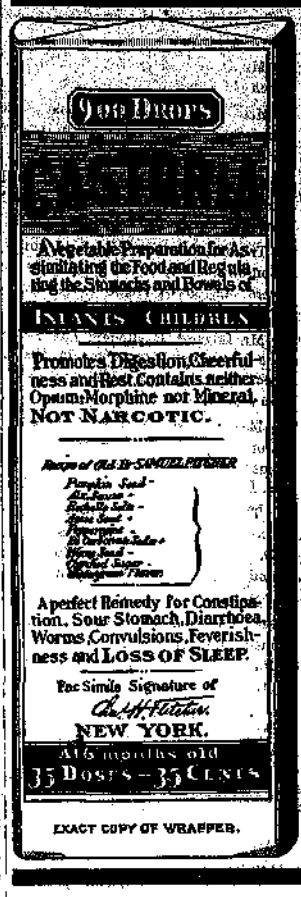
"You!" cried a dozen people in a breath. "You!"

"Yes," he laughed. "Here they are!" He pulled several jewel cases from his pocket, opened them and held them for all to see.

"So you're the robber, are you?" said Richard coolly, glad of a chance to pay back some of Uncle Michael's gibes. "Well, I'd never have believed it if you hadn't confessed it."

"You score one, Dick, but wait," returned Uncle Michael.

"If this is a joke, Michael," began Mr. Renwyck, frowning heavily, "I must say"—



"It's no joke, as you'll find, Jacob, and if you had followed my advice in the beginning you wouldn't have laid yourself wide open to this awkward libel case."

For a moment there was silence. It was difficult to say who was the most dumfounded—Mr. Renwyck, who saw at once what a blunder he had made; Miss Harriet, who knew that the diamonds had been taken by Mr. Fitzgeorge's pal and who wondered how her Uncle Michael had got them, and Imogene, who was confident that her secret would now be disclosed to every one, or Richard, who had locked up poor, innocent Woolsey Bills for a theft which evidently he had not committed. So his ecclesiastical valet had told the truth, after all! Consternation reigned, and everybody began to talk at once, but Mr. Corrigan raised his hand for silence and continued his most effective address.

"You are no doubt wondering," he laughed, "how I happened to come by this valuable property, and I, in spite of our brazen young friend's suggestion, hasten to assure you that I got it honestly. My worthy brother-in-law, who never would listen to any one except himself, declined to heed me when I told him of a danger which threatened his daughter's jewels. To prove that I was right—as I usually am, by the way—I employed several experienced private detectives and lay in wait for the fun. The first night I was terribly disappointed. The second time, though, I bagged my game. I got the diamonds, gentlemen, and I also have the thief securely locked up in my couch house under guard of the limb of the law who caught him." Mr. Corrigan turned to his brother-in-law with an irritating grin. "Perhaps you may be interested to know, Jacob, that the man has a cast in his eye!"

The effect of this last statement was striking. Miss Imogene sent up such a wail of anguish that she had to be assisted upstairs, where hysterics of a most pronounced character set in. Miss Harriet unceremoniously left her young friend in charge of the maids and hastened down again, though on the upper landing she was stopped by Mr. Van der Awe, who had followed his loved one as far as he could with reasonable propriety.

"Oh, heaven!" he moaned in his most sepulchral voice. "What—what is the meaning of it all?"

"Who calls my son a thief?"

"No time now," breathed Harriet, brushing past him. "Don't be silly!"

That Brother Michael had got the better of him was gall and wormwood to Mr. Renwyck's pride. He was furious with himself and every one else connected with the terrible affair, and in his rage he rushed headlong into another blunder.

"Hold on!" he cried. "You've gained your point, Michael, but only in part. You caught the man on the outside, but I have the accomplice on the inside. The accomplice is just as culpable as the actual thief." He frowned at Richard and continued: "This man is an impostor. He switched off the alarm in my library window, let in his partner in crime and was about to cover up his tracks when I chanced to awaken, heard a noise and came downstairs. I caught him in the very act, I tell you, and the law shall take its course. Here, officer, I command you to arrest that man! He's a thief!"

Richard wheeled upon his accuser, his own anger now bubbling to the boiling point, when a deep voice boomed upon them like the roar of a heavy gun:

"Who calls my son a thief?"

With one accord the company turned toward the speaker, and several of them started at the sight of the giant form of old Bill Williams towering in the doorway.

Meat Versus Song.

The great tenor's lunch consisted of a cheese omelet, asparagus, fruit and an ice.

"No meat?" said the reporter.

"As little meat as possible," the tenor replied. "Meat kills song. The nightingale, the thrush and lark are grain eaters, and their song is sweet. The carnivorous birds, the crow, etc., only croak. And in countries that go in for excessive meat eating—England, for instance—there are few good voices, while in the more vegetarian countries, such as Italy, fine singers abound. Song birds are vegetarian," he concluded. "Carnivorous birds croak."—New York Press.

The pains in the side around the region of the heart are not necessarily heart trouble. We suggest that you start with the stomach and whenever you feel a depression after eating or whenever your food seems to nauseate take Kodol. It will not be very long until all these "heart pains" will disappear. Take Kodol now and until you know you are right again. CONSUL GENERAL STRAIGHT.

American Representative at Mukden Who Was Attacked by Japanese.

The attack on Willard Dickerman Straight, the American consul general at Mukden, Manchuria, by Japanese cowdies has given another fillip to the clouds on the international horizon. It is Japan instead of America now which has to look around for some plausible and agreeable method of making an apology for the acts of persons more or less animated by race prejudice. The attack on the American consul general and his servants is regarded as a more serious affair than appears on the surface, on account of the supposed ambitions of Japan respecting Manchuria and their effect on the question of the open door in that country in the matter of trade. There has been talk to the effect that Japan and Russia practically have seized Manchuria for trade purposes, ignoring the rights of China and not permitting the Chinese government to shape an open door policy in accordance with its agreements. Because of the action of Japan and Russia, it is said, American manufacturers are being crowded out of the positions they have won in the markets of southern Manchuria. It is believed that President Roosevelt's desire for a naval bill providing for four new battleships was in part due to the Manchurian situation and his belief that peace in the orient would be promoted by keeping a strong force of battleships in Asiatic waters.

Consul Straight is a young man for one who has seen so much diplomatic service. He was born in 1880 at Oswego, N. Y., and graduated from Cornell university in 1901. For the two following years he was in the Chinese imperial maritime customs service at Nanking and Pekin. For a time he was correspondent of the Associated Press and Reuter's agency in Seoul, Tokyo and Manchuria. In 1905 he became vice consul general and private secretary to the American minister to Korea and the following year was appointed private secretary to the American minister to Cuba. He became consul general at Mukden two years ago.

The Man That Made Niagara.

When the first suspension bridge was thrown over Niagara there was a great and tumultuous opening ceremony, such as the Americans love, and many of the great ones of the United States assembled to do honor to the occasion, and among them was Roscoe Conkling. Conkling was one of the most brilliant public men whom America has produced—a man of commanding, even beautiful, presence and of perhaps unparalleled vanity. He had been called (by an opponent) a human peacock. After the ceremonies attending the opening of the bridge had been concluded Conkling, with many others, was at the railway station waiting to depart; but, though others were there, he did not mingle with them, but strutted and plumed himself for their benefit, posing that they might get the full effect of all his majesty.

One of the station porters was so impressed that, stepping up to another who was hurrying by trundling a load of luggage, he jerked his thumb in Conkling's direction and—

"Who's that feller?" he asked. "Is he the man as built the bridge?"

The other studied the great man a moment.

"Thunder! No," said he. "He's the man as made the falls."—H. Perry Robinson in Putnam's Magazine.

The Lotus Eaters.

The race of people to whom the name "Lotus Eaters" was applied was a Lybian tribe, known to the Greeks as early as the time of Homer. Herodotus describes their country and says that a caravan route led from it to Egypt. The lotus still grows there in great abundance—a prickly shrub bearing a fruit of a sweet taste, compared by Herodotus to that of the date. It is still eaten by the natives, and a kind of wine is made from its juice.

The Badge of Honesty

Is on every wrapper of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery because a full list of the ingredients composing it is printed there in plain English. Forty years of experience has proven its superior worth as a blood purifier and invigorating tonic for the cure of stomach disorders and all liver ills. It builds up the run-down system as no other tonic can in which alcohol is used. The active medicinal principles of native roots such as Golden Seal and Queen's root, Stone and Mandrake root, Bloodroot and Black Cherrybark are extracted and preserved by the use of chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce at Buffalo, N. Y., for free booklet which quotes extracts from well-recognized medical authorities such as Drs. Bartholow, King, Scudder, Coe, Ellingwood and a host of others, showing that these roots can be depended upon for their curative action in all weak states of the stomach, accompanied by indigestion or dyspepsia as well as in all bilious or liver complaints and in all "wasting diseases" where there is loss of flesh and gradual running down of the strength and system.

The Golden Medical Discovery "makes rich pure blood and so invigorates and regulates the stomach, liver and bowels, and, through them, the whole system. Thus all skin affections, blotches, pimples and eruptions as well as scrofulous swellings and old open running sores or ulcers are cured and healed. In treating old running sores, or ulcers, it is well to insure their healing to apply to them Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve. If your druggist don't happen to have this Salve in stock, send fifty-four cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and a large box of the "All-Healing Salve" will reach you by return post.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic, medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

IN PATRIOTISM'S CAUSE.

Mrs. Donald McLean of the D. A. R. and Her Career.

Inheriting the qualities of combativeness from their Revolutionary ancestors, the members of the much honored patriotic society known as the Daughters of the American Revolution generally do a little polite verbal sparring when they meet in their national congress at Continental hall, Washington. "Let us make this congress notable for its love and discord without a bicker," said the president general, Mrs. Donald McLean, on calling the seventeenth congress to order recently, but despite her appeals occasion soon arose for the controversies almost inseparable from the meetings of any large body. Mrs. McLean has occupied the post of president general of the D. A. R. since 1905. She is a charter member of the order and was regent of the New York city chapter for ten years. She has been commissioner from New York state to several expositions, including the Jamestown Tercentennial.

As Miss Emily Nelson Ritchie, daughter of Judge John Ritchie of Prospect

MRS. DONALD M'LEAN.

Hall, Frederick, Md., Mrs. McLean was much interested in American history, to the study of which she gave much attention during her course at the Frederick seminary, from which she graduated in 1873. In 1883 she married Donald McLean, a New York lawyer, descended from the General John McLean who fought in the Revolution and was commissary general of the state of New York under Governor Clinton.

Apropos of ancestry, Mrs. McLean once told of a teacher who taught in a poor neighborhood and received daily gifts of flowers from one of her pupils, a ragged little boy. The flowers were of all sorts, sometimes costly hothouse blooms, sometimes simple, old fashioned garden flowers. As a rule, they were somewhat faded.

One day the boy brought the teacher a great bouquet of mauve orchids. To be sure, they were much wilted, but none the less it could be seen that they had once cost a great deal of money. The puzzled teacher as she took them said:

"Jimmy, where do you get all these flowers that you give me? You don't steal them, I hope?"

"Oh, no, ma'am," the youngster answered; "father's an ash man!"

Double Proof.

"Do you believe in heredity, Mrs. Simpson?"

"Indeed I do. Every mean trait Bobby has I can trace right back to his father."

"Does his father believe in heredity too?"

"Yes. He traces Bobby's faults all back to me."

Invitation Declined.

"As Shakespeare says," remarked Cassidy, who was fond of airing his "book larnin'," "what's in a name?"

"Well," replied Casey, "call me wan that Oi don't like an' Oi'll show ye."—Kansas City Newsbook.

The Two Thomases

Watson, People's Party Nominee for the Presidency, and Hisgen, the Possible Candidate of New Independence Party.

THE People's party has the honor of being first in the field with a presidential candidate in the campaign of 1908, and the head of its ticket is Thomas E. Watson of Georgia. The candidate for vice president is Samuel W. Williams of Indiana. Mr. Watson was nominated for vice president by the People's party in 1896 and for the presidency in 1904. He is politician, journalist, author, lecturer and lawyer. He started out as a poor boy and in spite of the many obstacles in his path succeeded in obtaining an education, in building up a good law practice and in accumulating an independence. He has also made a success in literature and has produced several historical works of importance. He has served in the Georgia legislature and been a member of congress, and it was Watson who introduced the resolution censuring Congressman Cobb of Alabama for intoxication because he had in a rambling speech used the now historic phrase "Where am I at?" Congress refused to censure Judge Cobb, who explained that he had only been drinking tea.

Mr. Watson will be fifty-two years old in September. He is married and has several children and is now quite a large landowner, having an income, it is said, of about $15,000 a year aside from his book royalties.

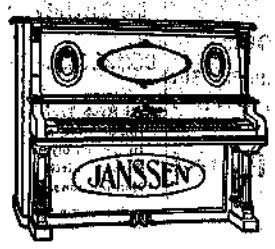
"Who is Hisgen?" is the question that has been asked about the Massachusetts man who has been talked of as the possible candidate of the newly organized Independence party for president of the United States. Briefly answered, Mr. Hisgen is the man who as president of the Four Brothers Independent Oil company had the nerve to defy the Standard Oil trust and who won in this struggle and who later as the nominee of the Independence league for governor of Massachusetts polled the largest vote ever given an independent candidate for that office.



Getting down to details, it may be added that Thomas L. Hisgen was born in Petersburg, Ind., Nov. 26, 1858, and is a son of William Hisgen, a somewhat eccentric German who first located in Albany, N. Y., and then migrated to Indiana, where he carried on a country store. Thomas was the fifth of eleven children, and the care of the family devolved on him to a considerable extent after he was old enough to work, so that his schooling was limited. His father had been experimenting with a formula for the manufacture of axle grease. Thomas and three of his brothers took up the subject and, between them raising a capital of $500, went into the business of making this product. Fire wiped out the little shack which they equipped as a factory. Undaunted, the four brothers set to work to raise more capital. One sacrificed a diamond pin, and Thomas gave up a violin which he dearly loved. By pawning different objects they raised $35 and continued business.

THOMAS L. HISGEN.

About ten years later the Standard Oil company tried to buy them out, offering $600,000. They refused the offer, but to continue making and selling axle grease in competition with the Standard found they would have to sell oil too. Thomas L. took charge of the Massachusetts end of the business and in spite of bitter opposition from the monopoly held his own. As nominee of the Democrats and Independence league for state auditor in 1906 he polled 150,000 votes and as Independence league nominee for governor last year polled 75,000.

ORGANS! PIANOS!

Musical Merchandise, Phonograph Records, Etc.

We wish to call your attention to a few facts regarding the selection of a PIANO. Buy an instrument of standard make; deal with a firm that handles such makes. Our experience in tuning and repairing has shown us beyond doubt the faulty construction, poor finish and thin tone of many pianos that are presented to you as just as good as the product of old reliable manufacturers. Untruthful advertising, bold assertions may catch the ignorant and unthinking, but the intelligent man or woman, in buying, pay little attention to such stuff. WHEN WE TELL YOU we have supplied some of the most critical people in this city and surrounding country; when we tell you we carry a larger stock than any dealer in Oswego county; when we say we have the product of some of the oldest and most reliable piano manufacturers in the country, WE TELL YOU THE TRUTH.

These pianos are never found in department stores, dry goods shops or with the smaller dealer who usually buys on consignment.

But great care is exercised by these makers to place their agencies with the oldest and best known dealers in each county. WE HAVE THEM and would be pleased to have you call and inspect our stock.

A Bride With Some Good Points.

Some years ago in an agricultural district in England there lived a farmer who wanted to sell one of his cows. There was not at that time a weekly paper in which he could advertise, so he resolved to follow a local custom and ask the vicar of the parish when giving out his notices at church to advertise the cow.

"Yes, farmer," said the vicar, "I should be willing to oblige you, but you don't attend my church."

Presently, however, they struck a bargain that the vicar should advertise the cow, and the man in return promised to go to church. Now, unfortunately the man was deaf, and on the Sunday following when the vicar gave out the banns of marriage between Joseph So-and-so, bachelor, and Sarah So-and-so, spinster, the farmer took it for granted that the vicar was giving out particulars of his cow and shouted out:

"You might as well say while you are about it that she is a most gentle creature and entirely free from vice."—Stray Stories.

Where Water Means Life.

As illustrating the scarcity of water in some parts of Australia and the high value set upon it, I would draw attention to the case of three Afghans who were murdered in West Australia. Water was scarce, and yet these three orientals washed themselves in a road hole—the sole source of supply—adjoining a selector's homestead. In a fury he shot the three of them, and at his subsequent trial the jury unanimously acquitted him.—Wide World Magazine.

All Pretty.

A rash paper announced for its columns a forthcoming story, entitled "The Prettiest Girl In the Town."

A hundred young ladies immediately sent post cards warning the editor not to use their real names.—London Globe.

THE OLD FASHIONED WAY OF BANKING has been ours for twenty years. No matter what others may do we do not change. The old fashioned way of doing things in banking has always proven to be the best. The old time friendships; the old home, the old memories and the things we love, and the old fashioned bank we never can forget. Some folks change their ideas or methods from the old to the new once in a while, but somehow after a time they wander back to the old home where they feel acquainted, where the hand clasp is firm, the look from the eye is straight, and they feel secure. In these days of speculation and extravagance, of storm and stress, it behoves every man and woman to stop and think. Saving is but a habit, acquire it, and teach it to your children and your friends.

Veteran's Reunion.

On Wednesday, May 6, Companies E. and H., 24th N. Y. I. Veterans celebrated the forty seventh anniversary of the day when they marched away to meet the grey garbed foe. The number present at the reunion was not large and the list of survivors, present and absent, is depressingly small, the grim reaper having gathered home several comrades since a year ago. But these present made the most of the occasion and reminiscence, yeat and song, with a bountiful repast served at the White Front Cafe, made the occasion an enjoyably memorable one. The presence of Norm G. Cooper of Brooklyn contributed much enlivement and deep regret was expressed that Mr. Cooper was soon to remove to Oberlin, Ohio.

The following were present from Company E: Mosher, Terpening and wife, Chiler and wife, Coles, Kellogg, Sheridan and wife, Teller and wife. Letters from Capt. Jennings, Pentelow, Ells, Chase, and Chandler were enjoyed very much. Company H was represented by Comrade Young and others, and all had to make speeches. The old officers, President Mosher, Sergt. Coles, Treasurer Chiler, Chaplain Youngs and Vice President Terpening, were again elected.

The following is a list of the survivors of Company E, Twenty-fourth Regiment:

STATE LEGISLATURE.

Bitter Fight Renewed Between the Governor and Both Houses.

COMPROMISE NOT LIKELY.

Anti Race Track Bills Subject of Chief Importance at Special Session—Vote In Assembly May Be Closer Than Before—Little Chance For Direct Nominations.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

Albany, May 13.—The situation at the capital may well be termed a "fight to a finish" between Governor Hughes and the legislature. According to some of the legislators, chafing restlessly under the necessity of having had to return to Albany for an extra session, their position may be described by a paraphrase of lines in a famous old Gilbert and Sullivan opera, "Down the hill and up again, just in time to be too late."

Some of the legislators who voted for various of Governor Hughes' measures and policies during the first session of the year have come "up the hill" to the big granite pile of the capitol building for no similar purpose this time, if their own statements are to be believed. For instance, on the question of the anti race track bills, no less than seven assemblymen have stated their intention to the writer of reversing their previous votes and of voting against the Agnew-Hart measures when they again come up for final passage in the lower house. Just how much further this sentiment has spread it is difficult to estimate.

What One Anti-Hughes Senator Says.

One New York city senator who voted against the bills analyzes the situation as follows:

"In my opinion, based on careful observation, the governor is weaker in both houses on the race track question than before, because it has become evident that most of the sentiment in favor of the passage of the bills has been artificially created.

SENATOR THOMAS F. GRADY OF NEW YORK.

(Senator Grady, the Democratic leader in the senate, represents the Fourteenth senate district of New York city. He is the leader in the opposition to Governor Hughes in the senate and has been floor leader in the fight against the Agnew-Hart anti-racing bills. He is to be a candidate for congress in the fall. He has served over twenty years in the legislature and is a member of the following committees: Rules, judiciary finance and cities. He is Tammany Hall's leading orator and is known as "the old war horse.")

"The most of the support of the Agnew-Hart bills has been manufactured by the governor and his ministerial allies through the agency of appeals to the emotions of the general public. They are not at the forefront of a wide, popular demand that sprang up spontaneously because of the need of suppressing some great menacing evil. They themselves created the demand out of thin air and put themselves at the head of it for their own reasons.

"At the early session the legislators, practically isolated at Albany and hearing at all hours of the day speeches on the evils of racing and receiving frequent communications in the mails from people directly inspired by many ministers, naturally formed the idea that there was practically a universal demand for the wiping out of the tracks and betting. But during the interval between the two sessions they have been home in their districts and have learned more accurately the sentiment of their constituents and have had opportunity to take a reasonable view of the entire situation. I think they have discovered the evils of racing to have been exaggerated, that the opponents of the Agnew-Hart bills have just as reputable members as can be found among their supporters and that they will vote accordingly, making the vote in the assembly, for instance, closer than before."

Senator Agnew and his associates in support of the bills, however, can see no ground of fact in such statements. It is their claim that the members of both houses, having been at home for about three weeks, have learned that a big majority of the people of the state are in favor of the bills. Senator Agnew says, "The bills will pass," and, moreover, he strengthens that statement by adding, "I see no reason at all for delaying action on the measures."

Will Governor Hughes Run Again?

There is no doubt that in the first session the governor's side was weakened by the belief of the opposition to him that he would not again be a candidate for the governorship. Now it is all known that he may reconsider his decision not to run again and that his friends are strongly urging him to make a fight for renomination. Many of his opponents will naturally cease their activity against him if he comes out for renomination, and this fact may give him unexpected strength in some quarters.

Direct Nominations.

Hand in hand with the anti race track campaign is now the governor's desire for the adoption of direct nominations, whereas formerly it was given but secondary consideration. The governor's recent speech in Carnegie hall, New York, in which he bitterly attacked political leaders who influence the voting of legislators, particularly senators, had a double meaning. It was an attack on the senatorial supporters of racing and an argument in favor of direct nominations as well.

But Governor Hughes is shown by an actual poll of both senate and assembly by the writer to have more strength in his race track fight than in his direct nominations campaign. The many political leaders of varying degrees of importance of both parties throughout the state would rather see the race tracks go out of existence than witness the political annihilation of themselves. And that is what direct nominations largely mean.

The principal demand for direct nominations throughout the state comes from parts of Brooklyn, the west side of New York city, Buffalo and Utica. When the motion in the first session was made to discharge the rules committee, controlled by Speaker Wadsworth, from consideration of the governor's bill, introduced by Assemblyman Green of Brooklyn, only twenty-seven votes were recorded in favor of direct nominations out of 150 members.

As a rule, when a situation like the present one develops there is talk of compromise in order to avoid lengthy delay. But at present there is no talk of compromise of any sort in Albany. Though some kind of an agreement may later be made between the opposing contingents, there are no facts on which such a prophecy can be predicated.

The Governor's Message.

Governor Hughes' message to the legislature was shorter than expected, but its contents had been forecasted with considerable accuracy. It gave additional evidence of his fighting qualities and left no room for doubtful construction.

Public Service Act Amendment.

The governor's plan of putting telegraph and telephone companies under the jurisdiction of the public service commission is favored by a majority of members of both houses. The killing of the bill in the assembly at the session previous was done by the rules committee, which refused to report it. If the bill had come out of committee it would have passed by a large vote. It was killed by leaders of both the Republican and Democratic parties acting together on the rules committee.

Governor Cannot Affect Recess.

One of the dangers of the governor's position in his entire reform movement is the fact that he has no power to prevent a recess of any duration nor to summon back to the capital the legislators during a recess. At some period during the imbroglio the taking of a recess by the legislature to the end of the governor's term, Dec. 31, is not at all unlikely. He would thus be absolutely powerless unless renominated and re-elected for another term.

The New Senator.

The fact that the new senator from the Orleans-Niagara district cannot take his seat until May 25 makes necessary a delay that embarrasses both the race track and the anti race track divisions, for each side has men who are extremely anxious to leave Albany definitely for the summer for business or political or personal reasons, and some of them may pack up and go abruptly.

A Frequent Query.

Will any one of the eight Republican senators who voted against the Agnew-Hart bills change to the governor's side? This question is asked on all sides. Senator Owen Cassidy of Watkins is perhaps watched with more interest than any other in view of the printed accounts of the alleged changing of Congressman Fassett's telegram, sent from Washington. Senator Cassidy, following his usual policy, does not show any inclination to clarify the situation as to how he will vote on another roll call. His silence on any topic when he decides to maintain it is more silent than the silence of almost any other member of the legislature. Senator Cassidy made a speech of an hour's length in the senate at the early session on the Agnew-Hart bills, and when he concluded no one could tell on which side he stood. The general belief at Albany, however, is that Senator Cassidy will again vote against the bills.

The Thirty Day Bills.

Indications are that when the thirty day period expires the governor will have signed between 500 and 550 bills. Last year he signed about 750, so it is readily apparent that legislative activity has not been exerted so much toward getting bills passed and signed as possibly in other directions.

Of course it is not possible for any governor to be familiar with the details of every bill he considers and signs. He has too much work to allow him to look closely into any but the measures of great importance. The great mass of legislation of secondary importance is thoroughly investigated by the governor's legal adviser, Mr. Edward Sanford, and the governor signs such of these bills as Mr. Sanford recommends.

Governor Hughes follows the practice of giving public hearings on any important bills before him which are strongly opposed.

FEDERAL BUILDING

Congressman Knapp Secures an Appropriation of $10,000 With Which to Purchase a Site for Post Office Building in Fulton.

On Friday Fulton residents were delighted to learn that the Public Buildings Bill had passed the House of Representatives and was ready for the President's signature. The bill carried with it an appropriation of $10,000 for a site for a Post Office building in this city, assuring a modern, adequate federal building within a brief space of time.

Business at the local office has increased, and continues to increase, from year to year and the building in which the office is housed is entirely too cramped for comfort, the clerks and carriers being fairly in each others way. There is no manner in which conditions can be improved in the present place. In fact, the housing of Uncle Sam's business in such cramped, inconvenient, unsanitary quarters is a disgrace to a live, progressive city like Fulton.

The Fulton Chamber of Commerce first took cognizance of the crying necessity for a new building and importuned Congressman Knapp to bend his energies toward securing an appropriation for a modern building. This he has done and with such earnestness that the coveted boon is in sight.

It is presumed that the money will be available as soon as the technicalities are complied with, bids asked for and the site approved by the federal officer upon whom such duty devolves. The appropriation would seem sufficient for a site centrally located to the business center large enough for a building of the specifications required. Several suggestions have already been made as to locations, but the matter will finally be decided by the federal authorities.

When the necessity for a Federal building was first brought to Congressman Knapp's attention two years ago, that gentleman promptly introduced a bill in the House calling for an appropriation of $80,000 for that purpose. The bill found a lodgement in a special committee selected to review such measures, and Congressman Knapp has been energetically working with the committee to obtain favorable consideration. Excellent results have crowned his efforts. Those who manifested special interest in the project were kept informed from time to time of the progress made, and the following correspondence furnishes indubitable evidence that all promises made by Congressman Knapp have been religiously kept.

House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C., May 18, 1908.

Mr. William E. Hughes,
Postmaster Fulton, N. Y.

My Dear Mr. Hughes: I have your favor of the 15th inst., and thank you very much for your congratulations.

The item for Fulton is in the general bill for Public Buildings, under a heading directing the Secretary of the Treasury to acquire sites for buildings, which reads "United States Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., $10,000."

Of late this has been the usual process of beginning the appropriations for public buildings, and the purchase of the site means that in the next Public Buildings bill an appropriation will be made for the construction of the building, thus insuring a Federal building for Fulton.

The pressure for buildings from all parts of the country is so great that the purchase of land and the construction of buildings provided for in one bill would make the sum total so large that it would be hardly practicable to pass it. Therefore we were fortunate in securing an appropriation.

With personal regard, I am
Sincerely yours,
CHAS. L. KNAPP.

House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C., May 16, 1908.

Mr. A. T. Jennings,
Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce,
Fulton, N. Y.

My Dear Mr. Jennings:

The Public Buildings bill, reported to the House and passed yesterday, contained an appropriation of $10,000 for the purchase of a site for a public building in the city of Fulton.

The pressure from all sections of the country is such for public buildings that the policy of the Committee and of Congress has been largely and almost entirely now to appropriate for sites and subsequently for the construction of buildings. This will explain why the appropriation for both site and construction are not included in the bill. However, this item for the purchase of the site insures a subsequent appropriation for the construction of a public building in Fulton.

I hope that what I have been able to accomplish will be satisfactory to the people of Fulton, and I congratulate you upon the assurance that you will have a public building.

Very Sincerely Yours,
CHAS. L. KNAPP.

The provisions of the bill granting this inestimable boon to Fulton are in substance as follows:

Sec. 29. That the Secretary of the Treasury shall require all owners or agents of sites in each city mentioned in this act, where sites or additions to sites are to be purchased, to submit offers of sale in writing. . . . That each site selected under the provisions of this act shall be bounded upon at least two sides by streets, unless otherwise specifically provided.

Sec. 30. That proposals for the sale of land suitable for sites, or additions to sites, provided for in this act, respectively, shall be invited by public advertisement in one of the newspapers in said cities for at least twenty days prior to the date specified in said advertisement for the opening of said proposals. Proposals made in response to said advertisement shall be mailed and addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall then cause the said proposed sites and such others as he may think proper to designate, to be examined in person by an agent of the Treasury Department, who shall make written report to said Secretary of the results of said examination and of his recommendation thereon and the reasons therefor, which shall be accompanied by the original proposals, and all maps, plots and statements which shall come into his possession relating to the said proposed sites.

Sec. 31. That all buildings authorized to be constructed, enlarged or extended under the provisions of this act, shall, unless otherwise provided herein, be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least forty feet on each side, including streets and alleys. Provided, that in exceptional cases and for good cause shown, the Secretary of the Treasury may, in his discretion, reduce the open space to less than forty feet, and in any dimensions which he shall deem sufficient to afford fire protection.

Special Meeting of Supervisors.

The requisite number of signatures to the petition for a special meeting of the Board of Supervisors were secured and a call has been issued for the meeting to be held on Thursday. The matters to be taken up by the Supervisors include the matter of the sale of the old county jail property to the Ames company and the selection of a new site; the matter of the investigation of the books of county officials and offices and the findings will also be discussed as well as other subjects of interest to the county at large.

EXCISE MONIES DIVIDED.

This Spring $33,450.05 was collected in Oswego County for licenses. The usual amount received is in the neighborhood of $70,000. This year it is estimated that the amount will total $100,000 as the licenses must be renewed in October. After deducting the County Treasurer's fee of $660, the remainder was divided between the State and the Towns wherein hotels and saloons were located.

Boylston, Granby, Hannibal, New Haven, Orwell, Oswego Town, Scriba and West Monroe are dry and hence do not get any of the excise money.

The amounts received by the towns and cities follow: Albion, $45.94; Amboy, $30.63; Constantia, $275.62; Hastings, $321.56; Mexico, $321.56; Palermo, $30.63; Parish, $107.19; Redfield, $30.63; Richland, $516.04; Sandy Creek, $168.43. Schroeppel, $336.87; Volney, $91.-33; Williamstown, $76.56; Fulton, $2,666.91; Oswego, $11,371.07; State, $16,390.53.

D. A. R. Meeting.

On Tuesday of last week the D. A. R. met with the Misses Osgood on East First street. After the usual routine of business Mrs. Frank Foster, assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Shaver, gave a very interesting sketch of the life of General La Fayette. Mrs. Foster exhibited to the chapter a full length picture of General La Fayette as he probably appeared in his later manhood; a picture of his tomb in Paris was also shown and Mrs. C. S. Eggleston, who has visited the spot, gave a clear explanation of the same. The next monthly meeting will be held with the First Vice Regent, Mrs. Hinsdale, on June 1st, and on June 8 the annual Memorial Day will be observed in Mt. Adnah.

School Money Apportioned.

County Clerk Simpson on Thursday received notice from Commissioner of Education Draper that Oswego county is entitled to $68,253.-10 school moneys this year. Oswego city receives $10,025; Fulton, $5,-625, and the county outside the cities $52,603.70.

"Cooked" and "Well Cooked" Food

Good food and a good cook are not enough to produce a good meal. Much depends on the vessels in which the food is prepared. Unless these are scrupulously clean, there will be a disagreeable odor or a taste of tin or iron, not to mention the danger of ptomaine poisoning. Many stomach troubles and other ailments can be traced back to this source. These dangers are overcome by the use of our

SANITO COOKING UTENSILS

These are specially made to reproduce the old German cooking utensils so universally used abroad. SANITO ware has a special lining which cannot crack or scale off. This lining is absolutely acid proof, and the vessels are always sweet, clean and wholesome. SANITO ware should be used for all ordinary culinary purposes. It will prove particularly valuable in preparing food for the sick or for infants.

Our Offer A set of SANITO ware consists of 6 pieces—2 bake pans (1 & 2qts.), 2 cooking kettles (2 & 4 quarts) and a 2-piece roaster. We will ship the complete set upon receipt of $2.50
All charges prepaid east of the Mississippi. For points beyond we prepay charges to the river. Safe arrival guaranteed.

Magnificent New Home.

The Pittsburg, Pa. Gazette-Times of May 13, contains the following item which will be of interest to local readers, Mr. Babcock being a son of Mr. Leman Babcock of this city, and a former resident here. "Oakhurst, the handsome new home of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Raymond Babcock, was formally opened last night at a housewarming given by its master and mistress. Although they have occupied the house about a year and have entertained much in the course of that time, this is the first large function they have given and the first general opportunity their friends have had to inspect the new dwelling.

The house sets high on a hill in Woodland Road, commanding a fine view in the winter, when the trees are bare, but in summer secluded by large oaks with which the place abounds. The exterior architecture is old English. The interior varies with the different rooms. The hall is colonial, with white and crimson with woodwork, pillars and pilasters in white enamel. Communicating with it through a wide colonial doorway is the music room in French effect, carried out in soft greens. This leads onto a broad veranda in summer, which in winter becomes a sun parlor.

Opening from the hall and across from the music room is the small reception room which is daintily furnished in Louis XV. design. The furniture is of circassian walnut, caned and half upholstered, half draped with a rich French brocade in dull gray-green and gray brown touched up with dull pink. It was there that Mr. and Mrs. Babcock received their guests last evening, standing before a mantle banked with graceful ferns and Mrs. Jardine roses, which are of a beautiful pink color. Mrs. Babcock wore a French frock in cloud effect, pale pink chiffon over pale yellow silk. It was trimmed with cut steel. Mrs. Babcock wore diamond ornaments.

The host and hostess received alone, but were assisted by their house guests.

A buffet supper was served in the dining and billiard rooms. The architecture and furniture in the former room is old English. It is carried out in heavy mahogany with wall covering and upholstery of tapestry green. The china and glass cabinets were banked with ferns and American Beauty roses stood in tall vases. The table was unornamented save for the viands which were placed there as in the days of Merrie England, whole lobsters, great molds of meat and jellies, huge hams and other toothsome articles. White capped chefs presided over the chafing dishes.

The long table in the billiard room bore a rough untrimmed log along its center over which clambered yellow iris and the azalea. The upper rooms of the house also were thrown wide open for the inspection and the Mendelsohn quartet played throughout the evening. About 600 guests attended the reception last night.

How to Fill Up Holes in Wood.

It sometimes becomes necessary to fill up cracks or dents in fine woodwork, furniture, floors, etc. The following is the best way of doing it: White tissue paper is steeped and perfectly softened in water and by thorough kneading with glue transformed into a paste and by means of ochers (earth colors) colored as nearly as possible to the shade of the wood. To the paste calcined magnesia is then added, and it is forced into the cracks or very firmly to the wood and after drying retains its smooth surface.

Pleasant.

Mistress (midnight)—I don't intend to come downstairs to let you in at this time of night again. New Girl (reassuringly)—You won't have to, mum. One of my friends took an impression of your lock, and he's making a nice key for me.—London Globe.

The soothing spray of Ely's Liquid Cream Balm, used in an atomizer, is an unspeakable relief to sufferers from Catarrh. Some of them describe it as a Godsend, and no wonder. The thick foul discharge is dislodged and the patient breathes freely, perhaps for the first time in weeks. Liquid Cream Balm contains all the healing, purifying elements of solid form, and it never fails to satisfy. Sold by all druggists for 75c., including spraying tube, or mailed by Ely Bros., 56 Warren Street, New York.

Laundering Shirt Waists.

Denver Very Busy.

Colorado's Capital Is Making Ready For the Coming of the Democratic Delegates In July. The Convention Hall.

DENVER is making big preparations for the coming of the Democrats of the nation on July 7 to nominate a candidate for the presidency. For some months the city has been busy with the plans for the entertainment of the expected visitors, and Denver and the whole state of Colorado are looking forward to the event with enthusiasm. Citizens of Denver contributed $100,000 toward the expenses of the convention and will spend more than that before they get through probably in giving their guests the time of their lives. The City Auditorium, which is now nearing completion, will afford an ideal meeting place for the assemblage, and it will be possible for more persons to witness the proceedings and hear the speeches than has been possible at former conventions. The seating arrangements in the hall are completed already. There are to be 11,521 chairs in it in regular rows, and by placing additional chairs in the aisles and in space left for standing room it will be possible to seat 14,000 people. This is a greater seating capacity than that of the Chicago Coliseum, the Madison Square Garden, New York, or the Mormon temple in Salt Lake City.

The work of getting ready for the convention in July is under the direction of the committee of arrangements of the Democratic national committee and of local committees. The former committee is headed by ex-Governor John E. Osborne of Wyoming. The local committees are giving special attention to the arrangements for accommodating all who may come. Names of those who are expected are secured, so far as possible, in advance, and proper quarters are provided for them. Denver has 150 hotels, mostly modern structures of brick and stone and in general as well equipped as any hotels in the United States. In addition there are numerous apartment and rooming houses, and many private families expect to open their homes to visitors on the occasion of the convention. A big attendance is looked for in part because a great many people will doubtless take occasion to visit Denver at the time of the convention and incidentally see the sights of that part of the country. Many side trips can be made easily from the capital of Colorado to points famous for their scenic charms or for their human interest, such as Pike's peak, the Royal gorge and the gold fields of the Cripple Creek district. One of the excursions which are popular is that offered by a railroad giving a trip of sixty miles in both directions, affording passengers the opportunity to stop at various points and gather the magnificent mountain wild flowers which abound.

There is no such thing as Democrat or Republican in Denver when it comes to civic pride and work for the general good of the city. Republicans are working with Democrats in the movement to give every person who visits Denver a good time. Under the inspiration of the example of the mayor, R. W. Speer, who is untiring in labors for the municipality, the citizens generally are preparing to do their full duty in the matter of hospitality. There has been a remarkably united effort to increase the beautiful appearance of the city. Twenty thousand shade trees were planted under the direction of the municipal authorities this spring, and a contest has been arranged by virtue of which a prize will be awarded for the lawn which is kept best during the coming summer. Ornamental gates and columns have been planned as permanent features in the beautification of the city, and special arches and columns have been erected by way of welcome to the guests of July. Denver has long outgrown the characteristics of a mining camp. It is a city with sixty-five graded schools, including four high schools; 180 churches, a public library of 100,000 volumes and a manufacturing output estimated last year at nearly $200,000,000.

nanita, a noted Hindoo priest. He will conduct a school for the study of Sanskrit and of occult phenomena in connection with the religious ceremonies of the temple. The latter is a building which has something of an oriental aspect, but which might easily be mistaken for an apartment house rather than a building for religious use. It is interesting as concrete evidence of the attempt to promote the occult faiths of the orient in the western world.

Legends of the Apple.

The apple enters more largely into folklore and legend than almost any other fruit. In England there was of old a peculiar dance in honor of the apple tree, and various songs were sung and bowls of cider emptied to secure a good apple harvest from the fates. In Germany the girls "snap apple seeds" on New Year's eve to see from which direction a lover is coming. In Austria a girl cuts an apple in two at one blow and counts the seeds. If there are as many in one half as in the other, she will marry. If they are odd, she will be an old maid. If a seed is cut in two, she will quarrel with her husband and be separated from him.

Perry's Big Guns.

Commodore Perry had not yet electrified a grateful nation with his immortal message, "We have met the enemy, and they are ours." While the battle was in progress the sound of the guns was heard at Cleveland, about sixty miles away in a direct line over the water. The few settlers there were expecting the battle and listened with intense interest. Finally the sounds ceased. They waited for a renewal. None came; the lull was painful. Then they knew the battle was over; but the result—ah, that was the point. One old fellow, who had been lying flat with his ear to the ground, soon settled that point. Springing up, he clapped his hands and shouted: "Thank God! They are whipped! They are whipped!"

"How do you know?" the others inquired.

"Heard the big guns last!"

Perry's guns were the heaviest.

Turning a Tight Screw.

Any one who has attempted to remove a very tight screw knows what a very difficult business it is. After straining and twisting for a considerable time the operator frequently ends by losing his temper and destroying the bite of the screw, which remains fixed as tightly as ever. With the aid of a pair of pinchers, however, the affair is quite a simple one. Place the screwdriver in position and then catch hold of the blade with the pinchers just above the head of the screw. Press the screwdriver firmly and at the same time twist round the blade with the pinchers. The tightest screw will yield immediately to this sort of persuasion.

Bird Dogs.

Bird dogs have been known as such for only about three or four centuries. So far as we know, the Duke of Northumberland, sixteenth century, was the first trainer of bird dogs. The duke was followed by others who trained dogs to "set" birds, but it was not till the beginning of the nineteenth century that any reliable record of a distinct brand of bird dogs can be found. The Gordon setter was founded by the Duke of Gordon about 1800.—New York American.

A Retort Discourteous.

A young lady full of good deeds noticed the tongue of a horse bleeding and with a use of technical terms too little appreciated said to the cabby, "Cabby, your horse has hemorrhage."

"It's 'is tongue's too large for his mouth," said the cabby and added sententiously, "Like some young ladies."—London Globe.

MT. PLEASANT.

The Grange will hold another of its enjoyable socials at the hall on Friday evening of this week. An entertainment will be given after which cream and cake will be served. Those having freezers please bring cream, others may bring cake.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Grant spent Sunday at Mrs. Rathbun's in Granby.

Miss Letha Rowlee of Battle Island spent Saturday and Sunday at Lewis Ives'.

Mrs. Virgil Rowlee is seriously ill.

Frank Earl of Auburn has been spending a week with his parents in this place.

Fred Moore is on the sick list.

Fay Newton of Fulton was the recent guest of George Paddock.

Mrs. Silvia Taylor is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Charles Taylor in Binghamton.

Miss Ruth Dutton of Minetto was the recent guest of Miss Edna Kelsey.

Frank Skeele is visiting his sister, Mrs. Alonzo Rowlee, and other relatives.

The Rowlee school entertainment proved to be just as good as it was advertised, and it was the general opinion of those present that it was the best of its kind they had ever attended. The schoolhouse was full to overflowing and cream was served after the program was completed. About $23 was realized.

Miss Ada Barker of Syracuse spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harmon Barker.

Miss Summers of the Oswego Normal School was the guest of her parents, the Rev. and Mrs. Summers, over Sunday.

About thirty-five persons attended the Up-to-Date Social at Allan Osborne's and decided to hold an Ice Cream Social at the church on Friday evening, May 29th, for the benefit of the baseball team. Further announcement next week, with program.

Interest keeps good in our Grange. Thirty-three members were present last Saturday evening in spite of the weather and busy season. Beside making arrangements for the May 22nd social, they decided to hold a field day on the Fourth of July with all kinds of sports and races and fireworks. Don't forget to plan to spend the Fourth at Mt. Pleasant.

The Rowlee District baseball team defeated the Weed Team by a score of 16 to 11 last Saturday afternoon.

The Up-to-Date Club also began practice games last Saturday with a good crowd of spectators.

Frank Hare of Fulton is spending some time with Byron Smith.

Jack Crooks of South Scriba spent Saturday and Sunday with his sister, Mrs. Will Lathrop; also called at Allan Osborne's.

Mrs. Lydia Osborne is spending a few weeks at Ernest Rowlee's. She spent Sunday with Mrs. Melinda Sherman.

SOUTH GRANBY.

We are having a few warm days now, but it is very trying weather for the farmers to get in their oats; it rains so much they have to work between the showers.

Mrs. Frank Whipple attended the funeral of her father, Mr. John Biggs, at Hinmanville on Wednesday.

Mrs. Lizzie Sperbeck received a visit from Mr. and Mrs. Al Collins of Syracuse on Thursday. Their sister, Mrs. Abbie Jackson, accompanied them home.

Mr. Harry Backus, owner of the milk station, was in town Friday.

Mr. Woodford, attorney for the State, was in this place Wednesday looking up the claims of those who have been damaged by Ox Creek overflow.

Mr. William Quade is able to be out again, but he is very feeble.

Mr. and Mrs. King of McGrawville visited their children, Ray and Mabel, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Worden of Fulton visited friends over Sunday.

Auntie McKaslin, who has been quite ill, is able to be out again, although quite feeble.

Mrs. Dora Rowlee, South Hannibal, is with her sister, Mrs. Minnie Paine.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Stewart visited at George Blakeman's on Sunday; also Fred Summerville and wife.

Mrs. Addie Marsh returned to Syracuse on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Verner Shattuck visited her father, O. Paine, on Sunday.

Miss Flora Fisher is with Mrs. Charles White in Jacksonville this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Dickinson visited her brother, Dr. Terpening, on Sunday.

Elmer Fisher was home over Sunday after a three weeks' stay away.

MINETTO AND VICINITY.

Miss Edna Jones is spending some time with Mrs. George Ingamells near Phoenix.

Mr. John Austin is quite ill at his home east of Minetto.

Melvin Wells and wife entertained Scriba friends Sunday.

Mrs. A. D. Congdon has been spending a few days with relatives at North Scriba.

Thursday, May 7, was the birthday anniversary of Mr. Edwin B. Doolittle and several relatives and friends gathered at his home to remind him that he had reached another mile-stone. Both Mr. and Mrs. Doolittle was pleasantly surprised, and a very delightful evening was passed with music, after which a delicious supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Doolittle were presented with a fine rug.

Mrs. Ernest Meade, Fulton, is caring for her mother, Mrs. Nelson Parks, who is very seriously ill.

Mrs. Earl McCann and Miss Margaret Congdon visited in Fulton Saturday.

Mrs. Bertha McCann closed a very successful year of school in the Kingdom, Friday, at which time the teacher and pupils enjoyed a farewell dinner. Mrs. McCann left Saturday to join her husband in Syracuse, where he has a position and where they will make their future home.

Miss Florence Reynolds entertained Miss May Jones of Scriba Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCaw entertained Fulton friends Sunday.

Mr. Delos Brown has a new horse and carriage.

Mrs. Carrie Grommons of Bundyville visited friends here Friday.

Miss Ada Stroup is spending several days in Oswego, the guest of her sister, Mrs. Delbert Parkis.

Mrs. C. B. Benson has been spending some time in New Jersey.

Station Agent and Mrs. F. J. Beadle are rejoicing over the birth of a son.

The death of Miss Laura E. Wadsworth occurred Tuesday after an illness of but a few days. Miss Wadsworth was the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Wadsworth of this village. Always of a loving cheerful disposition she won friends everywhere and was held in high esteem by all who knew her. The past year she spent in Fulton where she attended the Teachers' Training Class and from which she expected to graduate in June. Miss Wadsworth was an earnest worker in the church and Sabbath school where she was a member of the Standard Bearers, a large class of young ladies. Besides the parents, the deceased leaves one brother, Mr. Harry Wadsworth of this village. The heart-felt sympathy of a wide circle of friends is extended to the bereaved ones. The funeral was held from the M. E. Church, Thursday afternoon and was largely attended. The Teachers' Training Class of Fulton High School attended in a body. Many beautiful floral tributes covered and surrounded the casket, mute symbols of the love and esteem of many friends. The bearers were, Messrs. Arthur Baker, Azro Barber, Arthur Oot, Walter Stickney, Norman Uwings, and William Ringland. Interment was made at Riverside.

When you think of indigestion think of Kodol, for it is without doubt the only preparation that completely digests all classes of food. And that is what you need when you have indigestion or stomach trouble—something that will act promptly but thoroughly; something that will get right at the trouble and do the very work itself for the stomach by digesting the food that you eat and that is Kodol. It is pleasant to take. It is sold by all druggists.

Lord Kelvin and the Cable.

It is perhaps not generally known that the success of the Atlantic cable was due to the calculations and experiments of the late Lord Kelvin, at that time plain William Thomson. He discovered that the current through a long cable would arrive gradually at the receiving end and devised the apparatus which rendered it possible to utilize such a current for making the Morse signals. It was through disregard of his theoretical predictions that the first Atlantic cable, in 1858, was ruined by too powerful currents. Without his mirror galvanometer to translate into visible signals the delicate impulses received through the cable the enterprise would have been a complete failure.

Good Terms.

"I'm sure we shall be on good terms," said the man who has just moved into the neighborhood to the corner grocer.

"No doubt of it, sir, especially," he added as an afterthought, "as the terms are cash."—London Telegraph.

Child Management.

I don't like punishments. You will never torture a child into duty, but a sensible child will dread the frown of a judicious mother more than all the rods, dark rooms and scolding schoolmistresses in the universe.—White.

Fatal Error.

"N. Peck's wife leads him a rather merry gait, I fancy."

"Oh, yes. When he was courting her he told her one day she looked pretty when she was angry, and now it has got to be a habit."

Pretty Lively Fooling.

I was out walking in Kingston, Jamaica, one afternoon, and while on a narrow street I came upon two black women, each apparently in a towering rage. Each woman's tongue was going at a phenomenal rate, but not a word of their screeching jargon was intelligible to me.

Finally one of the women scooped up a double handful of the ever present Kingston dust and flung it over the other woman, with a wild shriek of laughter. The dust covered woman retaliated by taking a tin pan she had in her hand and, scooping up a couple of quarts of the dirty water in the gutter by the roadside, drenching her assailant with it, while all that part of Kingston resounded with the mad laughter. The two women then closed in on each other and proceeded to engage in a prolonged wrestle, which resulted in both of them falling to the ground, where they rolled over and over in a cloud of dust and finally stood upon their feet, facing each other in a state of dirt and disorder beyond description.

Fearing that they would make a second onslaught on each other and wishing to play the part of peacemaker, I stepped forward and asked:

"What is the trouble?"

Courtesying low, one of the women said in a soft, drawling voice:

"No trouble at all, mastah; we's jess foolin'."—Exchange.

Cast Up by the Sea.

They that go down to the sea in ships learn much of the mysteries of life. From the coast of Africa there traveled to Scarboro, Me., the painting of an old time sea captain of that town who long years ago was lost with all on board his ship in the China seas. The ship sailed from the home port with every prospect of a successful voyage, but she never returned to the home land. Years went by and she was given up as lost, her name was taken from the shipping list, and no news of her came back to the waiting ones at home. Long afterward a passing vessel picked up off the African coast the portrait of an American sea captain such as the Chinese artists paint, and on the back of the picture were the captain's name and that of the port from which he sailed. The painting was forwarded to the little American town, and it was found to be a picture of the Scarboro sea captain, master of the lost vessel that had left the harbor so many years ago.—Kennebec Journal.

Largest Grave in the World.

The largest single grave in the world occupies just exactly one acre of ground, which is surrounded by an iron railing. This enormous grave is located at Puerto Cortez, in Honduras, and is the burial place of a woman. The tombstone occupies the center of the ground inclosed, and several wooden figures representing the deceased are arranged in statuelike form in different parts of the ground. There are no fewer than sixteen of these figures, which in the evening give the place a ghostlike appearance. The deceased had died rich and in her will had specified the amount of ground to be purchased for her grave and the manner in which it should be decorated. She had many curious notions, and the size and ornamentation of her grave was one of them.

A Formidable Army.

The battle was going against him. The commander in chief, himself ruler of the South American republic, sent an aid to the rear, ordering General Blanco to bring up his regiment at once. Ten minutes passed, but it didn't come. Twenty, thirty, an hour—still no regiment. The aid came tearing back hatless, breathless. "My regiment! My regiment! Where is it? Where is it?" shrieked the commander. "General," answered the excited aid, "Blanco started it all right, but there are a couple of drunken Americans down the road and they won't let it go by."—Argonaut.

A Triple Coincidence.

An almost incredible triple coincidence was noted in France some years ago. In 1894 the deputy for the Ardennes was M. Ferry; for Loir et Cher, M. Brisson, and for the Vosges, M. Hugo. In 1793, 101 years earlier, each district had been represented in the chamber by a man of exactly the same name.

THE FULTON TIMES

[Entered as second class matter, April 12, 1882, at the postoffice at Fulton, New York, under the act of Congress of March, 3, 1879.]

E. K. HUGHES, Editor
W. E. HUGHES, Proprietor

Issued Every Wednesday at No. 66 South First street, Fulton, N. Y.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 20, 1908

The Times congratulates Fulton upon the now assured certainty that she will soon possess a federal building, which will be an ornament to the city. Congressman Knapp has looked well after the interests of his constituents here and they are grateful to him for the service rendered in their behalf. Given time, Fulton will surely come into her own heritage of prosperity and civic fitness. With the completion of the barge canal, a trolley system, a federal building, a $30,000 hospital and her banks lined with industries, she will be in condition to invite comparison with larger cities.

THE keen anxiety of certain Senators and numerous editors to have President Roosevelt violate the proprieties and lay himself open to criticism is shown by the wide publicity which has been given to two letters which Mr. Roosevelt is alleged to have written to Senators regarding the Brownsville incident and the painfully shocked manner in which Senators and editors treat the matter. It is charged the President wrote to Senators Smith of Michigan and Stewart of Vermont that not only would he veto the Forraker resolution, which would dictate to the President that he reappoint to the army the negro soldiers who were discharged because of the Brownsville affray, but if passed over this veto he would refuse to obey it on the ground that it was unconstitutional.

Had these painfully shocked Senators been seeking justice instead of ground for sanctimonious criticism, they would have put on their thinking caps and recalled the fact that no less a constitutional lawyer than Benjamin Harrison, while he was President, conveyed the same warning to members of the Senate in the case of Doctor, now Major General Ainsworth. Senators sought to reward Ainsworth, for good work by creating a position as chief of a War Department division, providing that its chief should be a colonel of the army and that Ainsworth should be that colonel. President Harrison vetoed the bill, Feb 26, 1891, and warned Senators that if they passed it over his veto he would not obey it, not that he objected to appointing Ainsworth but because, as he said.

"I cannot agree that the selection of the officer shall be taken out of the discretion of the Executive, where the responsibility necessarily lies." And more to the effect that Congress must not interfere with the appointive power of the Executive.

THE absolute supineness of Congress in failing to extend the parcels post and establish postal savings banks must be an occasion of regret to every loyal Republican. Constant complaint is being made of the greatest expense of the postal service and especially of the rural routes. Postmaster General Mayer has pointed out that the reason rural routes and indeed the entire service, do not pay is because Congress refuses to authorize these natural and profitable extensions which would immensely benefit the people and would injure no one but a few bankers and the express companies who have long enjoyed an unwarrantable monopoly and have mulcted the people mercilessly. If Speaker Cannon could be prevailed upon to let the House express itself on these subjects the legislation would go through with a rush.

THE most conservative honest statement of Secretary Taft's political strength gives him 418 votes, instructed for him or otherwise pledged, up to the evening of May 9. By the close of May 15 he will have enough delegates actually instructed to insure his nomination on the first ballot, which is precisely what President Roosevelt, who is after all the wisest politician in the country, has been predicting all along.

CONGRESS expects to adjourn May 23 or 25. It will leave behind it a long record of [illegible]

GALUSHA ELECTED PRESIDENT.

Those "not in the game" were treated to a surprise on Thursday when it was announced that Mike Roche had resigned the presidency of the Empire Baseball League and that Mr. Irving Galusha had been elected to succeed him. Mr. Roche's resignation was wholly unexpected although it had been charged that he was not as active in the interest of the league as the salary of $60 per month and expenses would seem to demand.

Mr. Galusha's election was unanimous, Oswego being represented by a proxy and Geneva not represented, although The Times understands that the former town is pleased with the change and that the latter town concurs. Mr. Galusha has been a strenuous advocate for protection and Fulton is anxious that protection be granted. It is rumored that within a few days something definite and encouraging regarding protection will be forthcoming. Mr. Galusha is a very enthusiastic baseball man and should make good in the responsible but not always pleasant position, which he has been called upon to fill.

School Commissioner's Convention—Second District.

The electors of the several towns of the Second School Commissioner's District of Oswego County are requested to send delegates to a district convention, hereby called to meet in the village of Central Square, N. Y., on Wednesday, June 24, 1908, at 11:30 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of nominating a candidate for the office of School Commissioner for the Second District, Oswego County, to be voted for at the next election, and to transact such other business as may come before the convention.

The towns in the district are entitled to representation as follows: Amboy, 7; Constantia, 9; Hastings, 9; Palermo, 8; Parish, 8; Schroeppel, 11; West Monroe, 7.

W. C. DAVID,
M. F. TOOLEY,
District Committee.

184th Regiment Twentieth Annual Reunion.

The Twentieth Annual Reunion of the 184th Regiment will be held on the Oswego Falls Fair Grounds, Wednesday, June 10, 1908. A special committee has charge of the arrangements for the Reunion and it is earnestly desired that every comrade be present. Coffee, rolls and doughnuts will be furnished by the association. We expect to have an unusually good time. There will be a general business meeting at 10:30 a. m. Dinner at 12 m. Election of officers, speaking, music and other exercises promptly at 1:30 p. m.

If you cannot be present, please write the Secretary and enclose 50 cents for a badge with Comrade E. A. Brown's photograph on it, and Colonel Robinson's Memoirs, with roster of the Regiment.

Will Report Thursday.

County Attorney Coville, Supervisors Whitney and Gregg and Expert Accountant Farrell held a conference in Oswego on Monday relative to presenting a report from the expert hired by the Supervisors to inspect the books in the various county offices, and report on his findings. Mr. Coville has stated that he expects to be able to make a report on Thursday

Lost Both Games.

In the try-out games with the Cuban Giants, a baseball aggregation which plays ball twelve months in the year, the local League team on Monday and Tuesday lost both games. There were large and enthusiastic crowds present to witness the games and considerable disappointment was felt that the locals did not hold their dusky opponents down to lower scores. The balance of the league team will report before the opening of the season on Friday.

Those 50 cents shirts at B. S. McKinstry's are just the fad. They look like the dollar article.

MR. SIMONS ACTIVE.

There is no dearth of candidates for the office of Sheriff, whether it be placed in the salary list or not. On Friday Mr. George Simons of Redfield called upon Fulton Republicans and informed a Times representative that he was cordially received everywhere. His claim on the office is that his town has not been inhabited by an office holder since the flood of which biblical history treats, and he means to do all that lies in his power to change the order of things. Mr. Simons says that he will be on the job every minute, if he is elected, and he also says that he will be on the job every minute until the county convention shall register its choice from among the candidates. He is not canvassing for his health but for delegates.

Mr. Simons has already secured the delegates from his own town and he is a prime favorite in other towns in the eastern section of the county. He is a veteran of the Civil War and has been active in Republican politics all his life.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. Norm G. Cooper are in Baldwinsville this week. It is likely they will be in Fulton on Memorial Day.

The Philathea class of the First Baptist church will hold a social in the church parlors on Wednesday, May 27. Mrs. Eggleston will give a talk on her visit to Egypt and the Holy Land.

J. C. O'Brien is offering big inducements in the Cloak Department this week. All those beautiful butterfly and cutaway tailored suits, he says, must be cleaned out this week. He has placed on them a price that will surely clean them up quick. He suggests that you come in early tomorrow and get first choice.

Messrs. Charles Taft of Williamstown and M. F. Tooley of Palermo, active candidates for the Republican nomination for sheriff, visited local Republicans on Saturday. Mr. Tooley has twenty instructed delegates so far and Mr. Taft has fourteen. Each candidate feels very sanguine of his own success but the outcome looks very uncertain from the standpoint of a spectator. The Sandy Creek and Richland caucuses will be held on Thursday, the village of Pulaski having two candidates, Deputy Sheriff White and Mr. Ansel Brown.

The Fulton Contracting company is prosecuting the barge canal work night and day, that the canal may be ready for navigation on June 1, in accordance with the requirements of the State authorities. The old canal bed will be cleared and utilized as usual for canal purposes this summer, but by a year from now the heel path will have become obliterated and the river and canal will become one. Work on the concrete retaining wall near Rochester street has been commenced.

RESOLUTIONS

Of Fulton Training Class on the Death of Laura E. Wadsworth.

Whereas, God in his infinite wisdom and mercy has called from our midst our dear classmate, Laura E. Wadsworth,

Be it Resolved, That the removal of our beloved classmate leaves a vacancy that will long be realized and felt by this class.

Resolved, That we, her associate members, having in greatful remembrance her constant willingness and anxiety to help others, do gladly award her the praise so justly her due, having in mind full knowledge of her invaluable and unselfish work among us. Remembering that she always looked on the bright side of life, and that her companionship was always genial and helpful, and that she was held in high esteem in this class, we deeply regret and mourn her loss.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to her family with expressions of heartfelt sympathy, and a copy be printed in the local papers.

DIED.

Jennie, aged 40, wife of Mr. Frank McDonnell, died on Tuesday night at her home in Volney. Beside the husband, a daughter, Helen, and a son, Harold, survive.

The remains of David Crocker, who was killed in Iowa, reached Fulton on Monday and services were held at the grave, the Brotherhood Class of which he was a member attending in a body.

The death of of Harry F. Guile, aged 24, a former resident of Fulton, occurred last week at his home in Providence, R. I. The deceased was a grandson of the late Gilbert Guile and a cousin of City Attorney Guile. Burial was made in Chicago.

Henry R. Foley, a well known carpenter and contractor, died suddenly at his home in Oswego on Wednesday following the amputation of his leg to prevent the further spread of blood poisoning. The deceased has a sister residing in this city.

Mrs. Ella Marshall died on Sunday at her home in Palermo at the age of 36. The funeral services were held from the Bristol Hill church on Tuesday afternoon and interment was made at South Scriba. Beside the husband, a daughter, Irene, a son, Willard, and a brother, Mr. Fred Peck, of Scriba, survive.

Word was received on Sunday of the violent death of John La Point, who left Fulton to accept a position in Port Leyden about a year ago. He was killed while working in a paper mill. The body was brought to the home of his parents in this city on Thursday evening. The deceased is survived by his widow and several children.

The death of Laura, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Wadsworth of Minetto, occurred on Tuesday, after an illness extending over three days. The deceased was one of the most popular young ladies in Minetto, and was also very popular with her associates in the Teachers Training Class in this city, all of whom mourn her untimely demise. The funeral services were held on Friday, the Training Class and the teacher, Miss Dugan, attending in a body. The deepest sympathy of the community is expressed for the bereaved parents.

John L. Bryant, aged 36, died on Monday at his home in Oneida street after a long illness. The deceased is survived by his widow, four children, Hazel, Eva, Lloyd and Homer; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Bryant; two sisters, Mrs. James Hart of this city and Mrs. Albert Lawton of Scriba, and seven brothers, Duncan, Henry, George, Homer, Charles, William and Ernest. The funeral will be held from the late home on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, members of the Maccabees and Brotherhood Bible Class attending. Rev. F. A. Miller will be the officiating clergyman.

The first spring showing of fashionable straw hats may be found at the McKinstry clothing shop, Oneida street. Look in the window for some of the seasons favorites.

Mr. William J. Pentelow, of Corona, Calif., formerly of this city, came within five votes of being nominated for assemblyman from his district on Saturday a week ago. Mr. Pentelow was backed by the Good Government League and only entered the race a few hours before the convention. The Corona papers speak very enthusiastically of Mr. Pentelow and declare that he would have been nominated had the League gotten busy earlier.

The members of Mrs. J. J. Coits Bible class in the Presbyterian church surprised Mrs. E. J. Penfield in her new home in Academy street on Friday after noon. The ladies all carried their fancy work and the afternoon was devoted to sewing and conversation. At half after six o'clock the husbands of the class members escorted Mr. Penfield home and a delicious tea was served in Quaker style to the thirty guests present. The event was most heartily enjoyed by all present.

A telephone call on Sunday evening called the fire department to the home of Mr. and G. B. Duell in Erie street where a heavy smoke was discovered in the kitchen by Mrs. Duell. It transpired that she had placed a kettle of potatoes on the stove and gone away for a time. Upon her return she discovered the smoke and in her fright thought the kitchen must be on fire. The vegetables were burned to a cinder, causing the commotion.

If the old brindle cow should get out many a daddy would walk the streets half the night looking for her, but let the twelve year old lad fail to show up, the parents retire for the night without an anxious thought. We dare not hope over the future of the human race as long as the fathers and mothers think more of rounding up a $20 cow or $3 shoat than they do of corralling their sons and daughters at a reasonable hour in the evening.—Ex.

An Apology.

An excited military looking gentleman entered the editorial sanctum one afternoon, exclaiming: "That notice of my death is false, sir. I will horsewhip you within an inch of your life, sir, if you don't apologize in your next issue."

The editor inserted the following next day: "We extremely regret to announce that the paragraph which stated that Major Brazer was dead is without foundation."—Detroit Free Press.

CHAPTER XXIV.

"WHY, Dad!"

Richard sprang forward and grasped his father's hand in both his own, while the old man eyed his son with a strange, conflicting mixture of reproach and parental love.

"Dicky," he sighed, "I'm glad to see you all right, my boy, but you've given your poor old dad a heap of worry. Now, what's all this mess about?"

The greeting between father and son was brief, because the bombshell revelation of the son's identity brought another powerful actor to the fore. To Harriet it had come as a tingling relief, for in a flash she understood why Richard had concealed his name, and she found herself smiling happily in answer to his father's courteous bow, but to Jacob Renwyck the effect was far more serious, inasmuch as he seemed to be the target at which this particular shell was aimed. In speechless rage he glared at his former colleague, glared also at the son and finally glared more fiercely still at Michael Corrigan, who advanced, with a smile of greeting, to the visitor.

"Hello, Bill! How are you?" he began cordially as he shook the other's mighty fist.

"Hello, Mike!" was the return greeting. "Where's the tarantula that calls my boy a thief?"

He did not await an answer, but turned instinctively toward his enemy, and for an instant the two fearless promoters stood sizing up each other in utter silence; then Jacob Renwyck spoke.

"I do!" he cried as it flashed upon him how Richard might have used his information in the harbor deal. "I do, you villain, and I include you in the charge! You sent your son to spy upon me, to steal my plans by a miserable, underhand fraud! You"—

"Jacob, Jacob!" wailed Mrs. Renwyck. "Be careful what you say, please!"

"S-s-h!" admonished Uncle Michael. "Don't spoil the fun, Julia. Let the old boys go it. It'll do 'em good."

The old boys in question proceeded to go it, but not for the sake of fun, nor did it seem to do them any good whatever. When Mr. Renwyck paused to catch his breath Bill Williams saw his chance and took the floor.

"Why, you old spavined skate," he thundered, doubling up his hairy fist, "don't think that you can cover up your tracks by abusing me or my boy either! You tricked me away from Texas on a blind trail, that's what you did, while your buccaneering dummies jumped my claim in Austin! Fooled me on a cold scent, did you, you fox? Well, I'll have your brush yet if I have to auction off my last stump tailed steer to do it!"

"Dear me!" quavered the horrified Miss Schermerly. "What frightful language!"

"Extrawd'n'ry!" nodded the British ambassador, who had not the remotest idea what it was all about. "Most extrawd'n'ry! 'Pon my word!"

The two gladiators were now the center of a human ring, which gathered closer and closer about them, each glowering at his hated adversary, each waiting for the final crash to come.

"I didn't!" shouted Mr. Renwyck.

"You did!" the Texan bellowed in flat contradiction. "Why did you call my son a thief?"

Mr. Renwyck looked abashed.

"Well," he hedged, "perhaps I was wrong in that. I—I apologize."

"Won't do!" stormed the angry cattle king. "You've got to settle this with me! Understand me, sir—with me!"

Matters between the two frenzied financiers, both equally courageous and both equally enraged, had by this time risen to an alarming pitch, and it devolved upon Mr. Corrigan to prevent a personal encounter. A telegraph messenger had come to the door, and the lawyer himself received the dispatch. He tore open the envelope, glanced at the contents, smiled and turned to the two contestants.

"Gentlemen, gentlemen," he urged, "you can accomplish nothing by tearing each other to pieces. I suggest that we dismiss the major portion of our audience, then settle this dispute in the bosom of our respective, gentle minded families."

Even Mr. Renwyck saw the wisdom of this sage suggestion, and in a moment more the detectives and Mr. Parker were requested to wait outside, while the servants were for the time dismissed. There remained in the hall, besides the active threads of the hopeless snarl, Sir Rodney Hickwich, Miss Schermerly and Miss Sempton. Both ladies, being like members of the family—not to refer to their human feminine curiosity—made no move to leave, but the British ambassador, glad of any excuse, took up his hat and gloves. He rather fancied that he had happened upon some private though loosely conducted sanitarium, and during this temporary lull in the tempest he tapped Richard on the shoulder and said in a shaking tone:

"I—pardon me, young man, I haven't the remotest idea what all this means, and I seem to have stirred it up myself by innocently asking for my friend, Lord Croyland. Since you—er—since you had his name awhile ago, could you chance to inform me where I might find his—ah—person?"

"Yes," replied Richard, with a glint of merriment lighting up his eyes, "You will find his person—somewhat damaged, to be sure—in St. Luke's hospital, New York. Send in your card and ask for Mr. Richard Williams. The earl changed his name for fear that a submarine would blow him up."

"What!" exclaimed Miss Sempton under her breath. She had called frequently at the hospital and had spent several long afternoons in administering cheer to the sick man, which the sick man had reciprocated through the assistance of the rosy cheeked nurse with flowers, confectionery, and so on, for both of which the nurse had an excellent taste. Miss Sempton had belonged for years to a hospital visiting association and flower mission and had never been so glad of it before. "So he's an English lord! How nice! Goodness me! I always knew he was something out of the common. I think I'll have him call as soon as he is able," her thoughts ran.

"Oh," said Sir Rodney, having taken a full minute to digest Richard's astounding bit of information, staring vacantly at the young man the while, "I—I don't understand, of course, but anything is preferable to this."

He waved his distinguished hand in the direction of all the asylumites collectively, bowed and departed on his way.

"I can give you some tidings of him, Sir Rodney," began Miss Sempton, following him out on the porch. "He was quite badly hurt in an automobile accident, but is doing well. I've been in to see him a number of times. Will you remember me most kindly to him and say that—Miss Sempton, you know—will be in again before long?"

"I shall be delighted, my dear young lady, and so I am sure, will Croyland," answered the baronet, bowing himself away with an appreciation of the young lady's charm, couched in the earl's very words: "Ripping girl! Croyland always was a lucky beggar, by Jove!"

It may here be said that the ambassador, leaving Miss Sempton under the wistaria, indulging in dreams of a coronet which might and eventually did grace her brow, found his friend and gave him a hazy explanation of what he had seen at Irvington, though when the earl discovered how Richard had turned the tables on him, using a noble title for his own advantage, the Englishman failed to see that this stroke of genius was the least bit "clevah."

"Deuced bad form!" he muttered in unreasonable resentment, quite forgetting his own turpitude in the matter of name appropriation. "I wouldn't have believed that Williams fellow such a selfish beast, you know." However, in the pleasure he took in Miss Sempton's message the noble earl soon dismissed the other episode from his mind.

"Now," said Uncle Michael when the doors of the hall were closed, "we can breathe once more." He unfolded his telegram and smoothed it out with a soft, caressing hand, cleared his throat and began again: "I have here a message from a friend of mine in Austin, Texas, in which one or both of you gentlemen may perhaps be interested. It seems that the state legislature adjourned just after a certain deep water harbor bill was passed."

In truth, both gentlemen were more than interested, and in the tantalizing pause which the little lawyer made that poor old hackneyed pin might have again done service in dropping.

"Ha!" triumphantly shouted Jacob Renwyck, who could wait no longer. "I knew it! Longmatt!"

"Not on your life!" corrected the cattle king. "Matagorda City!"

Uncle Michael laughed.

"Which? Which?" both the assured speculators questioned in the same breath.

"Neither, gentlemen, and here's my advice to prove it." He laughed again and struck the telegram with his fist. "The joke's on both of you. Olivia!"

"What?"

Again there was a breathless pause.

"Julia," whispered the stately Miss Schermerly into Mrs. Renwyck's wondering ear. "I was positive from the first that some woman was mixed up in this affair. Her name is Olivia!"

Mrs. Renwyck rose to her feet, bristling.

"Olivia who?" she demanded sharply, though in the excitement no one paid the least attention to her, for Mr. Renwyck sank limp and stunned into his chair, while the puzzled Texan leaned against a table and turned the color of his reddest steer.

"But—but," stammered the champion of Longmatt, "I don't understand. Why, the legislature is fixed! I—I bought it!"

"So did I!" asserted the cattle king.

"Wrong again, gentlemen!" chuckled the little Irishman. "That august and honorable body can't—be—bought!"

"Explain!" cried Mr. Renwyck, tottering to his feet. "What do you mean, Michael? What do you know about it, anyway?"

"Lots," laughed Mr. Corrigan. "Besides, it's very simple when you get down to the facts. You see, there was a gentleman in New York the other day—the Hon. Mr. Kinwait, I believe he is called—a man wielding quite a big stick among certain members of the legislature. You, Mr. Williams, mixed a toddy for him in San Antonio, while Jacob took him out to lunch in New York and presented him with a fine cigar."

The Texan and the New Yorker glared savagely, but Uncle Michael smiled blandly and continued:

"The Hon. Mr. Kinwait, being thus beholden to both of you for your generous hospitality, became doubtful as to which to serve, and while struggling with his india rubber conscience a third party came along and offered him board and lodging in the penitentiary. All things being equal, he forgot both toddy and cigar and dumped his influence on the side of sweet Olivia and the Peace and Good Will Realty company. Am I clear?"

He was more than clear, for both of the old casehardened schemers saw at a glance how cleverly they had been overreached by a little one horse organization that masked a serpent's fang under the cloak of a pious, inoffensive title, with a guileless individual named Fishall as its outward exponent!

"Good Lord," sighed Bill Williams, "and I sold 'em the land to do it with!"

Mr. Renwyck had done the same, but had not the grace to admit it.

"Who the devil is back of this Peace and Good Will Realty company?" he demanded, forgetting the presence of the ladies in his anger and chagrin.

The little Irishman made as graceful a bow as his embonpoint would permit.

"I am."

"You!" gasped Mr. Renwyck.

"Yes, Jakie, dear. I also interviewed the Hon. Mr. Kinwait."

"But, man," stormed Mr. Renwyck, "don't you know that half my fortune is invested in that deal? You—you've swindled me!"

Bill Williams laid his hand on Mr. Corrigan's shoulder and spoke calmly, but reproachfully:

"It was my pet scheme, Mike, and you knew it. Half my pile is gone too. I didn't think you'd do me up like that."

"I was merciful," said Uncle Michael coolly. "I left you each half. You won't starve. I might have taken all."

If Mr. Corrigan fancied that he was ironing out the crinkled shirt of trouble by proving to the rivals that neither one had been successful, he found himself vastly mistaken. The tempest was loosed again, and Richard the Brazen took a turn at the thunder box.

"Look here," he cried, striding up to Uncle Michael and spinning that portly little man about without deference to his age or size, "Mr. Corrigan, if you were twenty years younger I'd give you the soundest thrashing you ever had in all your life!"

At this surprising development the entire company, with the exception of the lawyer, were too amazed to do aught but stare at the furious young man. The furious young man continued, oblivious to his surroundings:

"I came to you in confidence, sir, as my attorney, at your own suggestion, and asked advice. I was helpless, as you knew, hanging between duty to dad and my pledge to Mr. Renwyck. You've swindled us all, sir—these gentlemen of their harbors, me of what I placed confidently in your hands—my honor."

"Honor!" sneered Mr. Renwyck. "Honor!"

"What!" bellowed the cattle king. "You knew all about it, Dick, and you didn't tell me! Oh, Dick, Dick!"

Richard turned to explain to his reproachful father, but Mr. Renwyck turned upon the young man fiercely.

"Ha!" he almost screamed. "So that's the reason you couldn't sign a draft? You had sold me to Michael, had you—sold me when in the kindness of my heart I tried to help an impoverished Englishman? Englishman!" he laughed derisively. "A spy, a traitor to me—yes, and to his own flesh and blood too!" The financier paused for breath, then wheeled upon his brother-in-law. "And you," he stormed—"you, with your arguments and your chuckling mask that hides a rascal! That's what you've been laughing at for the past three days, is it—you and your psalm singing Mr. Fishcall? You cheated me out of my land at Olivia! You're blackmailed the Texan legislature! You—you—you"—

"Oh, Jacob, darling!" sobbed Mrs. Renwyck, coming to his side as he sank, exhausted, into his chair.

"It is perfectly disgraceful!" sniffed Miss Schermerly. "I am almost tempted to go upstairs!" However, she successfully resisted temptation.

It seemed at this stage that poor little Mr. Corrigan had not a leg of honor to stand upon, and, to be correct, he did not attempt to stand, but sank into a seat and laughed until an apoplectic stroke seemed imminent. He was most aggravating, too, when he laughed.

"Goodness!" now observed the solemn Mr. Van der Awe, "He's worse than my poor Imogene!"

But Mr. Corrigan at last mastered his emotions, arose and, dabbing his eyes with his handkerchief, began to explain his case.

"Jacob," he said, "upon my honor, Richard never told me a single thing that I did not already know. My company was in the field long before he came to New York, and here are my papers to prove it. I knew every move of both of you, and while you and Bill were treating the legislature to whisky and cigars I got into the game myself. Our brazen young friend here had nothing to do with it whatever."

Richard heaved a sigh of deep relief, and old Bill Williams laughed.

"Look here, Mike," he said, "you've got all the money you want. Why in the name of common sense are you wadling about in deep water harbors?"

"Several reasons," chuckled Uncle Michael. "First, I wanted the fun of the thing; second, I wanted a rap at Jacob, who is inclined to think he knows everything in the world; third, I wanted a joke on my friend, Bill Williams; fourth, I wanted to prove to you two old gray rats that your teeth are getting dulled by age; fifth, I had at heart the real welfare of the great state of Texas; sixth, I would not see a helpless legislature led astray; seventh, the Peace and Good Will Realty company is a bridal present I intend making to the son and daughter of two of my friends."

"What friends?" asked the two frenzied financiers together.

"Bill and Jake!" answered Mr. Corrigan, bursting into another laugh.

Four people flushed, two in anger, the other two for secret reasons of their own.

"Now, listen, boys," continued Uncle Michael earnestly. "You two have had a very foolish quarrel, and it's time to shake hands and make it up. So far as your harbor schemes are concerned, you are both out of the running. I own it—every share. I will turn my interest over to Richard, to do with as he chooses, but if I know him—and I'm inclined to think I do—I have a pretty fair idea as to how he will act. What do you say, Dicky, boy?"

Richard came forward and grasped the lawyer's hand.

"Mr. Corrigan," he said, "forgive me for what I said just now. I take it all back. You're the finest counsel on earth!"

"Oho!" chuckled the little man. "Changed your opinion, have you? Well, go on."

"I couldn't begin to thank you for what you have done for me," continued Richard, "and what that is I am now going to confess. I have been longing to do it for a week. But first let's settle this harbor tangle. I suggest that dad and Mr. Renwyck consolidate their interests with me and we'll open up at Olivia. Olivia is the best place for a harbor, anyway."

"Bully!" chuckled Mr. Corrigan, rubbing his plump hands until the skin was almost peeled. "Well, Jake? Well, Bill?"

"Um! Not a bad idea," admitted the cattle king, with a flickering smile. "What do you say, Renwyck?"

"I think," said the old financier slowly—"I think I'd rather wait for the confession this young man has mentioned. From what I know of him already it may lead to complications."

Richard smiled hopefully at Harriet and stepped to the center of the hall. He made a clean breast of it, beginning at his meeting with the real Lord Croyland, the automobile accident and the cool effrontery of the earl in taking the name of Richard Williams for his personal convenience. The Texan then told how he had been met by his host at the railroad station and how he had been mistaken for the Englishman. At this point Mr. Renwyck interrupted him.

A Taft Story.

The Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott in writing about Secretary William H. Taft in the Outlook says:

"He is not as quick in his motions, either physically or intellectually, as the president, but he is not less a master workman. The day he was to start for Cuba he was at his desk finishing up some last details. His assistant gave him warning, 'Train starts in half an hour.' 'All right,' was the reply. Presently a second warning, 'Only fifteen minutes left, sir.' 'All right.' Finally, 'You've only three minutes left, sir.' 'All right,' came back as serenely as before. And in two minutes the alert secretary of war came out of the office door smiling, calm, imperturbable, unhurried. So the story comes to me, and I can well believe it. The legend seems probable."

A great many people imagine they have heart trouble when the fact is that the whole trouble lies in the stomach. The pains in the side around the region of the heart are not necessarily heart trouble. We suggest that you start with the stomach and whenever you feel a depression after eating or whenever your food seems to nauseate take Kodol. It will not be very long until all these "heart pains" will disappear. Take Kodol now and until you know you are right again. There isn't any doubt about what it will do and you will find the truth of this statement verified after you have used Kodol for a few weeks. It is sold here by all druggists.

MRS. FRANK J. GOULD.

Wife of Jay Gould's Youngest Son and Her Reported Separation Suit.

Three branches of the Gould family now enjoy publicity in connection with their domestic affairs. The press of the old world and the new has been concerning itself a good deal with the affair between Mme. Anna Gould, formerly the Countess de Castellane, and Prince Helie de Sagan, and the divorce proceedings between Howard Gould and his wife have occupied attention. Now comes the report that the wife of Frank J. Gould has begun suit for a separation. She was Miss Helen Margaret Kelly, daughter of the late Edward Kelly and granddaughter of the late Eugene Kelly. Between the latter and the late Jay Gould there was the deadliest enmity. It is remarked as a strange coincidence that grandchildren of the two once bitter business enemies and rivals should have married only to have the union prove an unhappy one. A friend of the late Jay Gould once remarked to him: "You scoff at the scientific theory of heredity, but why do you and Kelly detest each other so much? Is it because your ancestors were on opposite sides at Cromwell's invasion of Ireland?"

The remark referred to the fact that Mr. Gould was a Protestant and Mr. Kelly an ardent Roman Catholic, so ardent that he opposed the marriage of his son Edward, Mrs. Frank J. Gould's father, to a Protestant, and for this reason the fact of such a marriage was kept a secret for some fourteen years.

The Gould-Kelly wedding took place in 1901, and the groom took his bride on a cruise on his yacht. Mrs. Gould is considered a beauty.

A Lucky Horseshoe.

The Australians when they find a horseshoe throw it over their shoulder. A lady in Sydney found one and threw it gracefully over her shoulder. It went through a batter's window and hit a customer who was trying on a new hat. This gentleman, under the impression that one of the shopmen in a fit of temporary insanity had played the trick, promptly struck him and sent him through the plate glass window. A general melee ensued, although on consideration nobody knew what it was all about.

Of Interest To Women.

To such women as are not seriously out of health, but who have exacting duties to perform, either in the way of household cares or in social duties and functions, which seriously tax their strength, as well as to nursing mothers, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has proved a most valuable supporting tonic and invigorating nervine. By its timely use, much serious sickness and suffering may be averted. The operating table and the surgeon's knife, would it is believed, rarely have to be employed if this most valuable woman's remedy were resorted to in time. The "Favorite Prescription" has proven a great boon to expectant mothers by preparing the system for the coming of baby, thereby rendering childbirth safe, easy, and almost painless.

Bear in mind, please that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is not a secret or patent medicine, against which the most intelligent people are quite naturally averse, because of the uncertainty as to their composition and harmless character, but is a MEDICINE OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, a full list of all its ingredients being printed, in plain English, on every bottle-wrapper. An examination of this list of ingredients will disclose the fact that it is non-alcoholic in its composition, chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine taking the place of the commonly used alcohol, in its make-up. In this connection it may not be out of place to state that the "Favorite Prescription" of Dr. Pierce is the only medicine put up for the cure of women's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, and sold through druggists, all the ingredients of which have the unanimous endorsement of all the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice, and that too as remedies for the ailments for which "Favorite Prescription" is recommended.

A little book of these endorsements will be sent to any address, post-paid, and absolutely free if you request same by postal card, or letter, of Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. Constipation is the cause of many diseases. Cure the cause and you cure the disease. Easy to take as candy.

The Efficacy of Prayer.

Among my esteemed neighbors there is a family known for the piety of its members and their implicit confidence in the efficacy of prayer. One of the daughters, Miss Kate B., has almost reached the age when she could be referred to ungallantly as an old maid. She is the target for many a good natured quip pertaining to her alleged hopes and endeavors in the direction of matrimony.

Not long ago a certain society of young men which had interested itself in a campaign for higher saloon license sent a committee to visit the homes of the district and obtain signatures to a high license petition. When this committee, numbering half a dozen members, ascended the front steps at the B. home my friend's wife was the first to see it through the front window.

"Laws, John!" she exclaimed to her husband. "See all those young men coming to visit us."

Mr. B. glanced out of the window, noted the number of the invading force and remarked, with an air of conviction:

"Humph! Kate's been praying again."—San Francisco Call.

An Anecdote of Ellsworth.

There was a characteristic incident in the early life of Colonel Ellsworth, the brilliant young lawyer who was one of the first notable victims of the civil war. His struggles to gain a foothold in his profession were attended by many hardships and humiliating privations. Once, finding the man he was looking for on a matter of business in a restaurant, he was invited to partake of the luncheon to which his acquaintance was just sitting down. Ellsworth was ravenously hungry, almost starving, in fact, but he declined courteously, but firmly, asking permission to talk over the business that had brought him thither while the other went on with the meal.

The brave young fellow in telling the story in after years confessed that he suffered positive agony at the sight and smell of the tempting food.

"I could not in honor accept hospitality I could not reciprocate," was his simple explanation of his refusal. "I might starve, but I could not sponge!"—Marion Harland's "Complete Etiquette."

Starting Early.

Wangles was married recently, and there was a regular hail of rice, confetti and old shoes for good luck as he got into the cab. Moreover, on turning round he was struck above the eye by a friendly shoe with rather a heavy heel.

As the cab immediately drove away no notice was taken of the accident, and, despite the large handkerchief tied by his sobbing bride over his injured optic, the blood still flowed down Wangles' face.

When they arrived at their destination the newly created Benedict went out to a doctor to get the bleeding stopped.

"How did you come by this, my man?"

"Well, you see, doctor—aw—I got married this morning, and"—commenced Wangles, when the doctor broke in:

"What! Has she started already?"—London Answers.

Circumstantial Evidence.

"You say you met the defendant on a street car and that he had been drinking and gambling," said the attorney for the defense during the cross examination.

"Yes," replied the witness.

"Did you see him take a drink?"

"No."

"Did you see him gambling?"

"No."

"Then how do you know," demanded the attorney, "that the defendant had been drinking and gambling?"

"Well," explained the witness, "he gave the conductor a blue chip for his car fare and told him to keep the change."—Lippincott's Magazine.

LEITER-WILLIAMS.

An Engagement Announcement of International Interest.

There is special interest in the announcement of the engagement of the Washington belle Miss Juliette Williams to Joseph Leiter because of the fact that not long ago Mr. Leiter paid considerable attention to Miss Katherine Elkins, who is generally supposed now to be engaged to marry the Duke of the Abruzzi. An announcement of an engagement between Miss Elkins and the handsome and popular son of the late Levi Z. Leiter would not have surprised Washington society a short time ago, but if Miss Elkins ever favored young Leiter the fascinations he exerted were soon eclipsed by those of the Italian nobleman and explorer who sued for her hand.

Miss Williams is the daughter of Colonel and Mrs. J. R. Williams of Washington. Mr. Leiter was born in Chicago in 1868 and graduated from Harvard in 1891. He won fame in 1897 as the hero of one of the most noted deals ever transacted on the Chicago board of trade. It was regarded as the most daring feat ever performed in the wheat pit. Mr. Leiter's three sisters all married into the British aristocracy, one of them being the late Lady Curzon, wife of the former viceroy of India.

GENERAL BARRY'S CAREER.

Pacificator and Peace Maintainer in Cuba and Hero of the Orient.

The president's nomination of Thomas H. Barry to be a major general is popular in Cuba, where General Barry is in command of what is called the army of pacification. He has been on leave of absence in the United States, and one object of his visit at this time was to confer with Secretary Taft of the war department and Major General J. Franklin Bell, chief of staff of the army, on the subject of reducing the number of troops in Cuba. It is expected that there will be protests against any withdrawal of troops, especially from the foreign interests. Little active work has recently been done by the soldiers from the United States, the preservation of order in the island being left for the most part to the rurales, but the presence of Uncle Sam's troops has constituted an important moral force and has, it is believed, been valuable in preventing disturbances. The soldiers are needed, however, in other places, and it is felt by the government at Washington that a beginning should be made in the process of reducing the forces in the island.

General Barry reached the rank of brigadier general in 1903 and was appointed to the command of the Cuban army of pacification in 1907. He was born in New York in 1855 and graduated from the United States Military academy at West Point in 1877. He served with distinction in the China relief expedition during the Boxer insurrection and later won credit in the Philippines, and he visited Manchuria during the war between Russia and Japan to observe the campaign there.

General Barry went to Cuba to succeed General Theodore J. Wint, who died during the preparations for landing troops in Cuba.

ORGANS! PIANOS!

Musical Merchandise, Phonograph Records, Etc.

We wish to call your attention to a few facts regarding the selection of a PIANO. Buy an instrument of standard make; deal with a firm that handles such makes. Our experience in tuning and repairing has shown us beyond doubt the faulty construction, poor finish and thin tone of many pianos that are presented to you as just as good as the product of old reliable manufacturers. Untruthful advertising, bold assertions may catch the ignorant and unthinking, but the intelligent man or woman, in buying, pay little attention to such stuff. WHEN WE TELL YOU we have supplied some of the most critical people in this city and surrounding country; when we tell you we carry a larger stock than any dealer in Oswego county; when we say we have the product of some of the oldest and most reliable piano manufacturers in the country, WE TELL YOU THE TRUTH.

These pianos are never found in department stores, dry goods shops or with the smaller dealer who usually buys on consignment.

But great care is exercised by these makers to place their agencies with the oldest and best known dealers in each county. WE HAVE THEM and would be pleased to have you call and inspect our stock.

An Admiral's Stories.

One of the English admirals has a choice collection of stories at the expense of laymen placed in office at the admiralty as a consequence of a turn of the political wheel. Of one lord of the admiralty he told a delighted house of commons how, receiving a report of disaster to a ship couched in technical phrase, he wrote a reply remonstrating with the officer for his use of bad language. Another civilian lord, looking over a chart and observing that one of his majesty's ships, homeward bound, passed within a space of two inches on the chart an island where castaway sailors were sheltering, wanted to know why it could not call and relieve them. The admiral explained that the two inches on the chart meant a distance at sea of 4,000 miles.—London Strand Magazine.

What the Jury Thought.

During a trial for assault in Melbourne a club, a rail, an ax handle, a knife and a shotgun were exhibited as the instruments with which the deed was done. It was also shown that the assaulted man defended himself with a scythe, a revolver, a pitchfork, a chisel, a hand saw and a dog. The jury decided that they'd have given a sovereign apiece to have seen the fight.

Spanish Emeralds.

"Fine old Spanish emeralds" is a phrase which means something quite different from what it seems to imply. There never was an emerald mined in Spain, but after the conquest of Peru the conquerors brought home great quantities of loot, of which emeralds formed an important part. In this way the finest emeralds came into possession of the old Spanish families, and as very few had been seen in Europe previous to that time all the best stones soon became classed as fine old Spanish emeralds. Today the expression still applies to the best emeralds of any source.—New York Sun.

THE OLD FASHIONED WAY OF BANKING has been ours for twenty years. No matter what others may do we do not change. The old fashioned way of doing things in banking has always proven to be the best. The old time friendships, the old home, the old memories and the things we love, and the old fashioned bank we never can forget. Some folks change their ideas or methods from the old to the new once in a while, but somehow after a time they wander back to the old home where they feel acquainted, where the hand clasp is firm, the look from the eye is straight, and they feel secure. In these days of speculation and extravagance, of storm and stress, it behoves every man and woman to stop and think. Saving is but a habit, acquire it, and teach it to your children and your friends.

FULTON HERO NO. 4.

Edward Lord, aged 40 years, enrolled August 20, 1862, at Oswego to serve three years; mustered in as Chaplain August 25th, 1862; discharged August 31st, 1863. He was pastor of the Fulton Presbyterian Church for twelve years previous to his enlistment. He and Colonel Clinton H. Sage were great friends. He had charge of the regiment's mail while he was with us, having an assistant. I frequently called upon him at his tent and visited with him evenings in Carrolton, Louisiana. He had an exalted opinion of the good leader and a brave man, and capable of commanding the Army of the Potomac. He certainly was a Colonel's ability and thought he was when on foot took his place in front of the regiment with a revolver in each hand, and would ride up and down in front of the line of battle when he was liable to be killed any minute.

Chaplain Lord preached a funeral sermon at sea on our way to New Orleans, and at one time in Carrolton we had six funerals a week. In Baltimore and Carrolton we had services on the Sabbath. The Chaplain for a time tried to hold prayer meetings, but after a little the men failed to attend.

He is still living, being 88 years of age, with his son Chester Lord in New York, who is Editor of the New York Daily Sun. He wrote Horace Gilbert recently that his father was able to go fishing and hunting.

When he left this city he went to Adams to serve as pastor there.

Dean Barry Pleased.

The Rev. Dean Barry of Oswego was one of the most strenuous advocates for Lake water in the lake city and Governor Hughes last week sent him the pen with which he signed the bill authorizing the bond issue, which permits the installation of lake water in Oswego Homes as early as it is possible to prosecute the work. Mr. L. W. Mott conceived the thought of presenting the pen to Father Barry and the Governor entered heartily into the project. It was on parchment neatly fastened and carries with it the signature of the Governor and the seal of the State of New York.

Local and Personal

Leave your order this week for that new hat to wear Decoration Day, at Youngs, Cayuga street.

Miss Lucia Emerick leaves this week for Brooklyn where she will visit her cousin, Mrs. Hulst.

Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Jennings of Cortland visited Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Rudd on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor Case Lewis have leased and will in July occupy the Robert McCully house, corner of Third and Academy streets.

Mrs. Albert Lindley Lee of New York city will arrive in Fulton on Monday where she will spend a few days as the guest of Hon. and Mrs. T. D. Lewis.

Mrs. Thomas D. Lewis and Mrs. Victor Case Lewis will be "at home" to a large number of their lady friends on Thursday afternoon from four until six o'clock.

Dr. H. L. Lake's many friends are pleased that he has sufficiently recovered from a long illness to resume his practice. He is in his office every day now during office hours.

Mrs. Lovisa Guile, who has been spending the Winter with her son Mr G. F. Guile in Chicago, Ills., will return this week to make her home with her son, Mr. C. R. Guile, in this city.

Messrs. Luther W. Mott, P. W. Cullinan and Thomas Hunter will leave on June 12 for Chicago, where they will attend the National Convention.

Milt J. Crandall will open his pavillion theatre on the Foster lot at the west end of the lower bridge on Saturday. Mr. Crandall will give 50 per cent of the Saturday night's proceeds to the baseball association.

Frank Campbell of the water department circulated a petition on Tuesday morning among the occupants of stores and offices on First street, asking for street sprinkling for the season. Few if any refusals were encountered.

Miss Mary Kuteman, who has been the guest of Miss Sara Lewis, will leave on Saturday for New York City. Miss Lewis will join her on Wednesday and will make one of a house party to be entertained by Miss Kuteman at her home in Texas.

Mrs. Charles H. David is entertaining her brother, Mr. Warren Hubbard of Oakland, Calif. This is Mr. Hubbard's first visit to Fulton in 45 years and he finds few familiar faces and scenes. He will spend some time with Fulton and New York city friends before returning to his western home.

The Oswego County Medical society met in this city on Tuesday, members from all sections of the county being in attendance. The following program was discussed: Vice President's Address, F. M. Dowd, M. D.; Report of a Case, F. E. Fox, M. D.; Subjects for Discussion: "Milk and Dairies," "Tuberculosis of Joints and Glands;" Report of Cases. After the program dinner was enjoyed.

Mrs. T. H. Marvin is chairman of the supper committee for the annual tea of the hospital auxiliary. The tea will be held on Saturday, May 23, and Mrs. Marvin's assistants are Mrs. James Hunter, Mrs. E. C. Brown, Mrs. Robert Hunter, Mrs. A. Wettengel, Mrs. D. L. Lipsky, Mrs. R. B. Parsons, Mrs. Julia A. Murphy, Mrs. John D. McIntyre and Mrs. Max Katz. The committee will leave nothing undone to bring the event up to the high class maintained throughout the life of the auxiliary. The tickets are now on sale and they are being readily taken.

Commissioners Bradley and Howe of the Board of Public Works, accompanied by Mayor Quirk, were in Albany last week conferring with the State Board of Health officials relative to the construction of a disposal plant for the west side, that the sewer system may become of use to the residents. The necessity for a disposal plant would now seem to have become void, as Oswego, the complainant, has decided to draw her supply of water for culinary purposes from the lake. The result of the conference was that an engineer will soon be sent to this city to arrange a satisfactory plant, which will cost in the neighborhood of $1,200 instead of the $10,000 first called for. The plant will be so constructed that it can be increased in capacity as the demand warrants.

Congressional Bell Signals.

On the floor of the house the doorkeeper has his desk, and it is here that the bells are struck that give notice of the needs of congress. One bell calls for tellers when the house is in committee of the whole; two bells indicate a call for yeas and nays; three declare a recess; with four bells the red light over the door goes out; five bells mean a "call of the house," under which the sergeant at arms is supposed to summarily arrest any member on sight and bring him in, whether on foot or horseback. Any member who is not present at a call of the house is subjected to a severe reprimand. Looking down the corridor, the going out of the red light gives the curious suggestion of the tail end of a passenger train dashing through a tunnel. While the red light burns bright and clear it means that congress is under way, but when the light winks and goes out then the visitors understand that the wheels of legislation have ceased to revolve.—National Magazine.

Winter of '61-'62 Recalled When Fulton Boys in Blue Were "Tenting Together on the Old Camp Ground."

Editor Times:

Out of over one hundred men who left Fulton for Elmira on the 6th day of May, 1861, there were but seven to answer to the roll call at the late re-union of Company E. and in counting the names in the published roster I see there are twenty-eight still alive.

During the first winter of the war, that of '61-'62, there were four of us tenting together, W. H. Babcock, W. H. Ely, L. C. Day and myself. Babcock was wounded at 2nd Bull Run, a ball striking him on the top of the head. He was finally discharged and was married soon after he left the Army, but died in '66 (I think) from the effects of the wound. Ely is living at Allagon, Michigan; Day is living in Lysander, N. Y., while the writer is holding forth in the Metropolis of the Northwest.

During the last winter of the war, that of '64-5, while I was a member of Co. A, 54th N. Y. Cavalry, there were five tenting together: E. A. Teller; Samuel W. Earle; H. M. Foster; "Billy" Phelps; and myself. Out of the five there are four of us still living. Teller (whose name I saw in the list of those who attended the late re-union) is living at Solvay, N. Y.; Earle is at Glen Elder, Kansas; Foster is in the cattle business at Fort Collins, Colorado; Phelps died a number of years ago at Hannibal, N. Y.

If every tent "crowd" who passed thru the war would average as well as we did, there would be a good bunch of us alive to-day out of the two and a half million men who went to make up the Union army.

Earle visited me last summer and we had a royal good time. The world has used him well since the war and he is in good circumstances, financially. Was in the farm machinery business till a few years ago, when he turned the business over to his sons and is now letting his muscles relax.

In looking over the roster of Co. E, recollections of our campaigning days come up—of our long and tiresome marches, of our camping either for a few days or for the winter.

I remember one day we were setting in the shade of a pine tree. The subject of oysters came up. I don't just remember what brought it up. One of the boys remarked that he would never forget the first time he had all the stewed oysters he wanted. "How was it? Tell us about it. The circumstances must have been out of the ordinary for you to remember a thing like that," said one of the boys.

"Well, boys, I'll tell you how it was," said he. "When I was about 15 years old, my father procurred a place for me to learn a trade. There were other boys there, but I was the youngest—that is the last to be taken into the business. There were also several men working there, some of whom let no chance slip of "working" any of the boys who were verdant enough to be "worked." I expect that I was green, in fact, as I look back to that time I can see that I was green. Then on the other hand, I don't know as I was to blame for what followed. I had no other thought than to do what I was told by the men, who were working there. One day 'long 'bout half past ten o'clock, one of the men said to me, "Boy, I wish you'd go over to Dutton's Machine Shop and borrow a three cornered rat tail file for me. Tell them that I'll return it in a few minutes." So away I went to the machine shop and asked one of the men for the file. After he had consulted with two or three others (and they had their fun over it) he told me one of the men had broken the only three cornered rat-tail file there was in the shop, but that probably I could get one at the hardware store. So back I went and told of my failure to get the file, but remarked that I could get one at the hardware store. The fellows in the shop were having too good a time at my expense to let it drop, so I was given a quarter and told to get the file at the store. So off I puts—anxious to make good. I enquired of a clerk for the file, who informed me that they were just out of that style of files, but that, as they had a consignment of freight up at the depot, he didn't doubt but what there was a box of three cornered rat tail files there, and that they would most likely be down at about 2 o'clock.

ATTRACTIVE SIGHT.

The residents of this city were treated to a novel and attractive sight on Friday afternoon when the students in all of the schools in the city, the High school faculty and the grade teachers, formed in procession at the High school building, two abreast, and marched through the streets. The procession was headed by the Odd Fellows band and the west side and east side contingent were separated by an excellent drum corps composed of the boys from Phillips street school.

Each school and every grade in each school carried a banner designating where the boys and girls attended. The little ones from the primary departments carried ropes of different colors and walked four feet apart. The banner of the Fourth street school primary department was decorated with a Teddy bear and it was proudly carried by the twin sons of Lee Edgarton. Another attractive feature of the parade and one which called forth applause along the line, was Master Covert Jones of the State street primary department beating marching time upon a drum which had been in his father's family since the war of 1812. It was carried by two boys and Covert, in rough rider suit, made the welkin ring. It is estimated that there were 1800 in line.

The procession broke ranks at the Fair grounds where the Rev. W. L. Sawtelle addressed the assemblage, his remarks being most appropriate and listened to with marked respect and attention by even the smallest tots present. Mr. Sawtelle paid high tribute to Superintendent Fairgrieve and his corps of teachers and he also delighted the children when he told them he had witnessed a procession in honor of the Emperor of Germany but that the school children were to him a more impressive sight.

The teachers and children were very tired after their long walk, but the effect of the spectacle upon the citizens was so edifying; the demonstration of the number of children of school age in Fulton, so surprising, that the effort was not without compensation, and it is expected that the Field Day of the local schools will become an annual event.

Important Industrial Move

Last week the consummation of the deal whereby the Minetto Shade Cloth factory, in which Messrs. Page and Benson held large interests, was transferred to the Columbia Shade Cloth Company of Ohio. The financial consideration being, it is reported, in the neighborhood of $2,000,000. This change means a great deal for Minetto, Mr. C. B. Benson prophesying that within a few years Minetto will outrival Fulton numerically and that she will become annexed to Oswego. Plans are being perfected for the erection of a large cotton mill in Minetto, in which all of the shade cloth used by the company will be made. Every department will be enlarged, and the plant, when completed, will be one of the largest in the country.

Messrs. Benson and Page have disposed of their entire interests and will devote considerable time to traveling. Messrs. Johnson and Thorpe will continue with the present company.

MEMORIAL DAY.

There are many stories regarding the first observance of Memorial Day. I have taken pains to gather all the information I could on the subject and I believe the following statement is correct. On April 16, 1862 the wife and two daughters of Chaplain May of the 2nd Michigan Infantry and Mrs. Captain George H. Evans, whose husband was a member of the same regiment, which was stationed near Washington, went to Arlington Cemetery and placed sweet flowers on the graves of Michigan soldiers. The next year on the same day of the month they repeated the loving ceremony at the same cemetery, and one year from that date they performed the same duty at Fredericksburg, Va. The first public ceremony was at Charleston, S. C., under the direction of James Redpath and Dr. Esther H. Hawks on May 30, 1865. The black people were the chief actors in the procession. A great crowd saw the exercises which were full of loyalty to Old Glory. School children led the advance, each with a boquet of flowers which was deposited on the graves of heroes.

When they passed under the Stars and Stripes, voices sang "My Country, 'tis of Thee." There was prayer; Scripture reading and singing in a reverent manner and hearts rejoiced over the close of the war and a Union saved. Major General John A. Logan, who was Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, in a general order established May 30, 1868 as the first declaration of Memorial Day, and since then it has been well observed all over the country.

Decoration Day Program.

The members of Post Schenck, G. A. R., and of Camp Pentelow, S. of V. will meet in Grand Army Hall at 10 o'clock on Saturday morning where they will secure their floral offerings and proceed to the cemetery to decorate the graves of deceased comrades.

Dinner will be served by the women auxiliaries in the hall at 12, noon, and at 1:30 o'clock all will proceed to the First Methodist church where an address will be delivered.

Those having flowers to contribute will please leave them at the Grand Army hall not later than 9 o'clock on Saturday.

Fulton Charter Amendment a Law.

Governor Hughes last week signed the bill amending generally the charter of the city of Fulton.

The bill provides that sidewalks fronting on property must be cleared of snow by 12 o'clock, noon, or the Superintendent of Public Works may order the work done by men in his employ and charge the expense for same against the property. The City Chamberlain is empowered to place the city monies in the bank which will pay the highest rate of interest therefore. But one official paper will be appointed. An appropriation of $1,500 per year for the maintenance of the city hospital is authorized.

"Cooked" and "Well Cooked" Food

Good food and a good cook are not enough to produce a good meal. Much depends on the vessels in which the food is prepared. Unless these are scrupulously clean, there will be a disagreeable odor or a taste of tin or iron, not to mention the danger of ptomaine poisoning. Many stomach troubles and other ailments can be traced back to this source. These dangers are overcome by the use of our

SANITO COOKING UTENSILS

These are specially made to reproduce the old German cooking utensils so universally used abroad. SANITO ware has a special lining which cannot crack or scale off. This lining is absolutely acid proof, and the vessels are always sweet, clean and wholesome. SANITO ware should be used for all ordinary culinary purposes. It will prove particularly valuable in preparing food for the sick or for infants.

Our Offer A set of SANITO ware consists of 6 pieces—2 bake pans (1 & 2qts.), 2 cooking kettles (2 & 4 quarts) and a 2-piece roaster. We will ship the complete set upon receipt of $2.50
All charges prepaid east of the Mississippi. For points beyond we prepay charges to the river. Safe arrival guaranteed

Walter J. Bell, Secretary of the Lafayette Loan and Trust Company, Lafayette, Ind., has written the County Clerk's office, Oswego, asking for the whereabouts of Burton Candee, who several years ago had a farm near Fulton. He is asked to communicate with Mr. Bell, as there are matters of importance demanding his attention.

The regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held on Friday afternoon, May 29, at the home of Mrs. J. W Rigley, No. 402 Broadway. Mrs. John Richards will be leader and Mrs. W. M. Wells will have charge of Current Events. Tea will be served.

Arthur Hotchkiss was very agreeably surprised at his home three miles south of Fulton on the river road last Tuesday, the occasion being his 17th birthday. A fine repast was served at 5 o'clock, and he received a number of fine presents. Those present were, Mrs. Emily Hotchkiss, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Bennett of Chicago, Ill., Mrs. Ben Ingamells, Mrs. Helen Carrier, Mrs. S. L. Bennett of Cheyenne, Wyo., Mrs. J. H. Johnson, Vint Ingamells, John Johnson, Roy and Ray Lyboldt, Harold and Ed. Brown, Charles and Ernest Ouderkirk. The color scheme was green and white. All reported a very enjoyable time, the surprise being complete on the part of the young host.

Richland Caucus.

The Republicans of Richland held their caucus on Thursday, and as considerable strife had been created by two candidates for the nomination for sheriff, there was an immense attendance of electors, 488 votes being cast, the delegates friendly to Deputy Sheriff Frank White winning over the delegates friendly to Assel Brown by a vote of 273 to 205.

The county delegates elected were—W. D Streeter, W. H. Enos, S. S. Hibbard, W. J. Nicholson, G. H. Dyke, Earl Hutt, E. J. Harrington, G. D. Smith, M. L. Dunbar, Edward Salisbury, F. H. Ransom, F. L. Spicer, Mason Calkins, W. I. Lane

The district delegates elected were—F. G. Whitney, G. W. Morton, J. W. Parkhurst, T. S. Meacham, Melvin Hicks, R. E Trumbull, E. H. Kenyon, W. H. Lamb, H. L Clark, D. C. Dodge, Grant Edick, Patsey Murray, W. E. Nelson, J. H. Tollerton.

The district delegates were instructed for F. L. Smith for Assembly, provided F. G. Whitney is not a candidate.

Hannibal Caucus

The Hannibal Republican caucus was held on Thursday and resulted in the following delegates being elected to the conventions to be held in Pulaski in June: County—A. S. Guthrie, Dr. W. E. Acker, J. B. Burt, W. C. Matteson, A. L. Eldredge, Jasper Hopper, H. H. Phillips.

District—J. W. Burt, Dr. E. F. Acker, George Wilde, Willard Wilbur, Leroy Shaff, J. F. Eldredge, W. H. Minar.

No instructions were given.

Lincoln's History of Himself.

When Abraham Lincoln was elected to congress Charles Lanman, then editor of the Congressional Record, according to the regular custom, forwarded to Mr. Lincoln as well as to all other members elect a blank to be filled out with facts and dates which might be made the basis for a biographical sketch in the directory. Mr. Lincoln's blank was returned promptly, filled up in his own handwriting with the following information:

"Born Feb. 12, 1809, in Hardin county, Ky.

"Education, defective.

"Profession, lawyer.

"Military service, captain of volunteers in the Black Hawk war.

"Offices held: Postmaster at a very small office, four times a member of the Illinois legislature and elected to the lower house of the next congress."

Ancient Waterworks.

Hezekiah, king of Judah, who reigned in the years 717 to 688 B. C., was a pioneer in constructing a system of waterworks, bringing water into the city of Jerusalem. In the holy book we read: "He made the pool and conduit and brought the water into the city, stopping the upper part of Gihon, and brought it straight down to the west side of the city of David. And Hezekiah prospered in all his works." From the "pools of Solomon," near Bethlehem, water was conveyed to Jerusalem, a distance of six or seven miles, through a conduit of earthen pipe about ten inches in diameter. The pipe was incased within two stones, hewn out to fit it, then covered over with rough stones cemented together. Even in those days "boil the water" was a well known injunction.

THE SPY.

An Original Story of the Civil War by Ormsby MacKnight.

THE older we grow the firmer becomes the conviction that we had better keep within the strict limits of duty. I once busied myself about correcting an evil and instead of receiving thanks for doing so got nothing but kicks and cuffs. That was when I was a very young man. Since then I have known better.

I was a private in the Union army operating in Virginia. While we were in camp between marches and skirmishes I was one day on picket when I saw a girl up in a tree making signals to the enemy. She thought she was concealed from our picket line by the branches. So she was, from every one but me. Between her and me was an opening just big enough for me to see her wigwagging with a white handkerchief. I should have called the corporal of the guard and reported the matter; but, thinking I might win promotion for myself by attending to the matter personally, I left my post, went to the tree, ordered the girl down and marched her to the headquarters of the general commanding.

The general took her in charge, then rated me soundly for leaving my post. I was arrested for a breach of duty, but was soon after released with a reprimand.

A few weeks later came a fight in which, with others, I was taken prisoner. We were kept temporarily in an open field waiting transportation south when who should pass by on the road but the girl I had seen wigwagging to the enemy. She saw me, recognized me, but passed on quickly without noticing me.

"THERE'S ONE OF YOUR SPIES."

"There's one of your spies," I remarked to a Confederate guard. "I saw her one day in the Union lines making signals to your men. I turned her over to our general and supposed she'd been put out of the way of doing any further damage. I guess she escaped, after all."

Without making any reply to me the soldier called for the officer commanding the guard. I saw him point to the girl and say something, whereupon the officer went rapidly after her.

The next day the officer came to me and thanked me for putting him on to a Union spy. I asked him to explain, and he said that on my information the girl had been arrested. She had been loitering about their camp, and complete information was found upon her as to every corps present, including artillery and cavalry. The general commanding was puzzled what to do with her since she was a woman, and he revolted against hanging her. I told the captain that they were making a mistake since I had myself seen her making signals to the Confederates. But he told me the girl stoutly denied ever having been within the Union lines. To this I replied that the troops then confronting the Union forces could not have been the same as now. I think I impressed him that possibly a mistake was being made, but whether he followed the matter up or not I didn't know. I asked him the next day what had become of the spy, and he said she was under guard awaiting information from some one who knew her to be a good Confederate, but after the finding of the documents on her no one doubted that she was a Federal spy.

The next morning at daybreak I heard a volley, followed by artillery firing. Then I saw a blue line scurrying across a cornfield, and then—well, I hugged the ground to escape a hailstorm of bullets. It wasn't a minute before the Federal troops passed over me, following the Confederates they had surprised, flying in every direction. They rallied and made a stand just beyond the limits of their camp and put up a good fight, but they didn't succeed in recapturing the ground they had lost.

I was in the wildest state of excitement imaginable, for I had been saved from what I dreaded most—a southern prison. While I was shouting the general hurried past, and with him, riding straddle on a strayed Confederate horse, was the girl spy. She caught sight of me and reined in, with flashing eye and scowling brow.

"HE'S THE MAN WHO GAVE ME AWAY."

"Hold on, general," she said. "There's the man who gave me away."

Dismounting, she ran up to me, hit me a sharp blow with her fist and before I could recover from my surprise knocked me down and stamped on me. All the while she was calling me the vilest names and swearing at me like a pirate. The officers of the general's staff laughed immoderately at the grotesque sight, but the general evidently considered it a serious matter.

"That'll do, captain," he said at last. "Let him up. He's only a fool who doesn't know enough to attend to his own business and leave others to attend to theirs. You're lucky to escape a halter, and you'd have been dead before this if they'd have found out you were a man." Then, turning to me, he said: "This last blunder is too much. Report to your captain under arrest. The most I can do with you is to try you for deserting your picket post, but that I'll do."

However, he thought better of it for it would have been hard to convict me since all I had done was through ignorance. The spy was young MacCracken of his staff, one of the most daring boys in the army. He had signaled the Confederates to gain their confidence preparatory to going into their lines for information. Had I not given him away he would have gone back with a full knowledge of the enemy's strength and position.

That was forty-five years ago. Since then I have attended to my own business.

HOW IT FEELS TO BE SHOT

Experience of Edgar Van Etten, Now New York Central Official.

Edgar Van Etten, vice president of the New York Central and Hudson River railroad, who, while but eighteen years of age, was a captain in the Union army, tells this experience of his in the battle of Spottsylvania:

"One bullet which had struck the ground in front and was partially spent struck me with considerable force just below the knee and, running hard as I was at that time, tumbled me all in a heap. I never shall forget the sensation. The bullet had struck with such force that my leg from the knee down was apparently gone. I can remember well that as I fell I saw the sun, a great red ball, in the hot July sky, halfway down behind the horizon. The first thing that came to my mind was: 'You poor devil, you have lost a leg, and what will mother say when she hears that you are shot? You are badly wounded, and perhaps you will die. Certainly it means going to the hospital and amputation, which, if you survive, means a wooden leg or a crutch all of your life.' It seems to me now that a thousand thoughts of this kind run through my mind and for fully ten minutes, although I know that it was less than ten seconds, then I reached down to feel how much of the leg was gone, and to my surprise I found it all there. I plucked it and felt of it and shouted for joy and got up and limped on after the boys.

"We captured the earthwork and drove out the Johnnies, but, following them too far, met a countercharge and were driven back to our side of the earthwork. By this time it had become almost dark, and the Johnnies, with a yell, charged down to the other side of the earthwork, but we held our own, and all night long both sides lay with their backs against the earthwork, loading and firing over their heads. At 2 o'clock in the morning, however, we dug through and captured two of their guns, but they got away with the others when they evacuated. My leg was swollen so that I could not stand upon it. I was carried to the hospital, and heroic treatment was applied, which was to let cold water drop upon it an hour at a time. It seems to me now, as I think of it, the pain was such that I would rather have lost my leg, but two days of this treatment brought me around all right."—Leslie's Weekly.

Taking Time by the Forelock.

It was in the latter portion of the civil war, when great calls for troops were in process of being filled, that notice was served on the adjutant general of one of the smaller states of the north that the quotas of some of the towns were not full and that the men must be forthcoming. Orders to that effect were issued, with the result that when the matter was closed there were about enough men for a single company. It was organized and sent to the front and attached to one of the regiments from the same state.

The first time this little body of soldiers saw service was at the battle of the Wilderness. The action was going on during one of the terrible days of that battle, and the shells and bullets were getting in their work. The captain of our company felt called upon to make a speech to his men, and he said:

"Soldiers, we are now up against the enemy. When the orders are given to fire, do your best and kill all you can with the forty rounds of ammunition you have. When you have fired it all away, you had better retreat. I am a little lame, so I am going to start now."—Boston Globe.

Dramatic Note.

There's nothing makes a man feel queerer than to have his wife describe a play to him all wrong when he can't correct her because he told her he didn't go to it the night he worked late at the office.—New York Press.

One Cure.

"I believe I'll rock the boat," declared the man in the stern.

"Don't do it," advised his companion. "It might discharge this unloaded pistol I have in my jeans."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Grand Army.

Its Ranks Are Getting Thin, but Its Hearts Are Young as Ever.

We ain't a standin' army now.
In fact, we're gray and lame,
A trifle stiff about the knees
And shakin' in our aim.

It's us that knew the bitter days;
It's us that went to die.
I guess we got a right to shout
When Glory flutters by.

"THERE'S ONLY A FEW OF US LEFT."

We're gettin' scarce; but, bless yer heart,
If country called for men
We'd sign the roll "Age twenty-one,"
And save that flag again!

LONG SEARCH REWARDED.

Picture Found on Soldier's Body at Last Identified.

A daguerreotype of a young man and a girl taken from the body of a Union soldier on the battlefield of Chancellorsville during the civil war has been returned to the girl in the picture, Mrs. T. W. Stowe of Milford, Conn., after a search lasting thirty-three years.

Former Freeholder Edgar Whitehouse, a mineral water manufacturer of Paterson, N. J., and Hawthorne, conducted the search for the owner of the picture.

The daguerreotype came into the possession of Mr. Whitehouse through his wife. Mrs. Whitehouse's father, N. Barnes, who was a member of the Thirteenth New Jersey volunteers, was captured during the war, and the daguerreotype was given to him by a Confederate soldier, who explained that the picture had been taken from a dead Union soldier at Chancellorsville.

On the back of the case were found the names "John Rawson and Nellie Augusta Nettleton." The case also contained a needle, a piece of thread and a lock of hair.

Mr. Whitehouse communicated with every Grand Army of the Republic post in the country, but was unsuccessful until "Nellie Augusta Nettleton," now Mrs. T. W. Stowe, was located in Milford, Conn. Mrs. Stowe wrote to Mr. Whitehouse on April 6 last. She said:

John Rawson was reported missing after the battle of Chancellorsville, and for ten years that was all I heard. Then a traveling man came to Milford. He said he knew "Johnnie Rawson" well and said he had been one of the last to see him alive.

My husband is glad that I am to get the picture back. I had forgotten that my name was in the case. Do you not believe that this is one case in a thousand—a picture restored to the original owner after forty-five years?

I wish I could make good to you all the expense you have gone to to find the owner. I am thankful that this little bit of my life's history has been handed down to me over the silence of so many years, and I admire your perseverance under such almost insurmountable obstacles.

To you and yours I am most sincerely your friend, MRS. T. W. STOWE.

The daguerreotype was forwarded to Mrs. Stowe after she had sent photographs of identification to Mr. Whitehouse.

He Brought the Cows Home.

A boy whose parents would not permit him to enlist in the Union army was sent one morning to drive the cows to pasture on his way to work, taking his lunch with him. He did not return at night. He had run away and entered the army. For three years he fought without a furlough and returned with the regiment unharmed by Confederate bullets. He arrived in the old pasture at home just at "cow time" and leisurely drove up the same old cows just as if he had never been away.

A Woman's Welcome to the Flag.

A resident of Monticello, Ky., speaking of the manner in which the people received the Federal troops in the advance on that place, says, "One old lady said as she saw the column rushing on after the Confederates, 'When I seed the old flag a-comin', I just threw my old bonnet on the ground and stomped on it.'"

When you think of indigestion think of Kodol, for it is without doubt the only preparation that completely digests all classes of food. And that is what you need when you have indigestion or stomach trouble—something that will act promptly but thoroughly; something that will get right at the trouble and do the very work itself for the stomach by digesting the food that you eat and that is Kodol. It is pleasant to take. It is sold by all druggists.

Flying Fish.

At one time it was widely credited that flying fish possessed the power to accelerate their passage through the air by flapping their "wings," as their enormously elongated pectoral fins are sometimes called. Had this been proved these fish would have actually shared with bats, birds and insects a power which has been denied to all other living creatures. But men of science are now agreed that the motion of the fins sometimes seen when the fish leaves the water is merely a continuation of its swimming movement and in no way aids the passage of the fish through the air. The method of the fish's flight is this: It rushes through the water at high speed, hurls itself into the atmosphere and, spreading its huge winglike fins, glides rapidly forward until its momentum is exhausted. Then it drops back again into the water. So great is the impetus gained that these fish under favorable conditions will "fly" for a distance of 500 feet. But when once the impetus is exhausted the fish is quite unable to sustain itself in the air by muscular effort.—Scientific American.

Chamois Maker Is a Magician.

Most everybody uses chamois, and everybody imagines it comes from the graceful goats of the Swiss Alps, but it doesn't. It really hails from the cavernous depths of tanneries of Peabody, in New England. Peabody tanners make beautiful leathers of sheep pelts. The chamois maker is a magician of the leather trade. To his door he draws sheepskins from the great ranches of Montana or their possible future rivals on the plains of Siberia, the pampas of Argentina or the fields of Australia. Mary's little lamb, masquerading as brave Swiss chamois, has a wonderful career.

Natural Anxiety.

A very talkative little boy was allowed to accompany his father to a friend's house on the understanding that he should not speak until somebody asked him a question. He remained silent for half an hour. "Father," he then murmured, "when are they going to begin asking me questions?"

She Speaks Out.

"You aren't earning very much."

"But, my darling, two can live as cheaply as one."

"I don't yearn to live cheaply, young man."—St. Louis Republic

The French "Mrs. Malaprop."

Calino, the French "Mrs. Malaprop," does not amuse so much by the confusion of his words as by the quaintness and unintended plainness of his remarks. He entered the service of a well known doctor, who, after Calino had been buying hay for his horses for awhile, made up his mind that the hay was worthless.

"That is very poor hay that you've been buying," the doctor complained.

"But the horses eat it, sir," said Calino.

"No matter. It's bad hay."

"Yes, sir," said Calino respectfully. "I'll change it. I know you are a much better judge of hay than the horses are!"

One day the bell rang, and Calino came in.

"A patient has arrived, sir," he reported.

"An old patient or a new one?" asked the doctor.

"New one, of course, sir," said Calino. "The old ones never come back!"

Calino admired very much the beautiful teeth of a lady among his master's patients.

"Ah!" he exclaimed. "Her teeth are as fresh and sound and white as a newborn baby's!"

Idiomatic English.

Mrs. Fremont, in a sketch of her father, Senator Benton, tells the following story of the French bishop at St. Louis at the time of the purchase of Louisiana. She says:

It was a point of honor among the older French not to learn English, but the bishop decided that it would be better to acquire it, especially for use from the pulpit. To force himself into the familiar practice of the language he secluded himself for awhile with the family of an American farmer, where he would hear no French. The experiment proved very successful. Soon he had gained a sufficient fluency to deliver a sermon in English. Senator Benton was present when it was to be given, and his feelings may be imagined as the bishop, a refined and polished gentleman, announced:

"My friends, I'm right down glad to see such a smart chance of folks here today."

A Fowl That Won a Battle.

A singular story is told of a gallant cock whose moral influence at a critical moment during the battle of St Vincent helped to save a British man-of-war from the hands of the enemy. The fowl in question formed part of the live stock of the Marlborough, a vessel which had suffered so severely that her captain was considering the advisability of striking his flag. The ship was entirely dismasted, while the chief officers had been carried below severely wounded, and the crew, without anybody to cheer them up, were beginning to grow sullen under the heavy fire of the enemy, to which they were hardly able to respond. At this emergency a shot struck the coop in which the fowls were confined. The only surviving occupant, a cock, finding himself at liberty, fluttered up and perched himself on the stump of the mainmast and surveyed the scene of carnage around him. Then, flapping his wings in defiance, he began to crow vociferously. He was answered by three hearty and exhilarating cheers from the crew, who all had a good laugh and, with spirits thus renewed continued the action with a vigor that lasted until a turn in the battle rescued them from their tight position.—London Chronicle.

Cigar Smoke.

The stale smell of cigar smoke is peculiarly unpleasant and peculiarly difficult to get rid of. It clings to the curtains and to most of the articles of furniture which present any sort of an absorbent surface. It is not so to the same extent with cigarettes or with pipes. In the case even of a single cigar books, papers and textiles reek of its stale flavor, and the room requires abundant airing before that flavor is completely eliminated. This effect, we are told, may be traced to the fact that a cigar produces pungent aromatic oils in greater abundance than a cigarette or a pipe. With the cigarette oils are probably burnt even if they are formed, while in the pipe they condense in the stem. In the cigar they seem to be chiefly discarded into the air. In the form of a cigar tobacco would appear to produce more ash than in the form of a cigarette or when burnt in a pipe.—London Lancet.

On What Their Fate Depended.

During the week certain members of the Scotch minister's flock had been paying overmuch attention to sampling the local whisky, and the minister took advantage of his position in the pulpit to administer gentle reproof. "An' I tell ye, one an' all, ye're on the way to perdeection!" he cried. At that moment a fly settled on the Bible before him. He raised his fist. "Ye're gaein' the hellf" he shouted. "An' ye'll all get there, just sae sure as—sae sure as I ding the life out o' this fleef" His fist crashed down as he uttered the words. Then he looked to see the result of his handiwork. "Missed!" he ejaculated. "Ah, weel, maybe there's a chance for some o' ye yet!"—London Bellman.

Countermanded.

A very devout clergyman had just married a couple and, as was his custom, offered a fervent prayer, invoking the divine blessing upon them. As they seemed to be worthy folk and not overburdened with this world's goods, he prayed, among other things, for their material prosperity and besought the Lord to greatly increase the man's business, laying much stress on this point.

In filling out the blanks it became necessary to ask the man his business, and, to the minister's horror, he said, "I keep a saloon."

In telling the story to his wife afterward the clergyman said that as he wrote down the occupation he whispered:

"Lord, you needn't answer that prayer."—Philadelphia Ledger.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 27, 1908

FROM the reports that came from Washington, all of the governors who attend the conference at the White House, with the exception of those from Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, and New York, are of the opinion that Secretary Taft will be nominated either on the first ballot or by acclamation. Republicans and Democrats alike stated in interviews that the fight for nomination was practically over and that Taft would be the nominee of his party and that he would in all probability be opposed by Mr. Bryan. There seems to be little doubt that the Secretary of War will lead the Republican party to victory at the polls in November.

IF Secretary of War Taft should be nominated for the Presidency, there are numerous good reasons why Governor Hughes might be selected as his running mate, and if these reasons should be controlling Mr. Hughes' personal desires would not be considered, any more than were those of Governor Roosevelt in 1900. He would strengthen the Republican ticket in New York, is highly esteemed throughout the country and would give more strength to the ticket than any unknown man, however popular the unknown man might afterward become.

THE president of the American Federation of Labor, Samuel Gompers, made recently before the Senate Committee on Judiciary, an argument for the right of the workingman to work for whom he pleases and the right of the employer to employ whom he pleases without fear of boycott, in his declaration that, "No man has a property right or vested interest in my patronage or that of my fellows. I can bestow it or withhold it."

ONE of the most important general elections in the history of Japan was held recently and the announcement was made that the result of it would not be made known until a week later. Obviously election nights in Japan are vastly different from those to which we are accustomed in this country.

THE two Senators from Connecticut telegraphed their state convention that they would not obey instructions to vote for Taft at Chicago. Accordingly the state convention decided that the two senators had better stay at home, and elected and instructed others.

THE insistent cry, "let us alone," comes with pathetic iteration from gentlemen who have too long enjoyed an undisturbed career of law-breaking, granting rebates and stifling competition.

IT is a wise politician who does not monkey with the buzz-saw—especially when Mr. Roosevelt is running the saw.

County Court.

On motion of Attorney L. W. Baker, Wallace Johnson, an eighteen-year-old boy living at Fulton, was discharged from the County Jail by Judge Stowell. He has been confined there for some time on the charge of being the father of a child of a young woman in that city. He also has a wife and baby and his release was agreed to by City Attorney Guile, of Fulton, on the understanding that he would take care of the child.

Henry V. Austin pleaded guilty to burglary, third degree, and petit larceny in entering the store of McRae & Son in Fulton and sentence was deferred until Wednesday.

And that is what you need when you have indigestion or stomach trouble—something that will act promptly but thoroughly; something that will get right at the trouble and do the very work itself for the stomach by digesting the food that you eat and that is Kodol. It is pleasant to take. It is sold by all druggists.

Patronize Fulton Firms.

Many residents of this city are on a still hunt for the agents for the Jefferson Furniture company which did business here during the Winter months. The report is that considerable money belonging to housewives has been placed in the hands of this company's representatives and that they are unable to secure the furniture which it was supposed to procure. The plan of the company was to organize clubs, the members of which were to pay 25c per week and each week some one of the number, the selection to be made by drawing lots, would secure a handsome piece of furniture. It sounded all right when presented, but sober reflection would indicate that a sucker must be born every minute to successfully operate the scheme. A few early birds would receive something for practically nothing. The majority would receive nothing in exchange for their expenditure.

The moral is, patronize local merchants—people who invest their time and their money in Fulton and whose interests are identical with yours. You will be able to secure as liberal propositions, better grade goods and lower rates from reputable houses and absolute security in your investment will be assured, if you do this. Any merchant will gladly extend the same credit to you, whatever your position in life, providing you will subscribe to the same cast iron regulations as govern your dealings with the fly-by-night strangers who almost daily solicit your patronage.

Try spending your money with the merchants who advertise in The Times. Six months trial will be sufficient to convince you.

To the Republican Electors of Oswego County.

GENTLEMEN—On account of the false statements being circulated throughout the country that I have sold out my business interests and am residing here temporarily awaiting the result of my candidacy for the office of Sheriff, I feel it my duty not only to myself but in justice to the friends who are supporting me to make a brief and truthful statement of the facts pertaining to my business interests and residence in Oswego County. Let me say that I was born in Oswego County and have spent nearly my whole life within its boundaries and whether my canvas shall prove successful or otherwise I beg to state that I have no thought whatever of of removal, for all my property interests, both real and personal, are invested in Oswego County. Fifteen years ago I engaged in the drug business in Williamstown, and in the death of a competent and trusted employe, the late E. D. Burton, I found myself without assistance legally qualified under the pharmacy laws of the State to prepare prescriptions and dispense drugs during my absence on the Board of Supervisors and elsewhere, and after unsuccessful efforts to secure the services of a licensed pharmacist I entered into a copartnership agreement with William H. Short, a competent druggist, duly qualified under the law to take charge of the business during my absence.

Respectfully,
C. W. Taft.

DIED.

Helen, aged 66, wife of Mr. James H. Brackett, died on Monday at the family home in Hannibal, after a brief illness with pneumonia. The funeral services were held this Wednesday morning. Beside the husband, the deceased is survived by three sons, Prof. Brakett of Potsdam, and Messrs. Manly B. of this city and John of Hannibal.

Helen, wife of Mr. Ernest Darrow, died at noon on Sunday at the family home in Syracuse from consumption. The young couple had been married less than a year, the wife being a resident of New York city. Sympathy is felt for the afflicted family. Prayer was said at the home in Syracuse this Wednesday morning and the remains were brought to this city, on the noon train for interment in the family lot in Mt. Adnah.

On Friday, at her home in Seventh street, occurred the death of Julia E., aged 42, wife of Mr. Miles Hogan. The funeral services were held from the home on Sunday and from the Palermo church later. Interment was made at East Palermo. The Rev. Coons was the officiating clergyman. Beside the husband and eight children, the deceased is survived by her parents and two brothers.

At the home of her daughter, Mrs. Thomas Kilfoyle of West Second street, on Friday, Mrs. Mary Ward, aged 98, passed to rest. She was undoubtly the oldest resident of Fulton, having come here six years ago after a residence of sixty years in Granby. The funeral services were held on Monday morning from the Catholic church and interment was made in St. Mary's. The immediate survivors are one daughter, Mrs. Kilfoyle, and two sons, John W. of this city and Martin of Granby.

The death of Alice E. Goodyear, aged 46, wife of Mr. Horace Goodyear of New York city, occurred on Monday evening at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Waterman, after a long illness with typhoid fever. The news of her critical illness and subsequent death was received with deepest regret by her friends in this city, where she spent her young womanhood and where she took the vows of wifehood. She came from New York city some time ago to help care for her mother, who was very ill, and before Mrs. Waterman was restored to health the deceased was stricken with the illness that caused her sad death. The funeral services will be held from the parent's home on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock and from Zion Episcopal church at 3 o'clock, the Rev. A. H. Grant officiating. Interment will be made in Mount Adnah. Beside the afflicted parents, the deceased is survived by one brother, Prof. Frank Waterman of Smith College; her husband and two children, Norma and Harold.

You will find all the latest novelties in belts, ties, hosiery, shirts, &c, at the B. S. McKinstry clothing store, Oneida street. A new line just received.

A Chinese Bunko Game.

"I want to show you," remarked George Wilson of Los Angeles, "how keen the Chinese are at a bunko game. When I was in Tientsin they pulled off a good one. Poor fellow entered a pawnshop. Moment later men came in with package and inquired for him by name. Had a letter. First man handed letter to pawnbroker to read. Said: 'Am sending you ten tael bar of gold as present. Am getting very rich. You must come to me. Your brother.'

"'Then I don't need to pawn my watch!' joyfully exclaimed the poor man. 'But 10 taels is great amount for one like me. No one would believe it was mine. Will you buy it from me?' The pawnbroker took it back and weighed it. It weighed 12 taels. He handed over 10 and said nothing. When the men were gone, he sawed into the bar and found it filled with lead. In a moment a third man rushed in. 'Did you have any dealings with those fellows? They cheated me. For 3 taels I'll lead you to them to get even.' And he did. The two come back, protesting their entire innocence. 'Produce the bar, and if it be not all right I shall return your money.' The pawnbroker returned with the sawed bar. 'Weigh it,' directed the poor man. 'Ah, but this is a twelve tael bar. Mine was 10, and you paid me but 10.' Stung for 13 taels!"—San Francisco Chronicle.

Restless Animals.

When you see the animals in the park menageries pacing back and forth restlessly in their cages, do not take it for granted that the creatures are unhappy or even discontented. It may be that the lion or the tiger or the polar bear that moves about with apparently ceaseless activity is only taking his daily exercise, without which he would pine and die soon. When the wild creatures are in their native jungles they are kept pretty busy hunting food. Thus each day they walk many miles perhaps. In their narrow cages in the parks they are plentifully supplied with food, but their brawny bodies still demand a great amount of exercise. Mile after mile is paced off daily by the uneasy creatures. Usually they move with a long, swinging stride, but when mealtime comes around then the step quickens until when the keeper appears with his baskets of meat the tigers and lions and other animals leap against their bars and growl and whine and lash their tails. In fact, they act like great hungry boys do after a long day's tramp if they find that supper is late.

Fish as They Bite.

"If you will take the time to investigate," said an old time angler who has observed as he fished, "you will find that the full stomached trout in your catch will outnumber the empty stomached ones ten to one. This would seem to indicate that it is the trout which has already dined well that is eager for more, while the one which has not dined at all regards it with indifference. In other words, it is the satiated trout that bites and the hungry one that doesn't—paradoxical proposition. And this odd circumstance is not confined to brook trout. Pickerel not only swollen with food, but having the tails of fish they have since caught protruding from their mouths because there is as yet no room for the newly taken victims in the capacious pickerel maw, will yet voraciously seize the tempting live bait of the fisherman, as any angler who has fished much for pickerel has doubtless had frequent proof."—New York Sun.

A Book Accident.

When M. Henri, a quaint and shabby miser of threescore and ten, died in Paris some time ago, the closest search for treasure revealed nothing more valuable than two shelves of dingy looking books, which were sold, with his few sticks of furniture, to pay his funeral expenses. When the buyer of the books examined his purchase he discovered to his amazement two volumes of rare value—absolutely unique in the whole history of books—every page in each of them consisting of a five pound sterling note of the Bank of England. In all there were 820 pages, a neat accident of $20,500.

The Holy Carpet of Turkey.

The holy carpet of Turkey is a gorgeous piece of red velvet embroidered with gold. It takes a year to make the carpet, and the sultan of Turkey then intrusts it to the Egyptian pilgrims to place on the tomb of the prophet at Mecca. At the end of that time it is replaced by another carpet and is returned to Cairo with great ceremony. The right to carry the carpet has been handed down from camel to camel in the male line for hundreds of years.

Neighbors Do the Repeating.

"I wonder what's the meaning of the expression 'History repeats itself?'" asked Dubley.

"I don't know," replied Subbubs, "but I do know if it's scandalous family history it needn't exert itself at all."—Philadelphia Press.

In Luck.

"Mamma, do animals know what they are called?"

"No."

Jack uttered a sigh of relief and remarked, "It would have been so unpleasant for the donkey, wouldn't it?"

Might Be Made Useful.

"This kid," declared the New York broker, "is no good as an office boy. He has absolutely no memory."

"Well," inquired the junior partner, "shall we fire him or take him into the firm?"—Kansas City Journal.

Mrs. Perine of Second Street on Saturday noticed a peculiar looking something in an egg which she had broken to use. Upon close inspection she found that it had every appearance of a small tape worm, a perfectly formed head and the links peculiar to that specie of worm being clearly defined. This discovery brought to mind the old theory that tape worms always come from eggs taken into the stomach in a raw state.

Mr. John Reagan attended the commencement exercises at Baltimore Medical college last week, when his son, Robert Reagan of this city, graduated and received his degree of M. D. Dr. Reagan is a graduate of Fulton High school; is a prime favorite socially and an all around athlete. His many friends congratulate him upon his graduation.

While walking in Ganesworth street on Sunday Mrs. Ralph Lamson sustained a fall which resulted in painful and serious injures. A man approaching from the opposite side stepped on one end of a plank in the walk tipping it up and throwing Mrs. Lamson violently to the ground, tearing loose the ligaments at her elbow and knee and inflicting other injuries. Drs. Hall and Haviland were called to care for the sufferer.

The Court of Appeals handed down a decision directing judgment in favor of F. A. Emerick and against Mary E. Hacket of Volney. Several years ago Mrs. Hacket gave Mr. Emerick an option on her farm. When the latter went to avail himself of the option Mrs. Hackett declined to convey. Mr. Emerick, through his attorney, James T. Clark, brought an action to compel Mrs. Hackett to perform the specific acts of the contract or option. Mrs. Hackett, through D. P. Morehouse, brought an action to re-form a lease, alleging that it was her intention to lease but not to sell the property, which contained valuable springs. The case has been in the courts for several years. The decision settles all controversy. Mrs. Hacket is directed to carry out the terms of the option and deed the farm to Mr. Emerick.

A Blind Man's Ruse.

"My great-uncle, who was blind," said a Frenchman, "once buried $4,000 in gold louis under a pear tree in his garden. His neighbor saw him do it and in the dead of night came and stole the money, replacing the earth carefully.

"Some days later my uncle brought fifty more louis down to the pear tree for burial. He soon discovered his loss, and, silently weeping, he, too, replaced the earth.

"He knew whom to suspect, and that night he called on his neighbor. He seemed thoughtful and distrait, and the neighbor asked him what oppressed his mind.

"'Well, I'll tell you,' said my great-uncle frankly. 'I have 1,000 louis hid away in a safe place, and today a tenant paid off a mortgage, and I have another 1,000 louis in cash on my hands. I don't know whether to seek out another hiding place for this money or put it where the other is. What do you advise?'

"'Why,' said the neighbor eagerly, 'if your first hiding place is safe—and you declare it to be so—I should certainly put this money there too.'

"My great-uncle said firmly that that was what he would do. It was the wisest course. Then he took his leave.

"And when next day he went to the pear tree again there, sure enough, was his lost 1,000 louis, all put back again."—Exchange.

Ingersoll on Clover.

In declining an invitation to a Clover club dinner once Colonel Robert Ingersoll wrote:

"A wonderful thing is 'clover.' It means honey and cream—that is to say, industry and contentment—that is to say, the happy bees in perfumed fields and at the cottage gate 'Old Boss,' the bountiful, serenely chewing satisfaction's cud in that blessed twilight pause that, like a benediction, falls between all toil and sleep. This clover makes me dream of happy hours, of childhood's rosy cheeks, of dimpled babes, of wholesome, loving wives, of honest men, of springs and brooks and violets and all there is of stainless joy in peaceful human life.

"A wonderful word is clover! Drop the 'c,' and you have the happiest of mankind. Take away the 'c' and 'r,' and you have left the only thing that makes a heaven of this dull and barren earth. Cut off the 'r' alone, and there remains a very deceitful bud that sweetens the breath and keeps pence in countless homes whose masters frequent clubs. After all, Bottom was right, 'Good hay, sweet hay, hath no fellow.'"

A Curious Plant.

"A curious plant," said an eminent botanist, "is the wild tamarind or juba plant of the riverside and waste places of tropical America, and very strange are its effects upon the nonruminant animals that feed upon its young shoots, leaves, pods and seeds. It causes horses to lose the hair from their manes and tails, has a similar effect upon mules and donkeys and reduces pigs to complete nakedness. Horses are said to recover when fed exclusively on corn and grass, but the new hair is of different color and texture from the old, so that the animal is never quite the same as it was. One animal of which I personally knew after feeding on the plant lost its hoofs and had to be kept in slings until they grew and hardened again. Ruminant animals are not thus affected, and the growth of the plant is actually encouraged in the Bahamas as a fodder plant for cattle, sheep and goats. The difference is probably due to changes effected upon it in the chewing of the cud."

A Trying Position.

An East Indian paper prints the following, written by a native subordinate in his diary while in a very trying position:

"Up a tree where I adhere with much pain and discomposure while big tiger roaring in a very awful manner on the fire line. This is very inconsiderate tiger and causes me great griefs, as I have before reported to your honor. This is two times he spoiled my work, coming and shouting like thunder and putting me up a tree and making me behave like an insect. It is a very awkward fate to me; and the tiger is most inconsiderate."

The Widow's Dower.

It is certain that "dower," the estate for life which the widow acquires at her husband's death, was not known among the early Saxons. In the laws of King Edmund the widow is directed to be supported wholly out of the personal estate. Dower is generally ascribed to the Normans, but it was first introduced into the feudal system by Emperor Frederick II., who was contemporary with the English Henry III., about 1250.

The Word "News."

On the derivation of the word "news," which has been a puzzle to many learned philologists, there is the following:

The word explains itself without a muse.
And the four letters speak from whence comes "news;"
From north, east, west and south—the solution's made.

Richard the Brazen.

By CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY,
Author of "For the Freedom of the Sea," "The Southerners," Etc.,
AND EDWARD PEPLE,
Author of "A Broken Rosary" "The Prince Chap," Etc.

Copyright, 1906, by Moffat, Yard & Company

"Excuse me," he said, "but why did you pose as some one else?"

"Well, you see," confessed Richard, blushing to the roots of his hair, "you informed me at the time that the Williams family was a—well, a generation of vipers, to be exact, and, besides, I knew that dad would rave if he knew I came."

"You scalawag!" laughed the cattle king. "What were you up to anyway?"

"I'm coming to that, dad," answered the young man, shyly casting another glance in Harriet's direction. That young lady had already turned for flight up the stairs when Richard stopped her with:

"No; wait, please, Miss Harriet. This concerns you. As I couldn't come here in my own name, Mr. Renwyck—and"—

"But why did you wish to be received at all?" the host cut in, while the eyes of Uncle Michael sparkled expectantly.

"Mr. Renwyck," said Richard boldly, now flinging caution to the winds, "that day when I dragged your daughter out of a milling bunch of cattle I swore to follow her if I had to crawl to Jericho on my hands and knees!"

"What!" cried the New Yorker, springing to his feet. "Were you the man?"

"Yes, sir," admitted the young Texan, casting a look of tenderness at a certain young lady who was busily trying to keep down her blushes.

"Well, I never!" burst out Mrs. Renwyck. "I—I thought he was a very funny Englishman!"

"Ah!" exclaimed her husband. "Now I see how you happened to stick on Hawk. Go on; go on!"

This Richard proceeded to do, giving a full account of his tribulations, but with such deep appreciation of their humorous side that the people most imposed upon could not find it in their hearts to be angry with him.

"You see," he said in conclusion, "I was bowled over by a statue of Napoleon, frozen out by a foreign draft and was apparently caught red handed as a burglar. As for the diamonds, perhaps Mr. Corrigan can tell us more about them!"

He did not think it necessary to mention the matter of the letters and hoped that Harriet and Imogene might also be spared a confession. In this the young people were lucky, for Uncle Michael's man had caught both the light fingered gentlemen—Roddy-poddy-kins' expert and scientific assistant proving to be a notorious crook—who were subsequently lodged in a safe retreat which the Hon. Mr. Kinwait missed by the skin of his teeth, and means were found to keep them silent as to Mr. Fitzgeorge's adventure in the billiard room, although Mr. Renwyck and Michael had to be told of it.

"So that's the way the matter stands, is it?" asked Mr. Renwyck, with a smile. "You two have been making love under my very nose. I said you were a burglar, sir, and now you prove it." He glanced at his daughter from beneath his shaggy brows. "I suppose I needn't ask if it has all been decided without consulting me?"

"Well, no," grinned Richard. "I hoped it would have been, but something always popped up to interrupt us. I should like your permission, sir, to continue."

The financier studied the floor in silence, making no reply till Richard presently touched his shoulder and spoke again.

"Mr. Renwyck," he said, with a twinkle in his eye, "don't forget that I have a libel suit against you. I should hate to run off with a lady while her father pined in jail."

"Oh, go 'long with you!" laughed the millionaire. "I was thinking of the Peace and Good Will Realty company. I guess I'm in with you. Come, gentlemen, let's go into the library and look over Michael's papers."

"Dicky," smiled old Bill Williams to his son, "you're a scamp, and you know it! But I'd give a dozen harbors to see you happy." He placed a caressing arm about the young man's shoulder and whispered into his ear: "Go in and win, Dick, my boy. She's worth it all!"

Mr. Corrigan rubbed his hands and turned to his brother-in-law.

"If you had listened to me at first, Jacob, you"—

"Oh, shut up, Michael!" laughed Mr. Renwyck. "I give in. I'm down, but don't stamp on me. Come on, Williams; I have something in the library besides papers, which I keep for friends!"

CHAPTER XXV.

As the library door closed Mrs. Renwyck and Miss Schermerly rose to take their leave, the mother with a happy smile at Harriet, the spinster with a long, reproachful frown.

"Dear me!" the matron whispered to her friend. "So Harriet isn't going to be a nobleman's wife, after all. How very disappointing!"

"One of nature's noblemen, dear Julia," said Miss Schermerly, with a complete reversal of opinion, "I always thought him most distinguished.

"Yes," murmured Harriet faintly.

and think of the money they are to have from dear Michael and that—ah—Bible company!"

Richard and Harriet were not yet alone, for Mr. Cornelius Van der Awe still sat in a huge rocking chair, the picture of woe and misery.

"Do you know," he murmured, apropos of nothing in particular, "everybody in the world seems happy—except poor me!"

"Cornelius!" called a shrill voice, and, looking up, all three spied a flushed face and a dishevelled head that were poking over the banisters. "Cornelius, you make me tired! Go out on the lawn and wait until I fix my hair. I never saw such a miserable, dejected, silly boy! I declare, I'm almost sorry that I'm not engaged to Mr. Williams instead of you!"

The head disappeared, the melancholy lover departed, with a dazed and gloomy air, and Harriet and Richard were alone at last. For a moment neither spoke; then he took her unresisting hand.

"Harriet," he whispered, and now his voice for the first time trembled—"Harriet, do you understand why I stooped to this deception? I tried to tell you over and over again, but feared to lose you in the telling. I would gladly have faced death a thousand times rather than deceive you and yet—for you I did it. Did you, now—did you dream that I was an American?"

Harriet laughed.

"I guessed you were not an Englishman by the dreadful time you had with Lord Crofland's monocle. Really it was most pathetic!"

Richard took the frail silk cord between his thumb and finger, whirling the glass around his head in the manner of a lariat.

"It has served its purpose, and now we'll smash the last emblem of the foreigner."

"No; don't," interrupted Harriet quickly. "Let me keep it as a souvenir of your realistic impersonation."

He dropped it into her hand and asked:

"But did you suspect that I was the"—

"The cowboy?" she finished. "I—I hoped you were."

"God bless you for that!" he cried. "And, now that you know, may I tell you again that I have loved you, worshiped you, since that first sweet moment when I pulled you from your pony and held you in my arms? May I tell you that never for a moment have I ceased to dream of you, wanting you as I wanted nothing else in the whole wide world?"

"You—you didn't think that way at first," she smiled.

"How? What do you mean?"

Harriet hesitated, blushed and then went on:

"Well—you—you put me down on the grass, gave me that awful whisky—then forgot all about me—to go after your—horrid cows!"

It was Richard's turn to laugh.

"But, you see," he explained, "it was duty that called me then, even as another duty calls me now. I'm afraid I must leave you to look after an English calf." He smiled at Harriet's look of blank astonishment and continued, with a laugh: "It is all on account of poor Woolsey Bills. I thought he had helped to steal your diamonds, and I'm afraid I locked the Cardinal up in the bathroom."

"Oh, please hurry and let the poor thing out!" Miss Harriet pleaded when she fully realized the situation. But Richard for once determined to put pleasure even before so plain a duty as releasing an innocent prisoner.

"No," he whispered; "I want the promise of another prisoner first—a prisoner for life—for all time—and one who will never wish to get away. I love you," he pleaded, "with all my strength and with all my soul. Dearest, will you be my prisoner?"

She checked his extended hands and asked, with a mischievous smile:

"Will—will you lock me up in the bathroom?"

"If you need it," he answered audaciously. "But at other times I'll lock you in my heart. Darling, will you come?"

Again he came toward her, and this time he would not be denied.

"Yes," murmured Harriet faintly.

And Richard the Brazen came into his own.

Flag of Chesapeake

Its Purchase by William Waldorf Astor and Presentation to a British Museum — Its Capture In Battle.

If the expatriated American, William Waldorf Astor, had wished to increase his already great unpopularity in the land of his birth he could scarcely have done anything more apt to effect such a purpose than what he did in purchasing the flag of the frigate Chesapeake and presenting it to a British museum.

About three months ago the report was published that the flag had been purchased in London at an auction sale and that the purchaser was an American. Who could it be? Some said Cornelius Vanderbilt, others J. P. Morgan, but at the time nobody dreamed that it was bought with the view of keeping it in England instead of sending it to this country, where it ought to be preserved, in the opinion of most Americans at least. It is nearly a century since the great battle was fought between the Shannon and the Chesapeake, during which Captain Lawrence, commander of the American frigate, uttered his immortal and dying words, "Don't give up the ship!" Between the people of the British empire and those of the leading American republic the most cordial relations have long prevailed, and it is felt to be an act of peculiar impropriety that a man born in America and inheriting a great fortune from ancestors who made their money in this land of liberty should be the one to fan the dying embers of any hostility still existing.

Mr. Astor obtained the flag at an auction sale of objects collected by the late T. G. Middlebrook. Besides the Chesapeake relic, there was in the collection the bugle on which, according to accepted tradition, the order was sounded for the charge of the Light brigade at the battle of Balaklava in 1854. Mr. Astor bought the bugle as well as the flag, paying $4,250 for the latter, and presented both to the Royal United Service museum, which was the same thing as presenting them to the British government, since the museum is supported by the government.

The captured Chesapeake was broken up about ninety years ago, and part of her timbers went into the construction of dwelling houses in the town of Portsmouth, England. After the Shannon and the Chesapeake had bombarded each other at close range for five minutes and had then come alongside and been lashed together Captain Lawrence, already seriously wounded, gave the command for his bugler to call the boarders. The bugler was found in hiding and so overcome with fear that he could not sound the command. Then it was that mutiny, signs of which Lawrence discovered just as he was about to give battle, was manifested. The delay was fatal, and the English boarded the American vessel just as Lawrence was being carried below repeating, "Don't give up the ship!" When an English midshipman attempted to pull down the American colors and place above them the union jack, the halyards became twisted and led to the stars and stripes appearing above the English colors. Fire was then reopened by the officer in command of the Shannon, and the British midshipman who had pulled down the American colors was killed, his head being taken off by a shell. The flags were at last reversed, firing by the Shannon ceased, and the Americans surrendered, the battle lasting about eleven minutes.

The Chesapeake flag originally measured four feet by four feet six inches, and eight-tenths of its surface was taken up by fifteen stars on a blue field. All of the flag's stripes except two are now missing.

Mr. Astor was born in New York in 1848, but for about a score of years has lived abroad and for nearly ten years has been a British subject.

Feminine Inconsistency.

A clubwoman, writing in the Philadelphia Record, reveals a feminine inconsistency in the peculiar views held by some women about the use of their first names. She says:

"A couple of years ago I had occasion to send a letter to a married woman, and in addressing her I wrote 'Mrs. Henry ——.' Imagine my surprise when in reply I received an indignant letter from her, in which she said: 'I do not at all like to have my identity submerged in that of my husband. I do not see why I cannot be addressed by my own name. Because I am married is that any reason why I should lose my individuality? My name is Anna.' The next letter I wrote to the indignant wife you can be sure it bore the first name of the woman in question, but the climax came recently, when the husband died and my fastidious friend was left a widow. I wrote her on club business and, bearing in mind her first scolding, took particular pains to address her as 'Mrs. Anna ——.' The answer to this from her makes me shiver to think about. 'Do you think I have so far forgotten my beloved Henry,' she said, 'as to be willing to abandon his name altogether? I wish you would address me as Mrs. Henry in the future, please. I may be an unfortunate widow, but I still bear my husband's name, I think.'"

The President's Salary.

It is safe to say that very few of the people living in this country know how the president of the United States draws his salary of $50,000 a year. Of those few who may have given the matter a thought, a large majority do not know whether he receives his salary monthly, quarterly or semiannually. As a matter of fact, the salary due the president is taken to the White House by a trusted messenger from the office of the treasurer of the United States on the last day of each month and handed over to the official whose business it is to look after it. The president receives his salary in the shape of a check, the $50,000 being divided into eight checks of $4,166.67 each and four checks of $4,166.66 each. Thus one month out of every three the president receives 1 cent less on his check than he does the other two. Some such arrangement as this is necessary, as, of course, $50,000 is not exactly divisible by twelve.

How to Guess Any Number.

Desire one of the company to think of any number she chooses, provided it be even. Tell her to triple it, halve the product, triple this half and then tell you how many times nine will go into this last number. Multiply this by two and it will produce the original number. Thus suppose 4 to be the number thought of. You triple it, making it 12; halve this product, leaving 6; again triple this, making 18, in which 9 will go twice. This twice, multiplied by 2, gives you 4, the number thought of. Or, to give another example, suppose 6 to be the number. Triple it, 18; halve this, 9; triple it again, 27. You ask how many times 9 will go into the result and, being told three times, multiply 3 by 2, and the answer is 6.

A great many people imagine they have heart trouble when the fact is that the whole trouble lies in the stomach. The pains in the side around the region of the heart are not necessarily heart trouble. We suggest that you start with the stomach and whenever you feel a depression after eating or whenever your food seems to nauseate take Kodol. It will not be very long until all these "heart pains" will disappear. Take Kodol now and until you know you are right again. There isn't any doubt about what it will do and you will find the truth of this statement verified after you have used Kodol for a few weeks. It is sold here by all druggists.

Two commercial travelers in a railway carriage entered into conversation.

One of them tried hard to make the other understand something, but he was either very hard of hearing or slow in believing.

At last his friend lost his temper and exclaimed: "Why, don't you see? It's as plain as A B C!"

"That may be," said the other; "but, you see, I am D E F."

A Fatal Disease.

A celebrated general once inquired of one of his soldiers the cause of his brother's death.

SHOWED HIM BLACKWATER.

General Sheridan's Joke on an Aged and Obstinate Confederate.

"General Phil Sheridan had a strong sense of humor, which helped us out considerably at times," says Major W. H. Spera, sole survivor of Sheridan's escort on the famous ride to Winchester. "I remember once when we were trying to reach a creek called Blackwater he hailed an old man in passing and asked him questions. The old man refused to direct him to the creek, plainly intimating that his sympathies were with Lee.

"'How far are we to Blackwater?' asked Sheridan, studying a map in front of him.

"'I do not know, sir,' replied the old man obstinately.

"'Have you never been to Blackwater, sir?' inquired Sheridan.

"'I have never been to Blackwater, sir,' snapped the old man.

"'Never been to Blackwater?' insisted Sheridan.

"'No, sir,' said the old man.

"Sheridan called an orderly and instructed him to arrest the old man and lead him at the head of the troops. For four miles the old fellow walked that dusty road, getting madder every minute and choking in the clouds of dust raised by the troops.

"When we reached Blackwater, Sheridan rode forward and sent for the old man, who came silently enough, but with defiance and hatred showing plainly in every action.

"'I thought it a pity, sir,' said Sheridan quietly, 'that a man born and raised here, as you tell me you were, had never had an opportunity to see a creek only four miles from his home. I have brought you here, sir, to show you Blackwater creek. When you have looked at it well, sir, you may return to your home in safety, sir.'

"The crestfallen man quietly retired to be met all along the line with cheers and yells and courteous inquiries as to how he liked the looks of Blackwater."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

REUNITED AFTER MANY YEARS

Brothers Reported Killed In War Meet on Iowa Farm.

Jeremiah McFarland and his brother, James McFarland, who lives at Dundee, Delaware county, Ia., recently met for the first time in nearly a half century. Each believed the other to be dead.

In the year 1861 these brothers were living in New York state and enlisted in the Union army. On going to the front they were engaged in the battle of Shiloh. Jeremiah was carried off the battlefield with six bullets in his body, and the report was carried to James that his brother was dead. Jeremiah also was given the same report that his brother was dead. Both, accepting the statements as true, made no further investigation. At the close of the war both men went west, James locating in Delaware county, Ia., and Jeremiah going out to Washington state. In all these years no effort was made to clear up the mystery that seemed to surround the death of both men until last fall.

On the occasion of the meeting of the Grand Army of the Republic in Saratoga, N. Y., Jeremiah went there as a delegate from Washington and Alaska. He had a conversation with one of the old soldiers, who, noticing the badge and the name of Mr. McFarland, asked him if he had any relatives living in Delaware county, Ia. The question set him to thinking that there might have been a mistake in the death of his brother. When he returned for his trip home he decided to stop at that place and make some inquiries. Arriving at Manchester, Ia., he was informed that there was a James McFarland living on a farm near Dundee, Ia. Thither Jeremiah went, and to his surprise and joy he found his brother James alive and well.

General Grant's Joke.

Elliot M. Miller, a civil engineer of New Orleans, tells how General U. S. Grant made his father, Chaplain Miller, swear:

It was one of the chaplain's duties to receive and distribute the mail to General Grant's staff. Whenever the mail was late he was greatly annoyed by questions as to the cause of the delay, time of probable arrival, etc. On one occasion, when the post was unusually late, the chaplain for fear of losing his temper attached the following notice to the door of his tent:

"The chaplain does not know when the mail will arrive."

Shortly afterward General Grant, passing the chaplain's quarters, noticed the sign. He paused before it a moment and then walked slowly on his way. Coming out of his tent a few moments later, Chaplain Miller was horrified to read:

"The chaplain does not know when the mail will arrive, and he doesn't give a d—n."—Harper's Weekly.

He Led Them From Libby.

Death of General Thomas E Rose Recalls Daring Deed of the Dark Days.

THOMAS E. ROSE, U. S. A., brevet brigadier general, retired, who died in Washington on Dec. 18 last, led the party of Union soldiers who dug their way out of Libby prison during the civil war says the New York Evening Post.

General Rose was captured in the battle of Chickamauga. He escaped at Weldon, N. C., was retaken the next day and sent to Libby prison on Oct 1, 1863.

The forlorn conditions at Libby prison in 1863 are well known. The building itself was an old ship's chandlery warehouse, embracing nine large rooms, into which were crowded 1,200 prisoners. Quarters were so cramped that the inmates had to sleep "spoon fashion," head to head and feet to feet, in squads. There was no furniture in the building, and only a few of the early comers possessed such luxuries as old army blankets or knives, cups or tin plates. As a rule the prisoner by the time he reached Libby found himself deprived of all these accouterements.

Outside the prison to the south was a canal. In wet weather the cellar of the prison would become flooded with water, and platoons of hoary rats emerged from its ancient walls on the surface of the tide. The easternmost cellar was the worst and was known as Rats' hell.

From the first day of his incarceration Rose's mind turned to thoughts of escape, and all through the course of the partly successful plot he was the engineer and captain. He found a loyal lieutenant in Major A. G. Hamilton of the Twelfth Kentucky cavalry, and together the two men decided that the most feasible plan was to dig a tunnel from Rats' hell eastward, a distance of about seventy feet, to an empty shed abutting on a building owned by the James River Towing company. The exterior of the prison was carefully guarded night and day by sentinels, but indoors the vigilance was somewhat relaxed at night. At one time more than 600 prisoners were in the secret of the work, all under oath, but by some miracle the Confederates did not discover what was on foot.

Work was begun with a broken shovel and two case knives. With infinite pains the men cut through stone walls and piling in various places only to find themselves frustrated, now by water from the canal, now by some impassable obstacle. They tried to avail themselves of old sewers, but one was too small and one debouched in too public a spot. Finally they adopted the plan of digging eastward to the shelter of the other building.

Rose picked out thirteen faithful followers in addition to himself and Hamilton. Most of the others had been discouraged by the slime, the foul air and the ill success of previous attempts. Rose and his little band went on indefatigably, scarcely eating, scarcely sleeping, engrossed in the one feverish thought of liberty. At best it would be a slender chance. The streets of Richmond were patrolled by southern pickets, and friends were few for escaped Yankees wearing prison stained blue uniforms. But hope, springing persistently, drove them on.

By great good fortune Rose had come into possession of a rope nearly a hundred feet long, an inch thick and new. By an agreement between the commissioners of exchange several bales of clothing had been sent by the Federal government to the suffering soldiers at Belle Isle. A committee of Union officers from Libby prison had been assigned to supervise the distribution, and one of them by a bit of clever legerdemain managed to secrete the rope which bound one of the bales. Rose and Hamilton fashioned it into a ladder.

They concluded that the safest means of getting into Rats' hell without detection would be to dig a secret passage from the kitchen, which was on the floor above, but not directly over Rats' hell. Carefully digging out the mortar with a jackknife, they removed the bricks one by one from the back of the large open fireplace. When morning came they replaced the bricks and filled the crevices with soot which they had taken the precaution to collect beforehand on a blanket. After several nights' work they had an S shaped passage down which they could descend to Rats' hell by means of their rope ladder.

The wall of that east cellar had to be broken in three places before a place was found where the earth would support a tunnel. Rose dug assiduously, while Hamilton fanned air in to him and dragged the excavated material out as fast as it was ready. Without the artificial ventilation the tallow dip by which Rose worked would go out and Rose would suffocate. A wooden box which had been used as a spittoon served very well to draw the earth out of the passageway, part of the precious rope having been attached to it to enable the outside worker to pull it out and in turn the digger to pull it in. As fast as the earth was taken out it was hidden under a deep layer of filthy hay which covered the floor of the dump cellar.

The average diameter of the tunnel was about two feet. As the work progressed it was pushed with greater haste. Usually one man would dig and fill the spittoon with earth, at a given signal a second would draw the spittoon out, a third man would keep the air moving by fanning it with a rubber blanket, a fourth would act as relief, while a fifth would keep guard. As there were fifteen in the plot, they were able to work in three relays. The work was fearfully monotonous, however. Absolute silence was necessary, and when the men became separated they had to find each other by groping around in the darkness.

The rules of the prison required that the prisoners should be counted twice a day. To account for the absence of the five men who were at work each day their comrades resorted to various "repealing" devices and managed to be counted twice in sufficient numbers to make up the deficiency.

The whole plot was nearly upset by Hamilton's eagerness to see it brought to a successful end. Being certain that the tunnel was sufficiently long, he dug upward, contrary to Rose's counsel, and found, to his dismay, that the hole he had broken was outside the shed in plain view of the sentinels if they chose to notice it. Rose then pushed an old shoe through the hole and the next day by looking out an upper window saw where the old shoe lay and made a recalculation.

On Saturday, Feb. 6, 1864, it seemed almost certain that the Confederates had discovered the plot. Rose decided to push the work to an immediate conclusion. On Sunday Rats' hell was usually neglected by the Confederates, and Rose entered the tunnel and worked all day without food or rest, accomplishing twice the distance that any digger had done up to that time. The earth was composed of dense, hard sand. The only implement was a broad bladed cold chisel.

On Monday morning Rose again descended to the work. It was the seventeenth day of that tunnel, and Rose resolved that it should be the last.

Until an hour after midnight his work went on. Rose was nearly a physical wreck. The perspiration soaked his weary limbs. He could scarcely inflate his lungs with the poisonous air. His head swam.

In the agony of suffocation he dropped the dull chisel and beat his fists against the roof of his grave with the might of despair, when—blessed boon!—the crust gave way, and the loosened earth showered upon his dripping face, purple with agony. His eye caught sight of a radiant star in the blue vault above him. A flood of light and a volume of cool, delicious air poured over him. At that very instant the sentinel's cry rang out like a prophecy, "Half past 1, and all's well!"

Rose recovered quickly. He was in a yard under a shed, with a fence between him and the sentinels. He walked out on the street and reconnoitered a little. Then he returned to the tunnel, covered the exit with a piece of plank and crawled back to Rats' hell.

The party of fifteen agreed that as the night was nearly gone it would be better to wait till the next night before attempting to escape. It was also agreed that each member of the party should have the privilege of taking one friend into his confidence. The second party of fifteen thus formed was pledged not to follow the working party out till an hour had elapsed.

Rose and his companions made a successful departure at 9 o'clock on the evening of Tuesday, Feb. 9. But the news leaked out, and the little kitchen was soon crowded to suffocation with 200 prisoners, all clamoring to get at the entrance to the tunnel. At the height of the uproar some one yelled "The guards!" and a panic ensued in which several prisoners were trampled underfoot. The room was quickly emptied, but the alarm proved to be false, and many of the soldiers returned and made their escape.

Great was the surprise of the Confederates next day when the roll call revealed the absence of 109 prisoners. And as the fireplace had been rebuilt by somebody and the last man out had covered the hole in the ground no visible trace remained to show the astonished keepers how their tenants had decamped. Curious crowds, having read the newspaper reports, flocked to the neighborhood till finally some one kicked aside the plank in the yard and revealed the hole.

Of the 109 who got out fifty-nine reached the Union lines, forty-eight were recaptured, and two were drowned. Among those retaken was Rose, but he was exchanged for a Confederate colonel on April 20.

A Most Valuable Agent.

The glycerine employed in Dr. Pierce's medicines greatly enhances the medicinal properties which it extracts from native medicinal roots and holds in solution much better than alcohol would. It also possesses medicinal properties of its own, being a valuable demulcent, nutritive, antiseptic and antiferment. It adds greatly to the efficacy of the Black Cherry-bark, Bloodroot, Golden Seal root, Stone root and Queen's root, contained in "Golden Medical Discovery," in subduing chronic, or lingering coughs, bronchial, throat and lung affections, for all of which these agents are recommended by standard medical authorities.

In all cases where there is a wasting away of flesh, loss of appetite, with weak stomach, as in the early stages of consumption, there can be no doubt that glycerine acts as a valuable nutritive and aids the Golden Seal root, Stone root, Queen's root and Black Cherrybark in promoting digestion and building up the flesh and strength, controlling the cough and bringing about a healthy condition of the whole system. Of course, it must not be expected to work miracles. It will not cure consumption except in its earlier stages. It will cure very severe obstinate, hang-on chronic coughs, bronchial and laryngeal troubles, and chronic sore throat with hoarseness. In acute coughs it is not so effective. It is in the lingering hang-on coughs, or those of long standing, even when accompanied by bleeding from lungs, that it has performed its most marvelous cures.

Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Med. College, Chicago, says of glycerine:

"In dyspepsia it serves an excellent purpose. Holding a fixed quantity of the peroxide of hydrogen in solution, it is one of the best manufactured products of the present time in its action upon enfeebled, disordered stomachs, especially if there is ulceration or catarrhal gastritis (catarrhal inflammation of stomach). It is a most efficient preparation. Glycerine will relieve many cases of prosis (heartburn) and excessive gastric (stomach) acidity."

"Golden Medical Discovery" enriches and purifies the blood curing blotches, pimples, eruptions, scrofulous swellings and old sores, or ulcers.

Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., for free booklet telling all about the native medicinal roots composing this wonderful medicine. There is no alcohol in it.

Where the Joke Lay.

He was an Englishman, taking on a Welsh excursion steamer, he was watching a group of Welsh miners larking with one another, they suddenly seized one of their companions and swung him to and fro. The victim shrieked in terror as the ringleader shouted:

"Now, boys, overboard with 'im!"

So real was the horror of the collier that the Englishman jumped up and interfered successfully. The collier picked himself up and backed to a safe seat next the Englishman, who sternly reproved him for uttering such nerve shattering cries.

"It was only a joke, and you must have known it," he said.

The collier wiped his forehead.

"Iss, I knowed famous it wass a joke," he retorted, "an' that's why I did screech blue murrdurr. Eu don't know the boys, surr. The joke with them wass to chuck me overboard. Thank eu kindly forr stoppin' 'em!"—Pearson's Weekly.

Didn't Want to Tell.

The late Professor Greene, author of Greene's Analysis and the English Grammar with which so many have wrestled in their school days, was one of the most genial and fatherly of men. During the later years of his life he was professor of mathematics and astronomy in a New England college. There was in one of his classes a somewhat slow witted though studious young man, whom we will call Jones. On a certain occasion after Jones had repeated carefully the text book statements about the effects of the motions of the earth and was trying to remember what came next in the book the professor interposed with:

"Were you ever in the shadow of the earth, Mr. Jones?"

Jones (slowly)—No, sir.

Professor—Where do you spend your nights, sir?

Jones didn't want to tell.—Universalist Leader.

Banquets In Elizabeth's Time.

In Queen Elizabeth's time the first course of a banquet is given as wheaten frummery, stewed broth or spinach broth, or smallage, gruel or hotch pot. The second consisted of fish, among which are lampreys, poor John, stockfish and sturgeon, with side dishes of porpoise. The third course comprised quaking puddings, black puddings, bag puddings, white puddings and marrow puddings. Then came veal, beef, capons, humble pie, mutton, marrow pasties, Scotch collops, wild fowl and game. In the fifth course all kinds of sweets, creams in all their varieties, custards, cheese cakes, jellies, warden pies, suckets, slipbube and so on, to be followed perhaps by white cheese and tansy cake; for drinks, ale, beer, wine, sack and numerous varieties of mead or metheglin.—New York Tribune.

Iceland's Eider Ducks.

In Iceland on certain islands, near Reikiavik, the eider duck is raised in a systematic manner. It is really more of a small goose than a duck, being so independent of fish and animal food as to be able to support itself by grazing on seaweed at the bottom of the sea at a considerable depth. It is a splendid diver, being as much at home under the water as on the surface. The great value of the eider duck's down is well known, and, owing to the bird's tendency to pull out such large quantities for lining its nest that it leaves its lower breast almost bare when it is setting, there is no difficulty in getting a good supply of these feathers without destroying the birds. In Iceland it is strictly guarded against intrusion. The inhabitants consider it a crime worse than stealing deer in Scotland for any person to shoot an eider duck.

The Art of Food.

I suppose none of us recognizes the great part that is played in life by eating and drinking. The appetite is so imperious that we can stomach the least interesting viands and pass off a dinner hour thankfully enough on bread and water—just as there are men who must read something, if it were only "Bradshaw's Guide." But there is romance about the matter after all. Probably the table has more devotees than love, and I am sure that food is much more generally entertaining than scenery. Do you give in, as Walt Whitman would say, that you are any the less immortal for that? The true materialism is to be ashamed of what we are. To detect the flavor of an olive is no less a piece of human perfection than to find beauty in the colors of the sunset.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

THE OLD FASHIONED WAY OF BANKING has been ours for twenty years. No matter what others may do we do not change. The old fashioned way of doing things in banking has always proven to be the best. The old time friendships, the old home, the old memories and the things we love, and the old fashioned bank we never can forget. Some folks change their ideas or methods from the old to the new once in a while, but somehow after a time they wander back to the old home where they feel acquainted, where the hand clasp is firm, the look from the eye is straight, and they feel secure. In these days of speculation and extravagance, of storm and stress, it behoves every man and woman to stop and think. Saving is but a habit, acquire it, and teach it to your children and your friends.

CHANDLER REMINISCENT

Just then the proprietor came along and asked what was wanted. The clerk tried to turn the matter off, but I informed the merchant what I was sent for. He smiled, then said, "Don't you know there is no such thing as a three cornered rat tail file. The fellows up at your shop have been sending you off on a wild goose chase. Say, did they give you any money?" "Yes, a quarter," said I. "Well," said he, "you look as though you could invest that quarter to a pretty good advantage, if you should try."

My folks were poor and it was something of a struggle to get along. Whenever we would have oysters, there would only be enough for a good taste all around. In fact, I'd never had all the oysters I wanted at any one time. So off I hiked to a restaurant, kept by a man I knew, in the basement on the north side of Oneida street next to the canal. I told him I would like the biggest oyster stew he could give me for a quarter. Say, fellows, he just spread himself on that stew—a good big stew, a pickle and a side dish of raw oysters and nice crisp crackers to match.

When I climbed the stairs up onto the sidewalk, I felt just about as well satisfied as though I had paid the quarter for the file. When I returned to the shop the fellows were eating their lunches, which they brought from home. In reply to their quiry about the file I told them that there was a box of them up at the depot, and that I would go over along the middle of the afternoon and get one. They never said "file" or "quarter" to me after that, but, say, I've been enjoying that three cornered rat tail file oyster dinner ever since."

Card of Thanks

Editor Times: Will you please convey our sincere thanks to your readers for their generous co-operation in our efforts to secure work for the unemployed men of New York city?

Through the medium of the newspapers we have, up to the present time, succeeded in placing over 1,000 men—a success unprecedented, and which would have been altogether beyond our reach, were it not for the free insertion of our notices, so generously accorded by newspaper men throughout the country.

On behalf of the workless men we beg to express our gratitude to the Newspapers for such valuable aid, as well as for the personal sympathy and monetary help so kindly sent us by the editors themselves.

Very sincerely yours,
JOHN C. EARL,
Financial Secretary

Sat on a Barrel of Powder.

Among the many medals awarded by the navy department for acts of bravery during the civil war was one given to John Davis, who was on the United States steamer Valley City in the attack on the enemy's vessels and a fort near Elizabeth City, N. C., Feb. 10, 1862. When the vessel was on fire near the magazine he seated himself on an open barrel of powder as the only means to keep the fire out.

SUPERVISORS CONFER.

The special meeting of the Board of Supervisors held on Friday resulted in a comprehensive discussion of the benefits to be or not to be derived from the joint retention of the Ames Iron Works in Oswego and the erection of a suitable jail to take the place of the wretched structure now in use.

The Supervisors visited the jail and were convinced that the conditions were indescribable and that the State authorities had not over-stated them when they condemned the building as both unsafe and unfit for human occupancy. They also visited the Ames factory and were impressed with the magnitude of the industry and how much it meant to Oswego County in the matter of taxes and salaries paid.

Each of the thirty Supervisors present at the session stated the price which he thought should be taken for the jail property and the average price was $10,900, the Board finally deciding to ask the Ames company $15,000 for the property.

Supervisor Sweetland moved that a committee of five be appointed to confer with the Ames Iron Works officials relative to the sale of the jail property. The chair appointed as such special committee Supervisors Sweetland, W. M. Barker of New Haven, Marriette of Amboy, Scoville of Constantia and Beardsley of Granby. Supervisor W. M. Barker moved that Chairman Hydorn be added to the committee and the resolution was adopted.

Supervisor Sweetland has already secured a verbal option on a 23-acre property at a price of $2,100.

The Supervisors will further consult their constituents in the matter and discuss it. On June 4, they will again assemble and settle the matter.

As a business proposition the county cannot afford to lose the Ames industry, neither can it afford to lose this opportunity to sell the jail property at a fair price, in-as-much as the location is undersirable for any other than the Ames' use and the State will compel the erection of a new building within a few months

STATE LEGISLATURE.

Governor Said to Be Discouraged Over Outlook For Favored Bills.

BUT HE WON'T STOP FIGHTING

Wall Street Investigation Provided For by Davis Bill Opposed by Various Members of Senate Finance Committee—Leaders Hope to Adjourn Not Later Than June 5.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

Albany, May 21.—"Governor Hughes is discouraged over the prospects for his proposed new legislation." This is the statement made to the writer by a well known legislator who has intimate relations with the governor and whose words on political subjects are accepted as authoritative. Of course this does not mean necessarily that Governor Hughes will cease his efforts along the lines already laid down. But, according to the writer's informant, the governor is now, for the first time, firmly convinced that he will fail in practically all of his important recommendations in his special message convening the present special session.

The fight against race track betting has collapsed so far as the chances of having the Agnew-Hart bills passed are concerned. In fact, it is well known that Senator Agnew and Assemblyman Hart have decided to introduce these bills again next year if they return to the legislature. And if they do not return it is likely that others will sponsor the measures.

The Wall Street Investigation.

Governor Hughes and his supporters are watching the Wall street investigation measure in the senate with intense interest. The proposed investigation would, its promoters declare, reveal evils as great as those shown in the insurance world in the insurance investigation by the Armstrong committee. They claim that the center of the greatest financial wrongdoing is the New York Stock Exchange, asserting that a majority of the transactions on that exchange are purely speculative and in their legal nature probably gambling transactions.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR LEWIS S. CHANLER.

[Lieutenant Governor Chanler has had no less than three booms for higher office during the last year—one for the Democratic nomination for president, one for vice president and one for governor of New York. He comes of a famous New York family and has shown impartiality and ability as presiding officer of the senate. Although one of the wealthiest men connected with the state government, he is democratic in manner and is always accessible in his room connected with the senate chamber.]

The attitude of many of the senators toward the bill introduced by Senator Davis is that there is doubt as to whether or not an investigation of Wall street methods and of the New York Stock Exchange is necessary even provided all the assertions of the Davis bill supporters be true. These senators state that if stock transactions are gambling operations the responsible parties could be indicted by the grand jury; therefore the remedy lies with the grand jury and that it is not necessary to provide for any investigation when a remedy already exists. One of the senators holding this view is John Raines, the majority leader in the upper house, and he is the most influential member of the senate finance committee, which committee has the Davis bill in charge. The chairman of the committee is Senator Armstrong of insurance investigation fame and known among legislators as "the Duke of Rochester." The eleven other members of the senate finance committee are Senators Hill of Buffalo, Tully of Corning, Cassidy of Watkins, Allds of Norwich, Cordts of Kingston, O'Neil of St. Regis Falls, Ramsperger of Buffalo, Fuller of Brooklyn and Saxe, Grady and Mullaney of New York city.

Say Bill Will Not Be Reported.

The sentiment in that committee is one of opposition to the Davis bill, and the political phophets at the capitol predict that the seven votes in the committee necessary to report the bill will not be found. The assembly judiciary committee which had a measure during the regular session calling for a Wall street investigation failed to report it, and there is little reason to believe that the senate committee will do differently with the Davis bill. It was before the assembly judiciary committee that the counsel for the New York Stock Exchange, John G. Milburn of Buffalo, made the statement that "the New York Stock Exchange is perfectly willing to be investigated. It will gladly welcome a legislative investigating committee at any time."

McCarren Wants Revenge.

Senator McCarren's bill to provide for increased court supervision over the doings of political conventions, etc., is looked on in Albany as a most ingenious scheme by which the Brooklyn legislator desires to get revenge on State Democratic Chairman Conners and Leader Charles F. Murphy of Tammany Hall. The enactment of the bill into a law would, it is believed, give "Long Pat" ample means of securing a court review of the proceedings at the recent New York state Democratic convention, at which McCarren was summarily "read out" of the Democratic party. This bill is but one of the retaliatory manoeuvers of McCarren.

It is now the general belief that the legislature will adjourn on Friday, June 5. The assembly and senate leaders have informally agreed on this day and do not expect to meet any obstacles that will necessitate a change of date. There apparently is no inclination on the part of any one to take into the consideration the status of any of the new legislation at the time the legislature adjourns. The progress or lack of progress of the bills covering the recommendations of the governor's special message will not have any effect on the adjournment plans.

Effect of a Prolonged Session.

A senator from the western part of the state described the situation to the writer as follows:

"To prolong the present session of the legislature would simply pile up embarrassment on every one concerned—on Governor Hughes, for he evidently knows he cannot get what he wants from either house, and on his opponents, for the longer they are here in Albany the greater the chance that something unexpected might occur to upset their plans or to further complicate matters."

"What events might possibly occur to complicate the situation of the governor's opponents in the legislature or to upset their plans?" the senator was asked.

"Well," he replied, "suppose that President Roosevelt or the Republican state chairman, Timothy Woodruff, should finally decide that their followers in the state should unqualifiedly support the position of Governor Hughes in regard to his entire legislative programme. In such a contingency it seems to me that the entire complexion of affairs here would change, and the longer the legislature is in session the greater the probability of such a denouement. The political aspect of the present situation is highly significant. The Republicans seem worried over it, as they are not certain what the result of the defiant attitude of the state organization toward Hughes will be in the next election. The Democrats in the legislature are highly pleased and claim that Governor Hughes' differences with Republican leaders has greatly increased the chances of Democratic success next November.

"To take one particular phase, how would a continuation of the session affect the anti race track campaign? It would increase the chances of the passage of the Agnew-Hart bills very materially, and for this reason the opponents of the bills desire an adjournment at the first possible moment. Senator Foelker would have a chance to return in case of a delay of any appreciable length, and with the new senator from the Niagara-Orleans district, Wallace, the governor would have his needed twenty-six votes, putting the race track people to the necessity of obtaining one more vote for their side. They claim to be able to do this, but it seems to me that they had no ground to make such a statement and circulated it for some underlying purpose."

As to Election Reform.

The presentment of the grand jury of New York county concerning election frauds and sent to the governor and the legislature by order of Judge Rosalsky has occasioned considerable comment. That there is urgent need of more stringent laws relating to elections in the large cities of the state, and particularly New York and Brooklyn, seems apparent. While there were several so called "election reform" bills introduced at the regular session, what was probably the most important one was killed in the senate. This one provided that on registration and election days voters should write their names in an especially provided space in the books of record. A comparison of the handwriting could then be made in suspicious cases. While there are objections to some phases of such a law, yet it would, in the opinion of many veteran politicians, do away with many illegal votes. Some of the opponents of the bill in the senate stated that the system of voting was already too complicated and that the bill would cause confusion and make the election records too cumbersome.

Assemblyman M. K. Hart.

Merwin K. Hart of Utica, representing the First assembly district of Oneida county, has had unusual prominence in the legislature this year, largely owing to his handling of the anti-racing measures in the assembly for Governor Hughes. He is the governor's representative in the assembly. Mr. Hart has served two years in the assembly. He is a Republican and represents a district that ordinarily is Democratic. Although only twenty-seven years old, he is a bank director and head of a large manufacturing establishment in Utica. As a legislator he has proved unusually successful, having during his two terms passed a larger proportion of the bills he introduced than almost any other member of the lower house. He succeeded in passing the anti race track bills through the assembly by an overwhelming majority.

Mr. Hart has been widely spoken of in his county as a likely candidate for senator, and if nominated and elected he would probably be the youngest man ever sent to the upper house.

John Rountry's Bravery.

During the night of Sept. 21, 1864, fire was discovered in the magazine light room of the United States steamer Montauk. The alarm created a panic and demoralized the crew with the exception of James Horton, John Rountry and Charles H. Weeks. Horton rushed into the cabin, obtained the magazine keys, sprang into the light room and began passing out the combustibles, including the box of signals in which the fire originated. Rountry, with hose in hand, notwithstanding the cry of "Fire in the magazine!" forced his way through the frightened crowd to the light room and put out the flames.

THE FULTON TIMES

ESTABLISHED 1868 FULTON, NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 3, 1908 VOL. 41: NO. 4

That poverty is a help, not a hindrance, to individual progress, has been preached with such persistency that we may well doubt the claim. We are nearer the truth when we come to know that, while the accumulation of wealth should not be the chief end of human endeavor, the possession of some property does enhance one's self-respect, and tends to make of a man a better citizen.

HISTORIC HUDSON

How a Restful Trip to New York on the Palatial Steamers of the Day Line May Be Enjoyed.

The many friends in this vicinity of Mr. Orla A. Druce, a graduate of Fulton High School and a former employe on the Times staff, now a senior in Albany Medical College and during the vacation period holding a responsible position in the office of the Hudson River Day Line, Albany, will be pleased to read the following description of the superb new office building of his company in which he is located. The magnificent steamers which leave and arrive at the Albany docks of this company are perhaps the finest river boats in the world and the Hudson River scenery is unsurpassed for variety and beauty. Many residents of this vicinity en route to New York city avail themeselves each year of the opportunity to leave the hot, dusty trains at Albany and continue their trip by the cool, restful Hudson river route. It always affords Mr. Druce pleasure to meet residents of this vicinity and give them all the information and assistance possible for old acquaintance sake. He is an enthusiastic bureau of information when it comes to a Hudson River Day Line trip.

Mr. Druce says in part:

We are now located in our new office building which is a much better place than the office of last year, it being especially constructed for a steamboat office. It is of Dutch architecture outside and in, waiting room with cement and tile floor with figures drawn on the squares, a Dutch fire place and mantle with a gas candlestick on each side. The sides and ceilings are finished in cypress, the ceiling with the joists bare. The boards of the walls extend up and down and are about eight inches wide, the cracks being covered with narrow battens. The wider boards are stained red and the battens, mantle and widow and door casings stained brown. The grain of the wood is brought out beautifully. The ceiling is simply oiled and varnished. The working and ticket office is about 16x20 feet and very conveniently arranged for our work. There are two ticket windows for rush days and when they get too thick at my window Mr. Elmendorf will take the other. The walls are ceiled and finished with a green stain which makes it a very pleasant color, and I especially feel right in my correct environment. It is the Day Line property color. Back of the working office is Mr. Elmendorf's private office. On the second story are two rooms fitted with cots, one for each boat's extra men to sleep in. There are also a large wash room, shower bath and store room on this same floor. The third floor is the attic "catch all."

The chairs for the waiting room have not come as yet but they are to be of some Dutch pattern. The room is lighted with a large Dutch lantern fitted with electric bulbs, as is also the main door-way outside. The windows are of two sashes and open like doors and consist of twelve panes each, 6x6 inches. I forgot to say that in the back of the building is a large baggage room that is of easy access and will not necessitate lifting the trunks, for the platform is as high as a wagon and they can be just tipped in.

We have a system of electric bell signals, one from my ticket window and one from Mr. Elmendorf's desk. He uses his to call the stenographer or myself and I use mine when I am busy at the ticket window and want some one.

The building is finished on the outside in cement plaster over steel lath and the wood trimmings are stained brown.

This is a very poor description of the place but I write it to you just to give you some idea of the place. Am awfully busy and am not taking much pains with it, as you will probably see.

I finished school last Wednesday and began work Thursday a. m., so you see how much vacation I will have, for I shall work till after college opens next Fall and begin college the day after I get through work. Have heard from enough of my examinations to be a full-fledged Senior. I wish that I were out instead of just a Senior.

Have recovered from my attack of appendicitis, but the next attack out comes my appendix.

Am awfully busy, and have to get to work. We run a three-day excursion to Kingston Point, beginning tomorrow—75 cents round trip—and I will have to sell about 1500 tickets in the three days.

Sincerely yours,
ORLA A. DRUCE.

BASEBALL.

The baseball enthusiasts of Fulton are certainly a proud lot these days with Fulton at the head of the column and the team looking good enough to hold the pace which it has set and which the other teams seem to find impossible to strike. It was worth while to hear the Fulton fans greet the players on Saturday when they returned from Oswego with that team's scalp dangling from their belts and to the tune of two games the same day. And perhaps Oswego is not sore. Oh, no.

The Fulton hoodoo seems to have been in the name Empire State League. On May 30, the name was changed to Ontario League and since then Fulton has been showing her heels to the other teams. If the team continues to play winning ball until the end of the season and comes out the pennant winners, the lads should be tendered a financial ovation by our citizens and they should be urged to come again next season.

Fulton is always a philosophic loser and she is a cheerful winner.

Board of Fire and Police.

The regular meeting of the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners was held at the City Hall Monday night, at which time the resignations of Walter Leslie and Frank Potter were accepted. Ernest Van Valkenburg, who was previously a member of the department, was reinstated upon his own request and the clerk was directed to certify his name to the Board of Civil Service Commissioners. John Connelly was appointed to the Fire department and Bernard Wilcox was named as emergency man at the engine house. The salaries of the employes of the Fire and Police departments were ordered paid.

DAUGHTERS AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

Hold Annual Meeting and Elect Officers—Raising Funds for Monument—Will Observe Decoration Day.

The pleasant home of Mrs. W. M. Hinsdale on West First street was beautifully decorated with flags last Monday, the occasion being the annual meeting of Kayendatsyona Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. After the usual routine of business the recording secretary, treasurer, historian and registrar all gave their yearly reports which were very gratifying, showing the chapter to be in a flourishing condition. The chapter has raised the past year about fifty dollars toward the monument to the Revolutionary soldiers, which is to be erected in Mt. Adnah on the lot which the society donated to them for that purpose. Mrs. Hayden, an aunt of Mrs. Hinsdale, who is her guest and was present at this meeting, very kindly gave a dollar to be added to this fund.

The officers elected for the ensuing year were as follows:

Regent	Miss Jennie Osgood
1st Vice Regent	Mrs. W. M. Hinsdale
2nd Vice Regent	Mrs. F. E. Goodjon
Rec. Sec.	Mrs. C. E. Guile
Cor. Sec.	Miss Alice Schenck
Treasurer	Miss Adelaide Schenck
Registrar	Miss Helen Osborne
Historian	Mrs. John Harvie
Chaplain	Mrs. C. J. Bacon

The newly elected Regent, Miss Osgood, appointed Mrs. Eggleston, Mrs. Shattuck and Mrs. Barlow to act with the officers as the Local Board of Managers. The other committees appointed were:

Committee on Entertainment—Miss Blanche Hall, Mrs. Frank Foster, Miss Elizabeth Osgood.

Committee on Music—Mrs. John Shaver, Miss Hall.

Committee on Revolutionary Soldier's Graves—Mrs. Grant, Mrs. Harvie, Mrs. Hinsdale.

Committee on Programme—Mrs. A. P. Bradt, Miss Alice Schenck, Mrs. F. L. Sears.

Local Reporter, Mrs. C. E. Guile

After the business of the meeting had been transacted Mrs. Eggleston in her usual happy manner, presented through his mother, in behalf of the Chapter, a silver spoon to baby Oliver Dan Shattuck, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. V. W. Shattuck, he being the first child born to any member of Kayendatsyona Chapter. Mrs. Shattuck was much surprised and thanked the ladies in a neat little speech for their thoughtful kindness. Refreshments were then served after which the meeting was adjourned to meet the second Monday in October at the home of Miss Alice A. Schenck.

The chapter will observe their annual Memorial Day next Monday, June 8, by decorating the graves of deceased members and Revolutionary soldiers, who are buried in Mt. Adnah, meeting there at 4 o'clock p. m.

Post Office Assured.

President Roosevelt has fixed his signature to the Public Buildings Bill, which contains the item of a $10,000 appropriation for the purchase of a site for a new federal building in Fulton. This removes the last vestage of doubt as to the speedy consumation of Fulton's hopes.

PRIZE SPEAKING

Fulton High School Scholars Win Gold and Silver Medals At The Annual Contest.

The annual Prize Speaking of the Fulton High School was held on Monday evening in the Foster Theatre before an assemblage that taxed the standing room only of the theatre. The program presented was interesting and of such variety as to lend spice to the entertainment and prevent its becoming wearisome. Dr. Richard K. Piez of the Oswego Normal School was so impressed with the excellence of the renditions that in the designation of the prize takers he expressed the regret that only four prizes could be awarded, instead of eight, the number of the contestants.

Miss Grace S. Nealis secured the first prize awarded to the ladies by a clever rendition of Bulwer Lytton's Richelieu, Act IV., while Miss Merrell M. Wells's recital of "The Governor's Friend"—a clever sketch by Will Allen Dramgoole—won the second.

The fortunate young men were Mr. Harry Andrews, whose recitation "The World's Progress"—one of Henry Watterson's masterpieces—easily placed him in the fore front and secured first prize. "For Dear Old Yale" by James Langston, won for Mr. Clair Whitbeck the second prize.

The Webb orchestra furnished the usual excellent musical program.

The judges were Dr. Piez, Oswego Normal School; Professor Dull of Cazenovia Seminary and Professor Leonard of the Oneida High School.

The gold and silver medals won by the successful contestants will be presented to them Commencement evening.

Seeks Divorce.

Last week it was publicly announced that Mrs. Edward Jeremiah Hatch of New York city had instituted divorce proceedings against her husband. Mrs. Hatch was formerly Miss Mary Eleanor VanWagenen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Van Wagenen of this city, and about four years ago while a student in a fashionable boarding school in New York city, she met Mr. Hatch, who is a son of Justice Hatch, a hasty courtship and a spectacular elopement followed. The young couple were freely forgiven by both families and the future looked very rosy for a short time, then rumors of unhappiness on the part of the young wife were heard. About a year ago it was stated that divorce proceedings were to be commenced but neither side would admit the truth of the rumor until last week.

It is expected that Mrs. Hatch will return to her parents in this city.

A sale most extraordinary. HAVE YOU A BOY? If you are so fortunate, do not miss this sale of Boys' Sweaters Saturday. Not a one of them sold before that day, because we want you to see them first. There will be a whole window full of them Thursday and Friday.

THE PRICE? Well its only 24c each, and they're dandies for the money, too. The greatest bargain for Fulton boys this store has ever offered. They're made of fine quality Jersey with pearl buttons and collar and front of your choice, either blue or red trimming. They're big bargains at 50c, but we want 1000 Fulton boys to wear them at 24c each. It's a great advertisement for us, that's the reason we are going to offer them at such a ridiculously low price. Bring the boys with you on Saturday as early as possible, for we know there will be a grand rush early in the morning. The boy who gets one of these Sweaters will be as proud as George Washington was with his little hatchet. Don't forget the price either—just think, only 24c—and the place.

"Cooked" and "Well Cooked" Food

Good food and a good cook are not enough to produce a good meal. Much depends on the vessels in which the food is prepared. Unless these are scrupulously clean, there will be a disagreeable odor or a taste of tin or iron, not to mention the danger of ptomaine poisoning. Many stomach troubles and other ailments can be traced back to this source. These dangers are overcome by the use of our

SANITO COOKING UTENSILS

These are specially made to reproduce the old German cooking utensils so universally used abroad. SANITO ware has a special lining which cannot crack or scale off. This lining is absolutely acid proof, and the vessels are always sweet, clean and wholesome. SANITO ware should be used for all ordinary culinary purposes. It will prove particularly valuable in preparing food for the sick or for infants.

Our Offer A set of SANITO ware consists of 6 pieces—2 bake pans (1 & 2qts.), 2 cooking kettles (2 & 4 quarts) and a 2-piece roaster. We will ship the complete set upon receipt of $2.50 All charges prepaid east of the Mississippi. For points beyond we prepay charges to the river. Safe arrival guaranteed.

PURE DRINKING WATER

Problems To Be Solved in Supplying The "Twin Cities" With The Healthful Beverage.

[BY S. E. CHANDLER.]

Editor Times:

The water supply for the City of Minneapolis is taken from the Mississippi River, and, as a matter of course, is none too pure; in fact, it is not fit to drink until it has been boiled. Boiling it kills the disease germs, but does not purify it.

Drinking water is sold to those who wish to buy at five cents per gallon, delivered at your house in cases of four bottles, holding one gallon each.

The subject of pure water has been agitated by the Minneapolis papers and the City Council, off and on, for the last twenty years or more, but that is all that it has amounted to.

A few years ago Thomas Lowry, the street car magnate, gave the city a tract of land, situated on high ground, upon which a reservoir was constructed, containing several acres, into which the water was pumped from the river, with the understanding that it was to be filtered there before it was turned into the city mains. For some reason or another, the whole thing proved a failure, and now we get our water "straight."

At the last general election, a proposition was submitted to the voters to bond the city for a large sum (I don't recollect how much, but am under the impression that it was about a half million dollars), to build a filter plant, capable of handling all the water that was needed now, and for any increase in the city's growth for years to come.

The proposition was defeated by an overwhelming majority. Everything connected with improving the water system had been such a failure that the people had lost faith in "glittering generalities" and had quietly and silently "sat down" on the scheme.

As a rule, if the voters once get a "whack" at a proposition to experiment with the people's money, you can bank on their putting a quietus on it.

At a meeting of the water works committee of the City Council a few years ago, the subject of a pure water supply was under discussion. One member of the committee suggested that St. Paul and Minneapolis club together and build an aquaduct from Lake Superior to the Twin Cities. "And then the water problem would be solved for one and all," said he. The rest of the committee thought that would be a good thing, and were tumbling over each other to get onto the Lake Superior pure water wagon.

Mr. Andrew Rinker, the city engineer, was in the room while the matter was being discussed, and one of the members of the committee turned to Mr. Rinker and asked his opinion of the plan.

"How do you propose to get water from the lake to our reservoir?" he asked.

"Why, through a concrete pipe or something of that sort."

"Yes, but how will you get the water to flow to the reservoir through your pipe."

"I don't know, only to just let it run the same as water runs anywhere down hill," said the committeeman.

"Oh, that's your idea, is it?" said Mr. Rinker. "I guess you are not aware that the Mississippi River under the steel arch bridge in Minneapolis is eighty-nine feet higher than the level of Lake Superior at Duluth, or any other point on the lake. If you undertake to bring the water here it will have to be raised at least two hundred feet to reach our reservoir.

Lake Superior is 702 feet higher than the sea. There is a fall of 22 feet though the Saint Mary ("Soo") river to reach the level of Huron and Michigan, the two latter being 680 feet above the sea. From Huron to Erie there is a fall of 67 feet, Erie being 613 feet above sea level; and from Erie to Ontario there is a fall of 366 feet, which brings the latter to 247 feet above sea level.

The Mississippi River under the steel arch bridge in this city, just above the falls of St. Anthony, is 791 feet above the level of the Gulf of Mexico.

The Red River of the North, which has its source in Minnesota, and is the dividing line between this state and North Dakota, is 767 feet above sea level, at the boundary line between the United States and Manitoba."

S. E. CHANDLER.

Cerebral Embolism.

Cerebral embolism, or the occlusion or plugging of an artery in the brain, causes sudden death. Growths or vegetations form on the valves of the heart. While attached they are harmless, but the instant one, large or small, becomes loosened and enters the rapid arterial current a very perilous condition obtains. The embolus, or plug, enters a vessel that becomes narrower and narrower and at last it is arrested and occludes or plugs the artery, thereby cutting off the blood supply. The force of the blood current back of the embolus keeps it at the seat of arrest. In brain cases the middle cerebral artery, at the base of the brain, is affected. Once lodged unconsciousness follows and soon death. Some of the symptoms resemble those of a true cerebral hemorrhage or apoplexy.—New York Herald.

A Quaint English Ceremony.

On the last day of each October the city solicitor of London, with an assistant, attends upon the royal remembrancer, when by proclamation "the tenants and occupiers of a piece of waste ground called the moors, in the county of Salop," are commanded to "come forth and do your service upon pain and peril that shall fall thereon." The solicitor chops in halves two faggots, one with a hatchet and the other with a billhook. Afterward comes the summons to the tenants, etc., of "a certain tenement with a forge" in the Strand and the payment of six horseshoes, with sixty-one shoe nails, by the solicitor. This forge has long ceased to be, and the same shoes and nails are used year after year, the shoes being at least two centuries old.

Didn't Give Him a Chance.

"Say, ma," piped up little Johnny after the minister had finished his call and taken his departure, "when Mr. Meeker was here every time you stopped talkin' a minute he would start in to say somethin' an' git as fur every time as 'I dare say,' an' then you would start goin' ag'in an' talk a lot more, an' that is the way it kept on right along, an' the only thing he said all the time he was here was 'I dare say,' 'I dare say,' every few minutes."

"Well, what of it? I am not to blame for Mr. Meeker's paucity of ideas, am I?" demanded Johnny's mother, somewhat impatiently.

"I dunno 'bout that," said Johnny doubtfully, as if not exactly sure what was meant by paucity of ideas, "but anyhow, ma, you orter give him a chanst. When he started in with 'I dare say,' why didn't you keep quiet jest once, ma, an' let him go ahead an' say what he was goin' to an' have it over with?"—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Wanted a Bargain.

One day a small Cincinnati boy came to a halt before a sign over a desk in the office of the express company. It gave the rate for money orders, and after studying it for a few minutes he walked up to the cashier and said boldly:

"I want a money order."

"How large a one, my boy?" the clerk inquired benignantly.

"Well, let's see," pondered the little fellow. "The rate for a ten dollar order is 8 cents, isn't it?"

"Yes; that's right."

"Well, I want a drum and pair of roller skates and a new straw hat and some candy. Ten dollars will be enough."

Then he fished through his pockets and triumphantly placed a nickel and three coppers before the astonished clerk. It took ten minutes to convince the youngster that nothing less than $10.08 could buy a money order for $10.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Banker's Generosity.

One day Humboldt was dining with Mendelssohn, the banker, and, an unusual thing for him, was very silent. His host, remarking it, observed to Humboldt that he was sure he must be ill.

"No," said Humboldt, "but I am in great trouble. Only ten minutes before leaving my apartment to come here I received from my landlord a note informing me that he had sold the house in which I reside and that I must move. The very thought drives me to despair. I really cannot bear to move again."

Mendelssohn gradually led Humboldt into conversation, during which he found time to write a note and receive an answer to it. He then took Humboldt aside and said: "By this note I learn that I am now the owner of the house in which you reside. The condition, however, upon which I have become its possessor is that you continue to occupy your apartment in it as long as you live."

The Wrestler's Pride.

In olden times a wrestler who had won a belt used to go to his village church on the following Sunday wearing the belt. On the Sunday following that he went to some neighboring church in his belt and claimed precedence over the other young fellows. Nearly all the champions were men great in girth and weight. Old Steadman, accounted by many the most powerful wrestler ever known, was twenty stone weight. — Manchester Guardian.

Sign Language on the Curb.

Any one would imagine all the curb brokers in Broad street were mutes. They use the sign language down there now to convey quotations and sales to their office boys and clerks who sit in the windows of the offices to catch the quotations. As a matter of fact, some of the brokers use the deaf and dumb alphabet; others use a distinct signaling code of their own, known only to the one single house and its representative. Even this, however, has to be changed now and then. The brokers possess a nimble wit, and they soon learn the secret signs of their competitors.—New York Commercial Bulletin.

THE OLD FASHIONED WAY OF BANKING has been ours for twenty years. No matter what others may do we do not change. The old fashioned way of doing things in banking has always proven to be the best. The old time friendships, the old home, the old memories and the things we love, and the old fashioned bank we never can forget. Some folks change their ideas or methods from the old to the new once in a while, but somehow after a time they wander back to the old home where they feel acquainted, where the hand clasp is firm, the look from the eye is straight, and they feel secure. In these days of speculation and extravagance, of storm and stress, it behooves every man and woman to stop and think. Saving is but a habit, acquire it, and teach it to your children and your friends.

Captain Passow of the St. Paul—Secretary William H. Taft's Eldest Son Robert.

CAPTAIN PASSOW.

THE sinking of the cruiser Gladiator by the American liner St. Paul is a severe blow to the British navy, coming so soon after the loss of the torpedo boat destroyer Tiger, which was sunk on April 3 off the Isle of Wight by the cruiser Berwick, thirty-six men being drowned. About the same number of lives were lost in the collision between the St. Paul and the Gladiator, and had it not been for the coolness of the St. Paul's captain, F. M. Passow, the collision might have involved loss of life among the passengers and crew of the liner as well as on board the cruiser. Captain Passow was on the bridge at the time of the collision and, with the special pilot, was keeping close watch ahead, but the snow was falling so thickly it was impossible to see far in the distance. It was the first serious mishap that ever occurred to a vessel under the command of Captain Passow. A passenger on board the St. Paul said:

"The discipline on the Gladiator was magnificent. We could see every man at his post. There was no excitement on either ship. One would have thought it was a moving picture instead of a real disaster. It was lucky that the collision happened so close to land. That very fact gave the seamen and the passengers more confidence."

The prominence of Secretary William H. Taft as a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination gives interest to the subject of the personal characteristics of the members of his family. The secretary is quite proud of the achievements of his eldest son, Robert, who is now a sophomore at Yale, the institution which all the Tafts have attended from time immemorial. Robert is nineteen and gives promise of making fame in the legal profession, which was chosen by his father and in which his grandfather, who was attorney general of the United States under President Grant, made his mark. Robert won two entrance prizes when he went to Yale for his first examinations and has thus far made a fine record in scholarship. He is popular among the students, as his father was before him.

ROBERT TAFT.

A book recently issued in England contains some good stories about various people, one being an anecdote of Bishop Wilberforce. The noted bishop is quoted as telling one anecdote as follows:

"At dinner I sat next a very worthy elderly man of the name of Polycarp, who in a very touching manner was recounting to me the many blessings which he had received in the course of a life prolonged beyond the usual limits. It appeared that he considered the chief of his blessings to be that he had had twenty-three children. And while I was trying to find words to express my opinion that some people might regard that as a not unmixed blessing a black eyed lady, whom I had observed to be listening with much attention to our conversation, leaned across the table and said with remarkable distinctness, 'Only sixtee were mine, Mr. Polycarp.'"

The Rev. Charles W. Gordon, who was one of the evangelists of the Chapman-Alexander mission in Philadelphia, is known in the literary world as Ralph Connor. His father, a minister before him, settled in Canada in the early forties and made his home in the highland settlement of Glengarry, on the Indian lands of the eastern peninsula of Ontario. His mother was the daughter of a Scotch Presbyterian who settled in New England in the early days. At twenty years of age she taught philosophy at Mount Holyoke and at twenty-two declined the position of principal of the school. Instead she married the young minister and went to live in the backwoods of Canada.

REV. C. W. GORDON.

The author was born in the highland settlement in the midst of the forest in 1860. He was graduated from Toronto university and studied theology at Knox college. Then he went to Edinburgh for a postgraduate course. Every dollar that paid for his education he earned himself, and until he was old enough to teach school he worked in the wheatfields. At college he played on the football team, and he has always been athletic and fond of outdoor life, as may easily be judged from his books. He has lived among the Indians of Canada and sometimes has scarcely seen a palefface for months at a time. His mother used to ride horseback eighteen miles every week, carrying her babies with her, to teach a Bible class and hold women's meetings. Mr. Gordon is now pastor of a church in Winnipeg, but he, too, has seen service in wild parts of British North America. It was in connection with his work for miners, ranchers and lumbermen that he chanced to go into literature. Having appealed in their behalf to a missionary society with scant success, a Toronto editor suggested that Mr. Gordon write for his paper a story that should be in effect an appeal for funds. So he wrote what are now the early chapters of "Black Rock," his first book. He wired the editor to use the name "Connor," combining the first syllables of Canadian and northwest. The telegraph operator wrote it out "Connor," and the editor prefixed the "Ralph" for the sake of euphony. "Rather Irish for me," remarked the author, "but I guess I can stand it." His best known stories since "Black Rock" are "The Sky Pilot," "The Man From Glengarry" and his latest, "Glengarry School Days."

Herbert L. Bridgman and His Mission. Other People Recently In Print.

Lincoln Steffens, who recently retired as one of the editors of the American Magazine to devote himself to writing books, was talking one day about a Pittsburg contractor who thrives more through political influence than through business ability.

"I heard something about this man the other day," he said, "that may or may not be true. If it isn't true, it should be, for it is certainly appropriate.

"A young man called on the contractor and asked for a job.

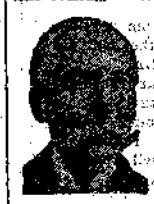
"The contractor wouldn't give him a job, for he had voted the wrong way at the last election. He read him a lecture, though, on his poor success—told him it was a shame, at his age, to be out of work, and so forth—and then wound up impressively:

"'My boy, the door to every successful business is labeled "Push."'

"The young man assumed a puzzled look.

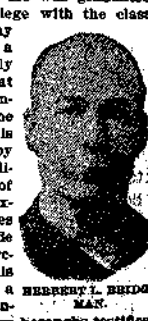
"'But your business is successful, isn't it?' he said.

"'Yes, fairly so,' said the contractor. 'Why do you ask?'



"'Because,' said the young man, 'I noticed that your door is labeled "Pull."'"

LINCOLN STEFFENS.



Mr. Steffens is forty-two years of age and a native of San Francisco. He studied at the University of California and at several European universities and entered literature through the door of journalism, having been connected with several leading newspapers.

Alfred Austin, the English poet laureate, has completed a volume to be called "Sacred and Profane Love," the title coming, of course, from the Villa Borghese Titian. From the accounts of it Mr. Austin's idea is nearly as much a mystery as that of the picture. It is an allegory, "distinct from any hitherto ascribed to the picture, contrasting, as it does, worldly ambition with spiritual aspiration, the political career in its lowest aspect with the literary career in its highest." A "northern youth in meditative mood" lies "pondering records of the Roman past," when two shapes appear to him, one promising him the fulfillment of his wildest dreams of earthly greatness, the other offering the nobility of mind and joy of heart that belong to the poet. Which shall he choose?

ALFRED AUSTIN.

Herbert L. Bridgman of New York, who has been named at Washington as the American delegate to the international polar congress at Brussels, has been almost a lifelong friend of Robert E. Peary. He was graduated from Amherst college with the class of '98 and for many years has been a publisher. It is only in recent years that he has thought enviously about the north pole, for he is not an explorer by training. He has directed several of the Peary relief expeditions. He likes the comfortable side of life between arctic trips, as his membership in a dozen clubs in Manhattan and Brooklyn boroughs testifies. Mr. Bridgman is a man of athletic physique. It has been prophesied that if Peary ever does find the pole Bridgman will be the first man to find Peary, which is the next best thing to do in such an event.

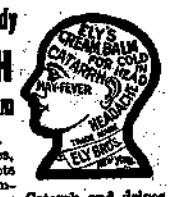
The Safest Way.

"My friends dragged me into this wretched affair," shiveringly said the first duelist to his adversary as the seconds approached with the deadly weapons. "I never pulled the trigger of a pistol in my life, so if I hit you it will be an accident."

"Nor is this awful duel to my liking," whined the challenger, white to the gills. "Like you, a pistol is a strange article to my hands, and if I shoot you it will be with a stray shot."



"Then, for heaven's sake," exclaimed the first duelist, with a ray of hope, "let's aim carefully at each other or one of us may get hit!"—Kansas City Newsbook.

Nature has provided the stomach with certain natural fluids known as the digestive juices, and it is through these juices that the food we eat is acted upon in such a way as to produce the rich, red blood that flows through the veins of our body and thereby makes us strong, healthy and robust, and it is the weakening of these digestive juices that destroys health. It is our own fault if we destroy our own health, and yet it is so easy for any one to put the stomach out of order. When you need to take something take it promptly, but take something you know is reliable—something like Kodol for Dyspepsia and Indigestion. Kodol is pleasant to take; it is reliable and is guaranteed to give relief. It is sold by all druggists.

Woman's Home Companion for June.

Five hundred photographs of President Roosevelt, all assembled in one big double-page picture, 13 by 19 1-2 inches in size, is an extraordinary feature of the June Woman's Home Campanion. The five hundred photographs were taken in almost every state in the Union, at all periods of Roosevelt's public career, and show his wonderful versatility and energy.

In the June Companion appear the first chapters of Harvey J. O'Higgins great story, "A Grand Army Man," based on Belasco's famous play of the same name, in which David Warfield starred all last winter. Other fiction in this delightful summer magazine is by Elizbeth Stewart Phelps, Zona Gale, Charlotte Perkins Gilman, Temple Bailey and Clinton Dangerfield.

An Outsider.

He Was Too Smart.

He was the only man at the table full of lovely girls, and, like all only men, he was spoiled. So when the belle of the table remarked that she was very fond of pepper and then sifted half the contents of the pepper box over her food he sprang an old gag on her.

"It won't hurt you. This pepper is half peas."

"What is that you say?" asked the landlady from the next table. "Speak a little louder, please."

He reiterated his remark.

"That isn't true," retorted the landlady hotly. "I do not use adulterated goods on my table."

"My dear madam," said the bland joker, "there are always a lot of p's in pepper."

There was an impressive pause. Then the landlady said in a crushing voice:

"Oh, yes, just as you always furnish part of the dessert."

"I don't understand."

A National Trait.

A traveler returned from Jaffa tells this tale at his own expense. Having journeyed to the historical seaport on his way to Jerusalem, he succeeded in hiring a conveyance to carry him to the station. By speech and gesture he informed the native driver that he wished to be carried in a leisurely, sightseeing fashion through as many as possible of the principal thoroughfares of Jaffa and to be delivered at the terminal just in time to take the outgoing train.

He had no sooner seated himself in the vehicle, however, than the driver whipped up his horse and whirled the dismayed traveler at a furious pace through all the dust and over all the stones of the notoriously rough streets of Jaffa. The passenger was too busily employed in saving his bones to be able to see anything of the interesting town.

Arriving at the station, he found that he still had two hours to wait.

"Why in the world," he demanded indignantly, "did you ever hurry like that?"

"You American," responded the driver, with an expressive shrug. "All American like go very much fast."—Youth's Companion.

Did She Keep Her Temper?

Mr. Bliss is a very hasty tempered man, but he is also one who keeps his promises to the very letter. Therefore Mrs. B. has trained him to believe that second thoughts are best and even in a moment of his weakness extracted from him a promise always to count twenty before he speaks if he feels rage coming upon him. Last Sunday he rushed into the back drawing room spluttering with fury and red in the face. Mrs. Bliss rose and laid a gentle hand on his stammering lips.

"M-mary, I—I—I"—

"Hush, dear," said the sweet woman. "Count twenty and conquer yourself, and I shall be more proud of you than if you had conquered the world."

"Eighteen, nineteen, twenty"—

"Now tell me, dear."

"It's that new hat of yours that you paid 6 guineas for, and the new servant's gone out in, and it's raining hard—that's all."—London Express.

Not Worth Stealing.

A certain dramatic author was seen by a friend to have a manuscript almost falling from his pocket. "If you were not so well known you would have had your pocket picked," said the friend.

Not All Gone.

A Confederate soldier whose command had run two days from Nashville had thrown away his gun and accouterments and, alone in the woods, sat down and commenced thinking, the first chance he had had to do such a thing. Rolling up his sleeves and looking at his arms and general physique, he thus gave vent to his feelings: "I am whipped, badly whipped and somewhat demoralized, but no one can say I am scattered."

He Was a Mark For the Sharpshooters.

Isaac Harring, who served throughout the civil war and who was a conspicuous mark for the bullets of sharpshooters because of his great height, died at Gladstone, Mich., Dec. 27 last. He was eight feet high, the tallest man in the upper peninsula of Michigan.

Dogs of Luxury.

The appearance of little dogs as objects of luxury goes back to the most ancient times. Documents are not wanting that go to show that Greek and Roman women had little dogs which were idolized by their mistresses. Even men, particularly among foreigners, were not ashamed to walk the streets of Rome with pet dogs under their arms. Speaking of this subject, Plutarch relates that Julius Caesar, seeing one day in Rome some strangers thus loaded with their dogs, asked them ironically whether the women of their country did not bear children. Tertia, the daughter of Lucius Aurelius Paulus, was so fond of her dog that in the moment of bidding farewell to her father, who was about to leave his country and his family to wage war against Perseus, king of Macedonia, she frankly admitted that the sadness imprinted on her face was due to the death of her pet dog Persa. In Europe the greyhounds were the first favorites of women during the middle ages.—Boston Post.

Too Much of a Good Thing.

George Marshall, a philanthropist who always kept a sharp lookout never to be wasteful, decided to go for a week's camping, taking as his guests some ragged street urchins. One morning he used the bits of meat left from the evening before and made hash for breakfast. There was some left over, which he concluded to reheat and serve again at noon.

"Johnnie, will you have some hash?" he asked one lad.

"Bet your life," replied the lad, who was constitutionally hungry.

"Peter, pass your plate for some hash"—to another freckled nosed lad.

"Not if I knows it," was the unexpected reply.

"I thought you liked hash from the way you ate it this morning," replied Mr. Marshall.

"I did like it for breakfast," said the lad, "but none of yer review of reviews for me for dinner."—Lippincott's Magazine.

A Lesson in Thrift.

A lesson in thrift is found in the advice given by Congressman John H. Andrus to a young man for whom he had secured a minor appointment in the capitol at Washington. Meeting the young fellow in the capitol, he placed a hand on his shoulder and remarked:

"William, you are just beginning your life. Let me give you a bit of sound advice: When you leave your boarding house in the morning never take more than 30 cents in your pockets, enough perhaps for your luncheon and for car fare. You will then not be tempted to spend more than you can afford."—Yonkers Statesman.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 3, 1908

THE friends of the Secretary of the Treasury, George Bruce Cortelyou are making an active canvass to ascertain the sentiment toward him as a candidate for the Vice Presidential nomination on the Republican ticket. Secretary Cortelyou stands high with labor leaders, having risen by his own efforts and merits from a comparatively humble place in the goverment service to one of exceptional honor and he enjoys an unsullied record as a public man. He represents, also, both elements in the party, having been the friend of Hanna and McKinley and an appointee of Roosevelt. Secretary Cortelyou has not aligned himself with any faction in his State, New York, but is popular with all. Representative Sherman is also mentioned as a New Yorker of Vice Presidential proportions, and while his friends have not made much advance thus far with their campaign in his behalf, they point to the highly creditable record of Mr. Sherman in the House, his geniality and personal popularity. Mr. Sherman's work on the Congressional Campaign Committee has won for him the high regard and loyal support of all Republican members of Congress.

In a current magazine Speaker Cannon has an article on, "How a bill becomes a law." The general public would be much more interested in an article on Why bills do not become laws. Speaker Cannon could furnish more information on this subject perhaps, than any other one man.

This session of Congress has broken all records in the number of bills introduced, the total being 29,125. Thirty-eight treaties have been ratified and made public, more than had been ratified during the twenty-years preceding.

If it's belts, soft shirts, collars, ties, handkerchiefs, fancy socks you are needing, call at the McKinstry shop, Oneida street, and find what a lot you can buy with that spare change.

DIED.

Mrs. Anna Switzer, aged 77, died on Sunday at her home in Emory street.

Ada Adell Holden, aged 21, died on Saturday at her parent's home in Beech street. The funeral services were held on Tuesday, the Rev. F. A. Miller officiating.

The death of Mary Francis, wife of Mr. Fred LaPorte, occurred at the family home in Plainfield, N. J., last week. The deceased was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bogue of this city and is survived by her husband, her parents, two sons, two daughters, three brothers, Henry, James and William of this city, and two sisters, Miss Winifred Bogue of New York and Mrs. Anna Hotchkiss of Buffalo.

The death of Pearl, aged 21, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cramer, occurred at their home on the West side on Sunday, consumption being the cause for death. The funeral services will be held this Wednesday afternoon from the late home, the Rev. Charles Olmsted officiating and interment will be made in Chase cemetery. Beside the parents, two brothers, Will and Glenn, and two sisters survive.

Mary Cameron, aged 90, died on Saturday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Nellie McIntosh, after a residence of 36 years in this city. The funeral was held from the late home on Tuesday afternoon, the Rev. J. G. York officiating. The deceased is survived by one son, John, of this city and four daughters, Mrs. McIntosh at whose home she died, Mrs. Mary Poor of North Adams, Mass., Mrs. Ingrain, Rochester, and Mrs. Morrison of Paris, Cal.

Donnell W. Hall, aged 73, passed to rest on Friday at his daughter's home in Granby. The funeral services were held on Sunday from the home of his daughter, Mrs. W. J. Furniss in this city and interment was made at Riverside, Oswego. The deceased is survived by four daughters, Mrs C. H. Lockwood of Oswego, Mrs A. B. Hibbard of Granby, Mrs. Thomas Feeley and Mrs. William Furness of Fulton; and five sons, Dean of Madison county, Ward and Warren of Binghamton, Martin of California and Marston of this city.

On Friday at her home in Lamsons occurred the death of Mrs. Ellen Harrington, aged 68. The deceased is survived by eight daughters, Mrs. Mary Forrest and Mrs. Dennis McDonald of Baldwinsville, Mrs. Daniel Quinn of Syracuse, Mrs. Hannah Kirby of Phoenix, Mrs. James Cole and Mrs. Elmer Hare of Fulton, Miss Alice Harrington of New York and Mrs. Margaret Harrington of Lamsons, and two sons, Daniel Harrington of Cleveland, O., and John Harrington of Lamsons. The funeral services were held on Monday from St. Stephens Catholic church in Phoenix and interment was made at Baldwinsville.

Sudden Death.

On Tuesday morning Edward Hoyt, for several years employed by J. C. O'Brien as deliveryman and for the past six months serving in the same capacity for H. P. Allen, was stricken with death in a stote in Oneida street. So far as was known he was enjoying his usual good health until he became unconscious. Dr. Bacon was hurridly called to his side but he was dead before he reached him. Coroner Marsh viewed the remains and heart disease was given as the cause for death. The deceased is survived by his widow, one daughter, Nellie and three sons, John of this city and Gilbert and Norris of Syracuse.

Hoyle.

Hoyle was not really the inventor of whist, although often so stated to be, but he was the first who introduced scientific whist to the public. A recent authority says that very little is known of Hoyle's personal history except that he was a barrister by profession and held the post of registrar of the prerogative in Ireland. He was born in 1670 and died in Cavendish square in 1767 at the advanced age of ninety-seven years. He received the sum of £1,000 from his publisher for his treatise on whist, which ran through five editions in one year and was extensively pirated. Hoyle is said to have given lessons in whist at a guinea a lesson. One of his great points was the calculation of probabilities at various stages of the rubber. This at first was deemed so important in guiding players that a famous mathematician used to frequent the coffee houses (the old substitute for the modern clubs) and give his opinion on the state of the odds at any stage in a game of whist in return for a small fee from the players.—Glasgow Times.

Crossing the Ocean.

The following bits of conversation may be heard several thousand times each day:

"I think those people down in the steerage have a much better time than we do. But don't they look just like so many animals?"

"Don't those clouds over there look just like land?"

"Somebody said we aren't far from an iceberg, but I don't know whether it's so or not. You hear so many false reports on shipboard."

"Have you met the captain yet? I hope you didn't ask him any foolish questions, poor man!"

"No; I haven't seen a whale yet, but there were lots of porpoises around the ship today."

"Who is that man? I haven't seen him before. He must have come on board during the night." (Always funny.)

"Did the postman bring you anything this morning?" (Sure of a howl.)

"Is this your first trip to Europe? My, but you have a treat in store!"—Princeton Tiger.

As Arranged For Older Children.

Miss Mary was the possessor of a diminutive and immature specimen of the Ovis aires, a wool bearing and ruminant quadruped, whose flesh is highly esteemed by persons to whose gustatory organs its flavor is agreeable.

The shaggy and agglomerated filaments constituting in their collective capacity its natural outer covering, integument or garment presented to the vision a surface absolutely etiolated and albified and rivaling in immaculateness the lustrous mantle of crystallized vapor that commonly characterizes the winter landscape.

And to whatsoever locality, contiguous or remote, whither Mary's vagrant fancy, the call of duty or, perchance, the parental mandate impelled her, when not otherwise engaged, to betake herself, this juvenescent representative of the genus Ovis aires, with a fidelity remarkable in one so immature and inexperienced, could be counted upon with absolute and entire certainty to accompany her.—Chicago Tribune.

Fortune For Forgers.

The last person to suffer death for forgery in London was a Thomas Maynard, who was executed on Dec. 31, 1829. It was not, however, until 1832 that the death penalty for the crime was replaced by transportation, though even then an exception was made in the case of forging or altering a will. This exception was not removed from the statute book until 1837. In the days of good Queen Bess a forger of deeds was very severely dealt with. He had to stand in the pillory; his ears were cut off, his nose slit, and he was branded with hot irons. If he survived these ordeals he was doomed to imprisonment for the rest of his days, and everything he possessed in the world was forfeited to the crown. Surely death would have been far more merciful.

Waifs Who Became Famous.

The list of waifs who have become famous, says the Delineator, is a long one. It includes Sir Henry Stanley; Queen Catherine the Good, Alexander Hamilton, Rosa Bonheur, Edgar Allan Poe, Rachel, Leonardo da Vinci and dates back as far as Moses. All these were homeless children—children who if left to their fate would undoubtedly have drifted into evil ways. Instead they have lived to add glory to their names and have contributed to the knowledge of the world at large through the fruits of their genius.

Smartness.

Do not be "smart." Whenever you see any of your mates showing signs of "smartness" in his work, his talk or his play take him by the hand, or both hands, or by the back of the neck, if necessary, and lovingly, playfully, but firmly, lead him to a knowledge of higher and more interesting things. In these words of Mr. Kipling is presented the gospel of real life, of common sense and of universal experience.—New York Outlook.

Disease and Remedies.

It is almost a truism among physicians that the intractability of a disease may be measured by the number of "infallible" remedies for it which from time to time have been recommended.—London Times.

Sociologist Defined.

"Uncle Henry, what is a sociologist?"

"A sociologist, my boy, is a person who can inspect a garbage can and find enough material in it for a long lecture on the needs of society."—Chicago Tribune.

Cornell, and Miss Mayme Pomphret, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Pumphret, will be united in marriage by the Rev. J. L. Lindsman. After a brief bridal trip the young couple will be "at home" to their friends at their residence on South Third street.

On Sunday, as B. Smith was endeavoring to turn a two-horse team around on the bridge near the electric light station, he backed the wagon from the bridge, the weight pulling both horses into the hydraulic canal above the head-gates. Mr. Smith saved his own life by jumping. Both horses were drowned, their bodies being recovered later in the day. The team had been used to draw sand for use in barge canal work, and its loss, which is placed at $250, falls very heavily upon Mr. Smith.

Ralph, the 14-year old son of Druggist Briggs certainly deserves the medal for bravery in his thrilling rescue of 7-year old Russel Murphy from drowning last week. The boy is from New York city and is visiting his grandmother, Mrs. Patrick Murphy. He fell from the bank of the canal into the water and was sinking for the third time when young Briggs saw his peril and sprang after him, bringing him to the surface and safely to land with most heroic effort. The Murphy boy was rolled over a barrel until he revived.

Among the students who will graduate from the Oswego Normal school in June will be Miss Zita Dwyer of this city.

The receipts of the County Clerk's office for May were $782.13, about the usual amount for that period.

The Oswego High School Independents on Friday defeated the Holy Name baseball team of this city by a score of 26 to 6.

Fulton's team in the Empire League spelled defeat but Fulton's team in the Ontario League spells victory. It's a good one.

On Friday the members of Elizabeth Chapter, O. E. S., went to Mt. Adnah and decorated the graves of deceased sisters.

The predicted May cold spell struck this section on Sunday and overcoats, flannels, and furnace fires were the comfortable order of the day again.

Oswego Pomona Grange will meet Tuesday, June 9, with Phoenix Grange. There will be three sessions, morning, afternoon and evening. The 5th degree will be conferred in full.

Mr. E. R. Redhead has returned from Baltimore, Md., where he was a delegate to the Methodist General Conference, the session lasting through the month of May.

This Wednesday afternoon the Baldwinsville High school base ball team will play the local High school team on the League grounds. The game will be called at 4 o'clock. Admission 15 cents.

The deed transferring the farm of Mary E. Hackett in Volney to F. A. Emerick, of Oswego city, over which there has been a long litigation, was executed yesterday. The farm contains seventy-one acres and the price paid was $3,000.

The Watertown Times says that the Republican Senatorial Convention for the Thirty-fifth district and the Congressional Convention of the Twenty-eighth district will not be held until well along in July. Both conventions will be held at Watertown.

Superintendent John W. Stevenson of the American Woolen mill, has beautified the property adjacent to the new mill by the arranging of a park through which cement walks will lead to a fountain in the center. A terrace has been raised and upon it in white letters is written "American Woolen Company of New York."

Attorney and Mrs. Charles Henry David have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Charlotte Elizabeth David and the Rev. Alexander Haswell Grant, rector of Zion Episcopal church. The event will take place in Zion church on Thursday morning, June eighteen at eleven o'clock. The Rev. Warren C. Hubbard of Brooklyn, will be the officiating clergyman.

The Misses Morton and Messrs John and James Morton attended the wedding of Prof. H Morton Adkins and Miss Ida Florence Hubbard, the event being solemnized on Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock in Syracuse. Prof. and Mrs. Adkins will reside on West Onondaga street, Syracuse. The groom is well known in this city where he has been a frequent guest and his magnificent voice has been heard with pleasure. He is a professor of music in Syracuse University. The bride is one of the most popular of the young society ladies in Syracuse.

On Saturday some creature too contemptable to belong under the classification of sex, poisoned the beautiful blooded dog belonging to Manager Fred Rudd of the Union Pacific Tea store. The dog was unusually intelligent, was not at all vicious and was a great pet with the family, Mr. Rudd having frequently refused offers of $50 for it. The veterinarians called to minister to the several valuable dogs poisoned this Spring have agreed that strychnine in large doses has caused the deaths. Any one who would perpetrate such a dastardly outrage would hardly hesitate to pick a pocket, fire a building or even connive at the death of a real or imaginary enemy. The authorities should make a rigid investigation of the poisoning of valuable animals and make an example of the culprit, if possible.

It is five miles long and five miles wide and the two contending armies wrestled for victory for three days or more. D. M. Perine and Grove H. Dutton were in that wonderful struggle. The latter will give an account of it in his reminiscences.

The Rev. A. C. Danforth of Adams in his address on Decoration Day stated that the Civil War veterans were passing away at the rate of 5,000 a month. He said he was at Alexandria Bay a short time ago and coming across a veteran, said, "Well Jim, we shall not be here long. The boys are going at the rate of 5,000 per month." "Is that so. Well, Chaplain, I want to be in the last 5,000.

About two weeks ago Mr. Simon Coleman's bicycle was taken from the alleyway in the rear of H. P. Allen's store. The police were notified and a clue was followed until it led to the apprehension on Tuesday of Walter Murray and Clarence Perry, in the Primary department in State street school. The claim being that the bicycle was taken by the children and sold to a man for $2. The Murray boy refused to tell anything about the matter but the Perry boy, who was with the Murray boy at the time of the disappearance of the bicycle, told the story. The Perry boy was allowed to return to school but the Murray boy was locked up pending a further examination. The bicycle has not yet been found.

At the meeting of the Board of Public Works held on Monday evening it was decided to clean the streets at night. No complaints were heard as to the proposed sprinkling routes. It was decided to advertise for bids for paving Oneida street from South Second to the city line, Worth street from the end of the lower bridge to West Second and Hannibal streets from Second to the city line, also South First street from Broadway, the point where the electric railway is to enter the street. Broadway is to be paved with brick and a portion of the expense is to be borne by the railway company. The other streets are to be paved with macadam.

Timely and to the Point

Colonel John S. Mosby of Cavalry Fame—The Largest Clock In the Whole World.

Congressman Sabath's Anti-dowry Idea—Colonel William F. Stewart's Case—John K. Tener.

JOHN S. MOSBY.

COLONEL JOHN S. MOSBY, the famous Confederate cavalry leader who is now a member of the department of justice at Washington, was reminded of the strenuous days of his career as a warrior when he went under the surgeon's knife a short time ago in a Washington hospital. The operation caused anxiety among some of his friends in view of his age, seventy-four years. Others, more hopeful, recalled his experience of ten years ago. At that time he was thrown from a buggy at Charlottesville, Va., where he had gone to witness the performance of a play written by his son. His life was for a time despaired of, but when his former followers celebrated their annual reunion a few months later at the Eutaw House, in Baltimore, he sent them an encouraging message from San Francisco, where he had gone to practice law. It was on that occasion that a speaker who had served under General Stuart and had left the regular command to join Mosby's men spoke of the veteran as a daredevil who would "rank in history with men like Sumter, Pickens and Marion Hancock would not accept his sword in surrender, but would have treated him as an outlaw, but Grant recognized him as a soldier."

The Colgate clock in Jersey City, the largest in the world, which was started by the mayor of Jersey City with appropriate ceremonies on May 25, faces New York from the Jersey shore and is visible for many miles. It is a wonderful piece of mechanism, and its regulation involves some interesting problems. Heretofore the Westminster dials on the parliament buildings in London have held the record as to size abroad. They have diameters of twenty-two and a half feet and an area of 398 feet each. In this country the Philadelphia city hall clock has dials measuring twenty-five feet across, the area of each dial being 490 square feet. The Colgate clock has dials each of which is thirty-eight feet across, and the area of each is 1,134 feet. The minute hand is twenty feet long and with its counterpoise weighs nearly a third of a ton. The ponderous weight that moves the mechanism tips the scales at just a ton, and the whole clock weighs approximately six tons. Across the dial of the clock twenty men could stand shoulder to shoulder. The timepiece is lighted at night, and each hand is outlined with incandescent lamps. Brilliant red lights mark each numeral, and an incandescent lamp indicates each minute mark. The latter are twenty-four inches apart, and as the tip of the hour hand must travel two feet every minute it journeys about half a mile every day. The size of the hour hand may be gauged by comparing its height in the picture with the figure of a man at the right.

The Rev. John Long, pastor of the Parkside Presbyterian church, Brooklyn borough, New York city, is a pronounced advocate of socialism. A Christian socialist brotherhood is one of the features of his church, and he has inaugurated what he terms "a series of new style revival meetings." As to the question of his orthodoxy the Rev. Mr. Long recently said:

"Orthodoxy in the Presbyterian church is a theological term. It has nothing to do with sociology. As a Presbyterian minister I am free to preach any sociology I please short of plural marriage. As to the coming meetings, I wish to say that the Christian church in the times of the apostles cared little for creeds and less for ritual."

JOHN K. TENER.

John K. Tener, who has been nominated for congress by the Republicans of the Twenty-fourth Pennsylvania district to succeed Ernest F. Acheson, was famous twenty years ago as a National league baseball pitcher. He is now a millionaire banker of Charleroi, Pa., and is grand exalted ruler of the Elks of North America. In the late eighties Mr. Tener was a pitcher for the Pittsburg National team and later for that of Chicago, and when A. G. Spalding took the All American team on a trip around the world Tener went along as one of the pitchers. Later on he helped form the ill fated Brotherhood, and when it collapsed gave up baseball and, settling at Charleroi, made a fortune in coal lands.

It seems the resolution introduced in congress by Representative Sabath of Illinois proposing to put a tax on tithed foreigners coming over here for wives, or, rather, on the dowries they take out of the country, has created some alarm abroad, where the idea has been taken quite seriously by the press. It is expected that there will be hustling among the impoverished scions of princely houses and the inheritors of much incumbered dukedoms to get over here and pick out their wives before any such law takes effect. A London publication says:

The fact that during the past generation foreign noblemen who have married American women have caused $225,000,000 of American money to go out of the country has suggested the possibility to Mr. Adolph J. Sabath, a member of the United States congress, of introducing a bill imposing a tax of 25 per cent on all dowries, gifts, settlements or advances of money or property in consideration of marriages of citizens of the United States to foreigners. Mr. Sabath was born in Bohemia in 1866, and when he was fifteen he emigrated alone to the United States and settled in Chicago, where his total capital was less than $2.50. He obtained work as a watch boy in a merchant's establishment and after working hours attended the public night school. In 1887 he embarked in the real estate business and two years later commenced reading law. In 1892 he was admitted to the bar.

ADOLPH J. SABATH.

It is an unusual controversy that has arisen over the case of Colonel William F. Stewart, who was "banished" to Fort Grant, Ariz. The reason assigned for exiling the colonel to a desert fort was his alleged "contentiousness and impertinence" and his liability to get into quarrels and stir up trouble. He has found a champion in Senator Isidor Rayner of Maryland, who says that legal proceedings will be brought to compel the secretary of war to grant Colonel Stewart a court of inquiry under the articles of war. The senator declares he will follow the case up until President Roosevelt is forced to grant a court martial or until, dying in his "prison," Stewart, as a martyr, shall arouse the people of the country to take vengeance.

Colonel Stewart's retirement from the army was demanded by President Roosevelt on the ground that "his irritability made his continuance in the army impossible." On his refusing to retire he was sent to the post in Arizona called Fort Grant, a post where there is no command except a servant, a caretaker and a few government mules. Colonel Stewart was born in Rhode Island in 1849, entered the United States army in 1866 and graduated from the artillery school in 1871, since which time he has commanded artillery posts in different parts of the country.

An English Turf Tragedy.

Half an hour before the race for the Two Thousand Guineas of 1883 Prince Batthyany, who bred St. Simon and who was one of the most popular racing men of any time, was talking with Lord Cadogan in the luncheon room of the Jockey club stand at Newmarket, when he suddenly reeled and fell.

He was carried to Weatherby's office, and doctors were summoned, but the prince was beyond all human aid, and just before the bell rang for the race for which his colt, Galliard, brother of St. Simon, was first favorite he breathed his last.

A few minutes later "the clear blue sky rang with cheers and shouts as the horses came thundering along, which rose into a roar as Galliard won by a head," while behind the drawn blinds of Weatherby's office Galliard's owner, who had been looking forward so eagerly to this moment, was lying dead. It was owing to the death of his owner that Gulopin's great son could not run in the Derby of 1884, which he would almost certainly have won.—St. James' Gazette.

Curing Snake Bites.

Considerable difference of opinion exists with regard to a trustworthy remedy for snake bites. Dr. Lauder Brunton advocates the use of permanganate of potash applied immediately. Mr. Greengrass of North Arcot district, Madras, however, as the result of various experiments states that acetic acid, even in the diluted form of vinegar, is an important and effectual remedy, and it can be applied effectually as long as an hour or an hour and a half after the bite. Cases of recovery from snake bites have followed the application of vinegar after such intervals. An incision must be made over the bite, as much of the poison as possible squeezed out, and then vinegar is to be injected. If the bite is on a limb, a ligature must be placed above it. Mr. Greengrass records twenty-nine cases of recovery from cobra bites by such a use of vinegar. The one failure which occurred was due to the fact that no incision had been made over the bite. A similar treatment is recommended for the stings of scorpions.—London Standard.

Downing Street, London.

The greatest street in the world is one of the smallest. This is Downing street, a dark little alley in the west of London. Here is the real center of the British empire, for it is at 10 Downing street that the premier has his official residence. Ever since Robert Walpole was the prime minister, 200 years ago, the heads of the government have made their homes in this "alley." American tourists usually go out of their way to gaze upon the dingy, almost repellent exterior of this lodge of diplomacy and national ambition, because Sir George Downing, who laid out the street and built the house therein, was of American ancestry, his mother belonging to the Winthrops of Massachusetts Bay Colony, and stands as the second graduate on the roster of Harvard college. After getting an American education he went to England and, seizing opportunity when it offered, became Oliver Cromwell's ambassador at The Hague.—Exchange.

Feeding the Stock.

The victim of the following story, told in Mrs. Henry W. Cole's "A Lady's Tour Around Monte Rosa," was possessed of a keen sense of humor. Otherwise his dignity might have been ruffled by the unconscious revelation which came to his ears. In the course of Mrs. Cole's travels she met the Rev. Robert Montgomery, the poet, who told her an incident of his early career in the pulpit. When he was first admitted to holy orders he was appointed curate in a rural Scotch district and lodged in the house of a small tenant farmer. Notwithstanding his office of clergyman the family did not appear to hold their boarder in high veneration, for one day he heard the woman servant call out to her mistress:

"Missis, shall I feed the pigs first or gie the men his dinner?"

An Erratic Echo.

The late Sir John Leng had traveled in most quarters of the globe. On one occasion when visiting Spain he was asked at a certain spot by a traveling companion to test the powers of what was declared to be a wonderful echo. Sir John, slowly and deliberately, in rounded tones uttered the words, "Dun-dee Ad-ver-ti-ser," the name of the paper he owned. "Dundee Courier and Argus," the name of the opposition paper, came back as the echo! Sir John's friends had played him a trick.

Tea Drinking.

Tea drinking was regarded as one of the feminine vices of a hundred years ago. The Female Spectator of that period observes: "The tea table costs more to support than would maintain two children at nurse. It is the utter destruction of all economy, the bane of good housewifery and the source of idleness."—London Mail.

Vanishing France.

Old France is slowly disappearing, and its local customs, picturesque costumes and the language peculiar to its ancient provinces will very soon become nothing more than precious souvenirs preserved in faithful memories or related in works of tradition, which will charm our descendants.—Petit Parisien.

A Slight Difference.

What is the difference between a jeweler and a jailer? One sells watches and the other watches cells.

It takes two to make a quarrel, but some folks don't have much trouble finding the other one. Puck

A HAPPY MOTHER.

The Crown Princess Cecelie of Germany and Her Baby Boy.

The Crown Princess Cecelie of Germany is a happy mother, for she has presented her young and handsome husband, the future ruler of the German empire, Crown Prince William, with two sons. Prince Wilhelm, the eldest, and Prince Louis Ferdinand, who is now the baby of the family, make a pair of youngsters of whom any princely papa might be proud. The Germans, who love domesticity, are fond of their future ruler and his beautiful wife and appreciate the sincere devotion of each to the other, for there is no doubt of the deep affection existing between the noble couple. It was Tempting Fate.

"Dost hear that?" asked the fair maid mentioned by the Atlanta Journal. There was a sound of a heavy step.

"'Tis father. Fly, sweetheart, fly!"

"You mean flee," corrected the lover.

"As you like," said the maid, "but this is no time for entomological distinctions."

A LOVELORN PRINCE.

The Scion of French Nobility Who Wooed and Won Mme. Anna Gould.

Prince Helie de Sagan did not enjoy his recent visit to this country extremely because of the profuse attentions of the newspaper men and photographers. Nevertheless he seems to have succeeded in the main object of his trip, which was to secure the hand of Mme. Anna Gould, a daughter of the late Jay Gould and formerly the wife of Count Boni de Castellane. According to some authorities, the prince and Mme. Gould played a neat trick on the reporters and camera men by getting married secretly about midnight in Hoboken, N. J., just prior to their departure from America by separate steamers for their respective homes in France. It was a justice of the peace, according to this story, who tied the knot binding together a scion of the ancient French nobility and a daughter of the house of Gould. At any rate, as if to make assurance doubly sure, there is to be a wedding in France by a Protestant minister, a marriage by a Roman Catholic priest being out of the question because of Mme. Gould having secured a divorce from her former husband and remarriage in such a case not being permitted by the Roman Catholic church. June 14 has been set as the date of the civil and religious ceremonies, and it is said that the parties to the contract will each remain in absolute control of their respective fortunes.

Prince Helie de Sagan is famous as a duelist and as a swell. The accompanying portrait is from a snapshot, which gives a good idea of his jauntiness of appearance.

The Romance of Buried Pictures.

A romantic story of a picture purchased at a London auction which on expert examination proved to be painted over a Rembrandt worth £8,000 is curiously reminiscent of the discovery of a Correggio under similar circumstances. A good many years ago two picture restorers, Lovera and Hunterspergh, bought at an art sale in Rome a number of old pictures in order to provide themselves with canvases for repainting. In the division of the spoils Hunterspergh received an indifferent picture of flowers, on which he painted a study of a head. This picture he offered to Lovera, who on close examination found that the new ground scaled off and that underneath were traces of a figure painted in a style that denoted the hand of a master. Replacing the scales and concealing his discovery, he purchased the picture for little more than the value of the canvas. Removing the two grounds, he disclosed an exceedingly clever painting by Correggio, which he sold to the Earl of Bristol for £1,600.—Dundee Advertiser.

NATURAL WEALTH OF THE NATION

Its Conservation the Subject of an Important Conference at Washington. Governors of States and Territories Invited.

Irrigation, Forest Preservation and Maintenance of Waterways Among Topics to Be Considered.

THE conference which is to be held at the White House beginning May 12 is in many respects a unique and unprecedented affair. Its object is the conservation of the national resources, and this, of course, is a very broad subject. It includes forest preservation, improvement and maintenance of the inland waterways, irrigation of arid lands, preservation of public mineral lands or supervision of their development and many related topics. Americans have become accustomed to thinking of their country as possessing boundless natural resources. But it does not, and unless scientific measures are employed to preserve and maintain those which remain the nation ere many years will begin to feel the results of a policy of shortsightedness and neglect, hence the interest taken by all farsighted public men in this conference. It was called in consequence of the deep interest taken in the subject by the president himself. It is a well known fact that during Mr. Roosevelt's administrations a great deal has been done in the way of protection of the interests of the future it this matter. The president's trip down the Mississippi to attend the deep waterways convention at Memphis impressed this fact on the public in general. His utterances during this tour and before the experts assembled at Memphis pertained largely to the necessity of wisdom and forethought in respect to problems of this nature.

EAST ROOM, WHITE HOUSE.

The conference is to be attended by the governors of nearly all the states of the Union, by the members of the inland waterways commission, by members of the cabinet and supreme court, by the vice president and the speaker of the house of representatives and by such other members of congress as can attend without interference with their duties as legislators. In addition to these, President Roosevelt, who will preside at the conference, has sent personal invitations to five distinguished citizens in private life—Grover Cleveland, William J. Bryan, Andrew Carnegie, John Mitchell and James J. Hill. Each governor is entitled to bring with him three delegates, so that the gathering will be a large and representative one. It will be entirely nonpartisan both on account of the nature of the subjects to be considered and on account of the varied partisan affiliations of those in attendance. It is the first time a gathering of this kind was ever held at the White House, and it is felt that it will do much to strengthen the bonds of unity between sections and break down the barriers of section and party.

The meetings of the conference will be held in the east room of the executive mansion, where so many historic assemblages have gathered, but it will be the first time that apartment has held quite so representative a body, for practically all the governors of the different commonwealths, together with all the leading candidates for president and the only living ex-president, will meet with the head of the national government for the consideration of problems of national import. The governors of the various states and the five specially invited guests will be entertained at dinner by President Roosevelt on the evening of May 12, and the conferences will begin the next morning and continue for three days.

A general idea of the objects sought by the conference may be obtained by dividing the subjects to be considered under these heads:

First.—To conserve the national forests for the use of the people.

Second.—To furnish homes for the farmer in the desert by reclaiming the soil through irrigation.

Third.—To maintain unimpaired the public ranges for the grazing of live stock.

Fourth.—To retain control by the government of the public coal lands, to the end that the people may be insured of their proper use.

Fifth.—To place a homesteader on every plot of arable land, whether that plot be in a national forest, a public range or among the mineral lands.

Add to this the related subject of improvement of the inland waterways, and a fair view can be had of the general aims of the gathering.

The problems of this conference are among the most important before the nation today, and many of them appeal more closely to the people than some of a political nature which perhaps occupy a much larger share of public attention. Take the one subject of irrigation, for instance. In the east there is comparatively little realization of its importance. But reclamation of the American deserts means the foundation of new industrial empires and provision of new territory for our teeming millions. The Carey act has been described as "the new birthright of American citizens." Its purpose was to enable a man of modest means to secure a farm and home and make the farm pay for itself while supporting the family. Congress has passed few laws which in their working out have conferred more benefit on the country than this, and its good effects are only just beginning to be realized generally. The possibilities in the direction of peopling these deserts with a busy and prosperous population are just beginning to be understood. As an instance of the operation of the law the conditions in southern Idaho may be cited. It is about three years since irrigation was begun in one tract in this part of Idaho embracing some 240,000 acres. It was an uninhabited sage plain in 1904. Now the entire tract has been filed upon by settlers numbering from 12,000 to 15,000 people. Main street, Twin Falls, in the center of this section, has the appearance of a street in a long established city. Cars of household goods arrived during the present spring at the rate of ten a day. Some of the houses in the district look like houses in the fashionable suburbs of the large cities, they are so up to date in architecture and surroundings. Twin Falls has electric lighting and sewer and water systems, fire department and telephone system, banks, churches and hospital and several fine school buildings, one costing $60,000. All this exists where there was nothing three years ago. And this is but a sample of what is going on through the reclamation of the deserts of the west.

Farming on irrigated land is in many respects an ideal occupation. Much of the drudgery of old fashioned farm life is eliminated. There are no droughts and no crop failures. The sunshine which makes all vetegation, when watered, grow to the highest perfection is not interrupted by days of clouds when once the growing season begins. More than 300 days of sunshine a year are the rule in southern Idaho, and it is a rare day in any season when the sun does not show his face. Rains do not interfere with plowing, planting, cultivation or harvesting. Each farmer, by controlling the irrigating system of his own farm, controls the growing and perfecting of his crops. Irrigation has removed from the business of farming its uncertainty.

The preservation of the forests is a matter intimately connected with irrigation and with the maintenance of internal waterways as highways of commerce. The government's chief forester, Gifford Pinchot, whose enthusiasm in the cause of the trees has been influential in securing a well organized national system for their protection and culture, will be prominent in the doings of the conference. It is said that the United States is now making inroads upon its forests at the astonishing rate of 100,000,000,000 board feet a year. The annual growth is not in excess of 40,000,000,000 feet. This makes the net annual drain upon the forests 60,000,000,000 feet, and at this rate in about thirty years, unless the system of protection to the forests is extended, the country will have practically nothing left in the way of such natural resources.

The desire of those interested in the conference at Washington is to make the policies of the nation and its several commonwealths structurally right in all that pertains to conservation of the natural resources of the people. Once established there will be little danger of such policies being overturned, no matter what political party may chance to be in power.

Bad Symptoms.

The woman who has periodical headaches, backache, sees imaginary dark spots or specks floating or dancing before her eyes, has gnawing distress or heavy full feeling in stomach, faint spells, dragging-down feeling in lower abdominal or pelvic region, easily startled or excited, irregular or painful periods, with or without pelvic catarrh, is suffering from weaknesses and derangements that should have early attention. Not all of above symptoms are likely to be present in any case at one time.

Neglected or badly treated and such cases often run into maladies which demand the surgeon's knife if they do not result fatally.

No medicine extant has such a long and numerous record of cures in such cases as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. No medicine has such a strong professional endorsement, or each of its several ingredients—worth more than any number of ordinary non-professional testimonials. The very best ingredients known to medical science for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments enter into its composition. No alcohol, harmful, or habit-forming drug is to be found in the list of its ingredients printed on each bottle-wrapper and attested under oath.

In any condition of the female system, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription can do only good—never harm. Its whole effect is to strengthen, invigorate and regulate the whole female system and especially the pelvic organs. When these are deranged in function or affected by disease, the stomach and other organs of digestion become sympathetically deranged, the nerves are weakened, and a long list of bad, unpleasant symptoms follow. Too much must not be expected of this "Favorite Prescription." It will not perform miracles; will not cure tumors—no medicine will. It will often prevent them, if taken in time, and thus the operating table and the surgeon's knife may be avoided.

Women suffering from diseases of long standing, are invited to consult Doctor Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser (1000 pages) is sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps for paper-covered, or 31 stamps for cloth-bound copy. Address as above.

An Opium Farm.

Not far from Macao, at the mouth of the Canton river, China, is an opium "farm." Standing in a courtyard is the great wooden building devoted to opium manufactures, and in its vestibules are heaps of brown balls, not unlike cocoanuts. Two coolies, seated, cut them open and remove the black, jamlike substance they contain—the compressed poppy. The outer covering is a thick layer of dried leaves. Inside the building the whole place is full of smoke, arising from a hundred charcoal fires in open earthenware "chattis," placed in a row around the walls. Over each fire rests a shallow brass pan in which bubbles a mixture of poppy and water. This mixture is strained through paper and passes on to be more carefully boiled in the next room, where the process is exactly similar. From there it goes to another room, where the strup is reduced to the consistency of treacle over slow fires. In another building the opium is packed in tiny cans and placed in cases and sealed with the government seal.

Stomach troubles are very common in the summer time and you should not only be very careful about what you eat just now, but more than this, you should be careful not to allow your stomach to become disordered, and when the stomach goes wrong take Kodol. This is the best known preparation that is offered to the people today for dyspepsia or indigestion or any stomach trouble. Kodol digests all foods. It is pleasant to take. Sold by all druggists.

Sided With Father.

"There is a little chap in our town," said the suburbanite, "whose father and mother have words quite frequently, and have them loud enough to be heard by the neighbors. The burden of their recriminations when audible is, on the wife's part, that she ever lowered the Hicks family sufficiently to marry a Stubbs, and on his part that he ever honored the Hicks family by allying it with the house of Stubbs.

"One day last summer the young son of the house went fishing. He had barely got his line into the brook when he heard his mother calling him.

"'There it is,' said he disgustedly: 'the minute the Stubbses begin to fish the Hickses begin to holler.'"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup is the one that children like so well to take as it tastes nearly as good as maple sugar. It is different from the others as it does not constipate, but on the other hand it acts gently yet freely on the bowels and thereby it drives the cold out of the system. It is sold by all druggists.

A Chapel on a Bridge.

At St. Ives, the little old Huntingdonshire town in which Oliver Cromwell lived for several years, there is a bridge spanning the lazily flowing Ouse, and on this bridge is a quaint building which at one time did duty as a chapel. The structure has been in existence for something like 500 years and was, according to local historians, originally employed as a beacon lighthouse. After that it was turned for a time into a hostel and eventually became an ordinary dwelling house. Some of the rooms in this curious building are below the level of the water in the river.

DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills are prompt and thorough and will in a very short time strengthen the weakened kidneys and allay trouble arising from inflammation of the bladder. They are recommended everywhere. Sold by all druggists.

SOUTH GRANBY.

We are having nice weather, but much cooler than last week when it was a very growing time.

Lightning struck Fred Lange's house Wednesday in two places but luckily did not burn it.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Chapman and little son of Baldwinsville visited at John Dickinson's Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Cook went to Jordon Saturday to visit at Lee Wybron's.

Mr. and Mrs. Judson Marsh, Syracuse, spent Saturday and Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Betts.

Miss Arwilda Fisher attended a shower Friday for Miss Margery Little in Baldwinsville, who is to be married June 10th.

There were a number from this place that attended the ball at Jacksonville Friday evening.

Those that attended the ball game in Lysander had to go home in the rain.

Mrs. Fred Summerville visited friends in this place last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Fisher visited Henry Huntington at Mud Lock Sunday, he having had an accident last week when his ribs were broken and he was hurt quite badly in some way by his team.

Mr. Charles Chapman and daughter from Solvay were at John Dickinson's Sunday.

Milo Austin, wife and son visited their father at Morseman's Lock Memorial Day.

Mr. Althouse and Mr. Merrifield were in South Granby Sunday.

Our school will close next week for the summer vacation.

Mr. Jacob Countryman, who drives Mr. Herbert Cook's team drawing milk to Lysander, was struck by lightning Sunday and knocked off the wagon. He was carrying an umbrella that was scorched and bent. It might have been that which drew the lightning. We don't know how badly he was hurt but the horses were not hurt.

Miss Emma Butler visited friends in Lysander Saturday.

Next Saturday, June 6th, there is to be Quarterly Meeting here and it is expected that Elder Reed, a former pastor, will attend.

Those Rain Coats for $10 are proving very popular. They are found only at McKinstry's, Oneida street shop.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

The W. F. M. S. meets at the home of Mrs. Theodore Stewart this Wednesday afternoon.

The Grange will observe Memorial Day on Saturday evening of this week. Eulogies will be said for departed Grangers and a good program is expected. The Chaplain, Delos Distin, will have charge of the services to which Grangers and their families and any friends they wish to invite are urged to attend.

The ball game between Clifford and the Up-to-Dates was largely attended here Decoration day. The Cliffordites won the game but the Up-to-Dates were a little rattled over those handsome new suits and it is a pardonable pride. They will play a return game at Clifford one week from Saturday, the 13, when they expect to feel more at home in their new regalia and pay Clifford back in their own coin.

The entertainment and social at the church for the benefit of the Up-to-Dates was well patronized and a fine program was rendered. Miss Lena Jennings fairly outdid herself in the (R. D. Man). Net proceeds, $25.00.

Miss Gertrude Rowlee entertained Miss Florence Duell of Fulton over Sunday.

Miss Gladys Church of Fulton was the guest of Miss Ruth Osborne.

Miss Jessie Vant of Volney Center visited at the Misses Hunn's and Fred Dutcher and family spent Sunday at his brother Frank's.

Mrs. Lois Tallman and Miss Littlefield were recent guests at Fred Osborne's.

Mrs. Charles Johnson and daughter Grace spent a couple of days at Ernest Rowlee's recently.

Mrs. Truman Grant is sojourning in New York City.

Arthur Lewis entertained his sister, Mrs. Dexter, and son Glen of Oswego recently.

Friends of Carlton Wheeler will be pleased to hear he is a trifle easier although his condition is still very critical.

The Grange Hall is looming up to the pleasure of all interested. It is hoped that it may be ready for occupancy before winter.

Carefully compounded prescriptions a specialty at the Red Cross Pharmacy, 125 Broadway. No substituting. Get the habit.

VOLNEY CENTER.

Mrs. Fred Jewett entertained the Ladies' Birthday Club Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Hattie Palmer of Syracuse was the guest of Mrs. Anna Fredenburg Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Clara Green spent Sunday with her parents.

Mrs. Elbert Frost entertained the L. A. S. last Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. George Coles and children of Fulton were guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Whitney, Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Piper of Oswego were Sunday guests at Fred Sikes'.

Mr. and Mrs. John Snell of Baldwinsville spent Sunday with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. Snell.

Court of Claims will Adjudicate

A dispatch from Albany under date of May 28, said the Court of Claims, at the request of the State, has ordered a special session at Albany on June 22d to hear the claim of the Fulton Light, Heat and Power Company for the appropriation of land and water power on the Oswego river at Fulton. The claim is the largest ever filed and the first to arise involving water power in connection with the new canal improvement. The company asserts that it owns the water power taken and that it is worth $3,200,000, although it comprises but one sixteenth of the total water power at one dam at Fulton. The State claims to own the water and the right to take it for canal purposes without compensation in any event. Deputy Attorney General George P. Decker, who represents the State in the Court of Claims, will have charge of the State's case and insist that it be disposed of at the time set.

Money you have worked hard for and deposited in the Savings Bank represents much to you. It represents your hard labor yet some will put such money into the hands of a promotor who tells a good sounding story about a big rate of interest, telling you that you are "buying gold and silver and that it is just as legitimate a business as buying any other merchandise," when what he is really trying to sell you is Mining Stock (not gold and silver) which has been watered over and over again, and even though the seller may have been in the mine and seen the gold, there may not be enough there to pay for the work of getting it out. You may get a big rate of dividends for a time, paid out of the money you have paid for the stock, and then find you have bought a "gold brick." Experience is a dear teacher" many times. Why not profit by the experience of others and put your money where it is safe beyond question, in the

GEN. LEE'S MONUMENT

Last Solemn Rites Performed in Removal of Body from Vault to Family Lot—Superb Granite Monument Erected.

On Thursday of last week the remains of the late General Albert Lindley Lee were interred in the family lot in Mount Adnah Cemetery, the widow, Mr. Daniel Kellogg and many friends from New York city and other places being present at the services. The body had remained in the vault in Mount Adnah pending the completion of the monument erected to his memory by his widow. The mounment is the most magnificent one in Mount Adnah, being made of Barre, Vt., granite of the same quality as that used in the construction of the Washington Birthplace monument erected by the United States Government at Wakefield, Va., by the firm of John Crawford & Son of Buffalo, who also constructed the General Lee monument.

The monument is the same in design as that which stands at the grave of Secretary of State Walter Gresham in the Arlington National Cemetery in Washington, D. C., which was made from an original design of Crawford & Son. The base is ten feet long and six feet wide, and the entire monument is seven feet in height. The base alone weighs thirteen tons, the completed monument weighing twenty four tons, and it was placed in position under the personal supervision of Mr. William J. Crawford, president of the firm of John Crawford & Son. This same firm constructed the mausoleum for Senator Justin S. Morill at Strafford, Vt., uncle of the Messrs. Morrill of this city.

All who have seen the superb structure of which the above picture, taken by Mr. J. J. morrill, is an excellent reproduction, speak in terms of deep admiration for the chasteness of the design, the beauty of the lettering and the excellence of the work. It is indeed a worthy marker of the last resting place of a man whose life was commendable, whether in the home, in the social or business world or on the field of battle, and whose death has, through the generosity of Mrs. Lee, brought an inestimable boon to Fulton in the memorial hospital soon to be erected.

MEMORIAL HOSPITAL

Mrs. Lee Arranging Details for the Construction and Equipment of Hospital Building.

Mrs. Victorine Lind Lee, widow of the late General Lee, was here last week as the guest of Hon. and Mrs. T. D. Lewis. During her sojourn a Times representative was granted an interview with her upon the subject of her magnificent gift of a $30,000 hospital building to the city of Fulton, as a memorial to her husband's memory. Mrs. Lee is a very busy woman, having a personal supervision over her immense interests but the Fulton hospital is to her the all absorbing thought until it is completed. She is almost impatiently awaiting the time when the electors at the November election shall decide for or against the acceptance of the gift and she may arrange the details, hoping that within a year from now the building will be formally turned over to the city, completed. Work is to be commenced as early in the spring as climatic conditions will permit.

Mrs. Lee, beside donating the hospital, will furnish a memorial room which may be used as a reception room, a physician's consulting room or for whatever other suitable purpose may be decided upon. Within this room she will place marble busts of General Lee, his father, Dr. Lee, and all of the General's army records and equipment.

Mrs. Lee is very solicitous so far as it is possible to do so, that Fultonians be employed on the construction work entirely and that all materials be purchased from or through local firms, providing all things are equal.

The parents of the late General Lee were married in this city and here the General resided until he was 22 years of age, leaving to continue his studies in law. When his widow desired to erect a memorial to his memory she naturally turned to his boyhood home and where the brave soldier sleeps his last sleep, as the most fitting place in which to erect the tribute of esteem. This decision has endeared her to Fultonians and in the contemplation of her touching generosity we forget that the donor was not like the General, a native of Fulton.

Mrs. Lee will sail on June 25, for Europe, returning just before election day and coming immediately to Fulton to make all necessary arrangements for the commencement of the work upon the hospital grounds. As soon as the details are arranged she contemplates returning to England to remain until early Spring.

Fulton's Business Firms Grand Entertainment.

Some of the wide awake business firms of our city will give to their customers a free ticket good for any seat at the Foster Theatre. These entertainments will be given on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, June 15, 16 and 17; also on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons, 16 and 17. Matinees performances at 2:30, evenings at 8:15. Monday night, June 15, will be known as a surprise night when some person in the audience will come out richer than they entered the Theatre.

Should anyone fail to secure one of the Business Firms Tickets, they can secure one at the box office for 10 cents.

HOSPITAL SUPPER.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Fulton Hospital wish to acknowledge the following contributions to their annual supper held May 23rd: City Fathers, Use of the City Hall; Gas Co., Use of Stoves; H. P. Allen and Lee Edgarton, Coffee; F. W. Lasher, Paper Napkins; Editor Hughes, Supper Tickets; Morrill Bros., Advertising Placards; Milk Dealers, Milk and Cream; and to all who responded so generously to the various solicitors and helped in any way to make this supper a grand success, the ladies extend their most grateful thanks. The net proceeds of the supper were $191.41 (One Hundred Ninety One).

Opposed to Temporary Improvement.

Considerable opposition to the paving of Oneida street has arisen within a few days, and at present the opposition is very strenuous. The Times does not understand that the residents refuse to have the street improved, but they do object to approving the commencement of the work until an estimate of the exact cost for the temporary work contemplated and one for a first-class job of paving be submitted them for their consideration. They hold that it will be very expensive to connect with sewer, gas and water and stand the expense of paving as well but they would prefer of the two evils to pay a little more for pavement and have it permanent than to be constantly paying for improvements in the future, and in the end have to do the work all over again.

It is safe to say that 50 per cent. of the heavy teaming in Fulton traverses Oneida street, and any other paving than the best would be but short lived. The residents of East Broadway are debating the same question.

It would indeed be a pity were the street improvements to be held up yet the taxpayers who must finally settle the bill, should be listened to with respect. They are to pay for the goods and should have the determining of the kind they wish delivered.

The Board of Public Works will meet on Monday evening to hear arguments against the project.

Barn Struck by Lightning.

During the heavy electrical storm Tuesday lightning struck a barn belonging to W. C. Chapman near Bowens Corners, setting fire to it and burning it to the ground. It is reported that all live stock and most of the movable articles of value were removed from the building before the fire gained headway. The loss is covered by insurance.

The boats at the Manhattan Boat Livery have all been newly painted and are ready for the season.

DELIGHTFUL EVENT.

The pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Blodgett was the scene on Monday afternoon and evening of a pleasant gathering of friends to the number of nearly two hundred, in celebration of the tenth wedding anniversary of the host and hostess. The house had been prettily decorated in green and white for the occasion and during the reception hours, Wilson's orchestra furnished enjoyable music. The bride and groom of ten years ago cordially greeted their friends, standing under an arch of green and white and refreshments most deliciously were served. Beside the congratulations and best wishes with which the worthy couple were showered, they received many, many gifts of beauty, usefulness and worth. The event was one long to be remembered by entertainers and entertained.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 10, 1908

IF the Memorial day address of Secretary Taft on General Grant is regarded as a whole and with an eye to its intent, there is no ground whatever for the criticism voiced by some of its veteran hearers. The Secretary referred to certain weaknesses of Grant's early manhood, to his drinking and to his poor success at farming and later in business, and it is impossible to make an honest estimate of Grant's career without taking these things into consideration. In Secretary Taft's speech they were used solely to emphasize an eloquent tribute to the Grant of later years; to accentuate the wonders of self-rehabilitation displayed when emergency and duty had called the great soldier to the front and had brought out his hitherto latent powers. In speaking of the criticisms of this speech, Secretary Taft says, among other things; "The lives of our great men belong to the country. If facts are told showing that they had weaknesses which they overcame, the force of their successful example is greater to lift the youth of the country up to emulate them than if they are painted as perfect without temptation and without weaknesses."

IN the face of widely varying opinions on the subject of finance the Republican majority has once more demonstrated its remarkable ability to subordinate personal views and preferences to the opinion of the majority, and the most important law of the session, the compromise financial bill, is the result. Whatever view may be entertained of the respective merits of the various financial theories which found abundant expression in the course of the session, few impartial judges will withhold admiration for the party discipline which brought harmony out of practically irreconcilable differences and enacted a law which, through it may never be called into action, constitutes an insurance against securing monetary stringencies and their consequent panics.

PRESIDENT Roosevelt paid his tribute to the memory of the country's dead heroes on Memorial day. Accompanied only by his doorkeeper he left at ten o'clock in the morning for Arlington in an open surrey nearly filled with three large floral emblems. The monument to General Sheridan, the monument to the Spanish war veterans, and the monument to the unknown dead were decorated with the beautiful wreaths and designs.

THE American Minister to Panama, Mr. Squiers, has been instructed by cable to leave Colon by the first steamer for Washington. Evidently the political situation in Panama, which seemed to have been cleared for a time by the position taken by the United States regarding the coming elections, is becoming more complicated every day.

FIVE of the twenty-five men who have been elected to the Vice Presidency have became President and in view of this fact it behooves the Republican party to select the second man on the ticket with the greatest care.

TWO-HUNDRED and twenty-nine seats in the Republican national convention were made the subjects of contests before the national committee in Chicago.

Oswego Retains Ames Plant.

Oswego County rejoices with the City of Oswego that the immense Ames industry is to be retained instead of removing to Erie, Pa. In the retaining of the industry, disposing of the very undesirable County jail site at a good figure and the securing of a new jail site at a right price, and one whereon it will be possible to carry out all of the requirements relative to the employment of prisoners, etc., good judgment has been used.

The price paid by the Ames company for the present jail site was $10,000, the money to be available as soon as the deeds are delivered. The only demand of the Ames company is that the property be turned over to them within one year.

The county has purchased a farm of practically 100 acres known as the Ward farm, within the city line on the east river road, paying $5,500 for the site upon which the new jail building will be erected. The Ames company wanting the property at a time when the state demanded the erection of a new jail building was very opportune for the county as no one other than this company would have paid over $2,000 for the block of land and a new site would not have been cheaper than the price just paid.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

Clash of Political and Lawmaking Duties Worries Members.

MEN AND THEIR MEASURES.

Success of New Banking Laws Shown by Actual Operation and Comparison—Skene Asks For More Federal Aid For Waterways—Career of Senator Foelker.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

Albany, June 10.—The reconvening of the legislature brought a large attendance, and every member in each house came back to the capital with but one thought, and that to impress on the leaders the necessity of an early adjournment. The Republican national convention at Chicago has caused complications among many of the members that they would have given much to avoid.

The dragging along of the session has produced what might well be termed a "dry season" among the legislators at the capital. Only a small proportion of them are wealthy men, and consequently the additional trips to and expenses in the capital, together with the loss of time from their business, have brought about financial hardships to some men, as was the case last year, for they receive no recompense for the special session.

Foelker In Public Eye.

Probably the most talked of member of the legislature is Senator Otto G. Foelker of Brooklyn, whose illness caused the governor to hesitate about the introduction of the anti-racing bills. Senator Foelker is a native of Troy, now living in Brooklyn, and received his education at the Lasalle institute, in the first named city. Forced to leave school through lack of means, he started to earn his living at the trade of baker. He studied law at night and was later admitted to the bar. Senator Foelker is a Republican and in 1904 attracted considerable attention by carrying a strong Democratic district, winning by ninety-three votes. In 1906 his majority increased to 4,000. He is chairman of the senate committee on canals and a member of the committees on cities, taxation and penal institutions.

Success of New Banking Legislation.

Even the most pronounced opponents of Governor Hughes have admitted that the workings of his new banking legislation have already proved a striking success in so far as they have had time to operate. The case of the Home bank, in Fifth avenue, South Brooklyn, is cited as a concrete instance of the improved conditions under the new laws.

The Home bank closed its doors Feb. 1 and was in the hands of the state banking department from April 22 to a recent date, when it resumed business.

The cost to the banks for the administration of its affairs by the state banking department for the forty-two days it was in charge under the new law was exactly $666, a sum comparing well with the $25,000 paid to the receivers who were for ten days in charge of the Oriental bank, New York city, and with a similar amount allotted to the receiver and counsel of the Jenkins Trust company of Brooklyn for four months' work; with $20,500 paid to the receiver for his two months' work in the Hamilton bank, and corresponding sums to receivers and their counsel under the old order of things, which range from the sums mentioned to the $300,000 asked by the receivers of the Knickerbocker Trust company of New York.

Apportionment of Expense.

The expenses of $666 reported to the banking department include only the fees of the deputy banking superintendent George S. Leonard, who was appointed to liquidate the bank, and his counsel, the only expenses which are taken into account under the items of fees to receivers and counsel under the old system of receiverships. The clerical work cost $405, and miscellaneous expenses amounted to $130, which included advertising and printing.

Advocates of the measure providing for putting telegraph and telephone companies under the jurisdiction of the public service commission have fortified their position by citing some interesting data. They claim principally the following:

That primarily it is not just to the public to confide in the hands of the corporations the power to fix the charges for their services when the corporations concerned are performing public services.

The Telephone Monopoly.

That the charge for services rendered by public service corporations may be theoretically regulated in two ways—viz, by competition or by governmental supervision or by both. In the city of New York and some other cities in this state there is no competition in the telephone service, and nowhere in this state is there governmental regulation. The monopolistic character of the telephone business in New York city and many other places is absolute.

That through an investigation of the telephone companies of this state made by a committee of the legislature in 1887, the only investigation of such companies and their profits ever made in this state, the books of the company and its officers under oath disclosed the fact that the telephone business during the preceding six years in New York city alone had produced a net profit of 473 91-100 per cent on the cash capital invested.

Skene Asks More Federal Aid.

State Engineer Frederick Skene has made an urgent plea to the national government for increased financial aid in the development of state waterways to supplement state support. He refers to that part of the governor's message in 1905 in which was urged that requests should be made to the state's congressional representatives to have the New York appropriation for this purpose increased.

Mr. Skene says:

"Among the strongest arguments for government assistance are the relatively large volume of New York's commerce and the small amounts of money appropriated for her benefit. A study of the amount of foreign commerce passing through New York in comparison with the proportion of federal expenditures which the state receives seems to justify the central government in coming to the aid of the state of New York at this time.

Volume of New York Trade.

"For example, in the year 1906 its combined export and import trade was practically equal to the sum total of all the combined export and import trade of the remaining 90 per cent (by population) of the United States, yet this state received as a return benefit with which to maintain its facilities for handling its immense contribution to the commerce of our country less than 5 per cent of the total expenditures for river and harbor improvement. If, as a federal statesman has said, 'the general government improves channels and harbors and imposes a charge upon commerce with a view to obtaining compensation for the improvements,' is it right that a state furnishing, as did New York in 1906, 63 per cent of the imports of the Union, the item upon which this 'charge' is based should yet recover less than 5 per cent of the resulting expenditures for 'improvements?'

Only 7 Per Cent For New York.

"If the figures for a long term of years are considered, the result is substantially the same. The total appropriations of the United States government for river and harbor improvement from 1802 to 1906, inclusive, as compiled approximately from the chief of engineers' reports and other sources, amount to more than $500,000,000. Yet during this period only about $36,466,000, or 7 per cent, has been appropriated for projects within the state of New York.

"Moreover, statistics show that New York has commercial interests comparable with those of any foreign nation and that in the volume of her traffic per capita she is surpassed by only one people on the face of the earth."

Career of "Big Ed" Merritt.

Edwin A. Merritt, Jr., the Republican floor leader in the assembly, is prominently spoken of as a probable nominee on the state ticket in the fall, while other reports are that should Speaker Wadsworth be nominated for governor Mr. Merritt would be the strongest candidate for the speakership.

Mr. Merritt, representing the Second assembly district of St. Lawrence county, has led a very active life. He graduated from Yale university in 1884 and the next year went to London, where he served as deputy consul general. On his return to this country he was admitted to the bar. He is owner of the Potsdam red sandstone quarries and is interested in the development of water power on the Racquette river.

The Racing Problem.

The recent reported statement of James W. Wadsworth, Sr., father of Speaker Wadsworth, that the Agnew-Hart bills were absolutely dead was widely commented on. One of Governor Hughes' warmest supporters in the senate stated to the writer that Mr. Wadsworth might change his mind if he knew the governor's plans for the future. Asked what were the governor's future plans the senator said: "Of course I am not at liberty to say, but a moral issue like that involved in the anti race betting fight cannot and will not down. The governor's statement that the Percy-Gray law is a despicable trick on the constitution is absolutely right, and the public is well aware of this and have demanded a change in the statute. The legislators and local leaders who stand in the way of giving the public its right and desire and say there is no public demand for these measures are like ostriches who bury their heads in the sand of the desert and imagine themselves hidden from their pursuers." Asked if Governor Hughes would seek a renomination for the governorship, the senator remarked that, while Mr. Hughes has received scores of letters urging this course, he has not as yet made up his mind.

MARRIED

The marriage of Miss Ida Florence Hubbard, daughter of Mrs. Charles Hubbard, to Harold Morton Adkins, took place at 8 p. m. Tuesday at the home of the bride's mother, in West Onondaga street. The house was handsomely decorated for the occasion with quantities of pink and white sweet peas, while the mantels and doorways were banked with wild laurel and ferns. The ceremony took place in the large living room, in which a green and floral bower, with laurel and palms as a background, was arranged. Under the bower the bridal party stood. The bride entered, leaning on the arm of her mother, by whom she was given away. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Frank C. Sargent, as matron-of-honor, and her nephew and niece, Willis Hubbard Sargent and Elizabeth Brewster Hubbard. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Murray Shipley Howland. The bride wore a handsome embroidered princess gown of white mousseline with a deep bertha of Duchesse lace and a full tulle veil. She carried bride roses. The matron-of-honor wore white chiffon grenadine and carried lavender orchids and sweet peas. The groom was attended by Carl Tracy Hawley as best man, and the ushers were Harry S. Lee, Bertrand L. Walker and Neal Brewster. Before the ceremony, Miss Olive Hunt of Clyde sang "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice," from "Sampson and Delilah." The wedding march from "Lohengrin" and selections during the evening were rendered by a harp and violin. Supper was served at two large tables. At the bridal table were Mr. and Mrs. Adkins, Mrs. Hubbard, Frank S. Hubbard of Kansas City, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Atkins, Miss Mary Eddie of Westport, Miss Mary Wilson, Miss Lota Link, Miss Ethel Mowry, Carl Tracy Hawley, Bertrand L. Walker, Harry S. Lee and Neal Brewster. A mound of white sweet peas formed the centerpiece, and the place cards were decorated with Cupid's heads in water colors and a bar of the wedding march. On returning from their honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Adkins will reside at 534 West Onondaga street, where they will be at home to their friends on Thursdays in October.—Syracuse Journal, Wednesday.

[Prof. Adkins is a nephew of Messrs. and Misses Morton and is well-known in this city. His friends extend congratulations.]

VICTORIA MILLS ASSESSMENT

Common Council Releases Company and Discontinues Action

At a special meeting of the Common Council on Tuesday evening it was voted to release the Victoria Paper Mills Company from taxes assessed in the year 1907, upon the assessed valuation in excess of $60,000, or $1,099.53, and the City Chamberlain was authorized to correct the assessment roll and warrant.

The Victoria Company claimed that the assessment of 1906 was erroneous, unequal, and upon trial in Supreme Court received judgment to that effect and that the assessment should be $60,000. The company also began another action, which is now pending in the Supreme Court, for the purpose of procuring the reduction for 1907 to $60,000, and at the same time paid taxes for 1907 on the $60,000 assessment basis, refusing to pay more and declaring the same was unjust and illegal.

The resolution passed by the Common Council provides that action in regard to the matter be discontinued.

If you are in need of stamping or embroidery materials, your every need in this direction may be catered to, quickly, reasonably and satisfactorily at the Woman's Exchange, No. 161 S. Second street.

State Street School Enlargement.

In accordance with a resolution adopted by the Board of Education on September 23, in regard to the necessity of enlarging the State street School Building and the resolution passed by the Council on October 15, 1907, and approved at a special election on November 5, 1907, the Council provided for the issuing of bonds to the amount of $10,000 par value and for the proposed enlarging of the school building. The bonds are to be of $1,000 each and are to bear interest at 4 per cent, payable semi-annually. The first shall become due on July 1, 1923 and one each year thereafter until all are paid.

All bids received for building the shed in the rear of the City Hall were rejected and a committee consisting of Aldermen Marvin, Van Buren and Lockrow was appointed to prepare specifications and report at a special meeting of the Council to be held next Tuesday.

REMINISCENCE OF THE LATE GENERAL A. L. LEE.

The General was considered a very "gamey" man in the days of Border Ruffanism before the Civil War. He owned a hotel, store and newspaper in the city of Ellwood, Kansas, and was very radical and outspoken in his convictions and opinions in his editorials.

On one occasion he was very personal on a very troublesome individual who bore the reputation of a "Bully." He entered the General's office and gave him a calling down, and asked him what he meant by his actions. The General gave him to understand that he meant just what he said, and that he didn't ask any odds of him, and should run his paper to suit himself. The Bully challenged the General, which he accepted, giving him to understand that if he met him he should certainly kill him. The General met the Bully at the appointed time with cutlas, revolver and gun, and told the Bully he didn't care which he used, and by his stern determined exterior and coolness with his game of bluff frightened the Bully and literally drove him out of town.

Colonel W. T. Cody (Buffalo Bill) was prominent in the affairs of Kansas at that time.

S. D. GARDNER.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

PAVING MATTERS

Board of Public Works Holds Special Session to Obtain Views of Taxpayers For and Against Paving Streets.

On Monday evening the Board of Public Works held a special session for the purpose of listening to protests against the paving of Oneida street from Second to Sixth streets, Worth from west end of lower bridge to West First street, Hannibal from West First to West Fourth, the material to be cobblestone foundation with chushed stone and trap rock top dressing, with cement curbs and gutters, at an estimated cost of $1.90 a front foot; Oneida from Sixth to the east city line; West First from Gansevoort to the north city line. Hannibal from West Fourth to the west city line; West Third from Broadway to the plank road, plank road from West Third to city line, at a cost of 75 cents a front foot; South First from Broadway to the point where the new trolley line enters First street with brick; Cayuga street from Second to Third; Third from Cayuga to Oneida; Broadway from Second to Fourth, to cost $1.90 a front foot, and Broadway from the river bridge to Second street with brick.

There was not enough opposition from either Broadway nor Hannibal street to prevent the carrying out of the plans as adopted by the Board, but from Oneida street a most emphatic protest was hurled, a petition bearing signatures from sufficient taxpayers to defeat the proposition being handed in. The main objection to the paving of Oneida street was that there was no estimate of the cost to the property owners available and the Board of Public Works did not submit information regarding width, thickness, grades and other vital matters, satisfactory to the owners. Some objected to macadam and preferred brick.

However the matter of macadamizing Oneida street from Second to Sixth street is knocked out for one year according to a provision of the amendment to the charter recently adopted, which is as follows:

Sec. 1. If before such meeting a protest against the improvement, in writing signed by the owners of two-thirds of the frontage upon such streets or section of the street, and acknowledged as deeds of real estate are required to be acknowledged, be filed with said board, it shall not order the proposed improvement, nor shall it again consider the same within one year.

Several residents of Oneida street were prevented from signing the protest because they had been informed that the Board had it within its powre to lay a 75-cent per foot pavement, over the veto of the taxpayers, providing they objected to the better job. That section of the charter regarding the 75-cent per foot proposition reads:

Sec. 2. But the owners of a majority of the frontage of a smaller section of the same street, not less than one block, may file with said board a petition therefor, and in case said board my order the improvement as therein requested; provided, however, that no protest shall prevent such proposed improvement where the estimated cost thereof to the abutting owners shall be less than seventy-five cents per foot on each side of such street or section of a street.

These property owners have now become informed as to the true reading of the charter and rather than names having been withdrawn from the petition, more are ready to append their signatures.

Third street from Oneida to Cayuga will probably not be paved either, owing to protests.

Good Roads Work.

Supervisor L. D. Beardsley of Granby has been instrumental in securing the approval of the county Board for the extension of the Good Roads work from the west city line, along the north plank road, through Granby Center to the east line of the town of Hannibal. The distance will be 3.63 miles in the town of Granby, the cost of which will be $16,100. The Board of Supervisors has granted authority for the appropriation and the contract is now ready for letting.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

Stirring Enthusiasm and Frenzied Shouts for Roosevelt, Taft and Other Popular Heroes.

Chicago, June 16.—Amid scenes of stirring enthusiasm the Republican national convention of 1908 began its deliberations at noon to-day in the presence of an assemblage estimated at upwards of fourteen thousand people, with the sounds of patriotic airs alternating, with the frenzied shouts for Roosevelt, Taft and the other popular heroes, the first tocsin of the coming struggle from the graceful orator from Michigan, Senator Julius Caesar Burrows and the initial formalities which started this momentuous gathering into motion.

The opening session lasted less than two hours and was less notable for the business accomplished than for the opportunity it afforded of seeing again this stirring picture of the people assembled from every corner of the country to select a candidate for president of the United States. The actual work of the day was quickly accomplished and tonight the various important committees on Credentials, Platform, Organization, etc., are preparing for the more important business to come.

Around the central mass of delegates and alternates swept the long lines of spectators, in rising tiers and in solid masses, men and women, the latter in gay hued summer gowns and with fluttering fans and waving handkerchiefs. Higher up another gallery made the entire circuit of the vast enclosure. Above this ever-moving, kaleidescopic scene, bent the huge semi-circular roof, its steel girders looped with bunting and ablaze with electric devises, while on every side the national colors were woven into sunbursts, shields and patriotic symbols. In front of the delegates stretched the mammoth platform, 200 feet square and accommodating 1,800 distinguished guests, including ambassadors and ministers from foreign states, besides the officers of the convention and members of the National Committee.

The permanent organization of the convention has been fully outlined by the committees in charge of the work with Senator Lodge of Massachusetts as the permanent chairman. The work of the committees on Credentials and on Resolutions has been marked by greater difficulty, and the reports which come from their deliberations indicate sharp contention before the final details of credentials and platform are effected.

DIED.

We regret to announce the death of Polly S, aged 80, wife of the Rev. A. M. Roe, which occurred last evening at her home in this city. The deceased had been a much-beloved resident of Fulton for fifty-three years. Mr. and Mrs. Roe celebrated their sixty-fifth wedding anniversary last March. In addition to her husband the survivors are Hon. Alfred S. Roe of Worcester, Mass., George M. Roe of Long Beach, Calif., and Chas. M. Roe of Johnstown, Pa., also one grandson, Austin S. Roe of this city. Funeral arrangements not complete.

Ella V. Gregg, sister of Supervisor Willis Gregg, died in Phoenix on Tuesday morning after a brief illness.

Henry, aged 34, son of Ex-Supervisor and Mrs. George H. Fassell, died on Monday evening at the family home in Cayuga street after years of ill health. He had been failing for several months and his death was not unexpected. The funeral services were held this Wednesday morning from the Church of the Immaculate Conception and burial was made in St. Mary's. Beside the parents, three sisters, Mrs. Mary Cobert, Auburn; Miss Elizabeth G. Fassell of this city and Mrs. Katherine Leonard of Endicott, and five brothers, George A., Edward H., John V., and Frank of this city and James F., of Utica survive.

"Cooked" and "Well Cooked" Food

Good food and a good cook are not enough to produce a good meal. Much depends on the vessels in which the food is prepared. Unless these are scrupulously clean, there will be a disagreeable odor or a taste of tin or iron, not to mention the danger of ptomaine poisoning. Many stomach troubles and other ailments can be traced back to this source. These dangers are overcome by the use of our

SANITO COOKING UTENSILS

These are specially made to reproduce the old German cooking utensils so universally used abroad. SANITO ware has a special lining which cannot crack or scale off. This lining is absolutely acid proof, and the vessels are always sweet, clean and wholesome. SANITO ware should be used for all ordinary culinary purposes. It will prove particularly valuable in preparing food for the sick or for infants.

ADVERTISING FOR FEDERAL BUILDING SITES

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
WASHINGTON, D. C., June 2, 1908.

Proposals will be received, to be opened at 2 o'clock P. M., June 30, 1908, for the sale or donation to the United States of a suitable site, centrally and conveniently located, for the Federal building to be erected in Fulton N. Y.

A corner lot of (approximately) 140x140 feet is required.

Each proposal must give the price, the character of foundations obtainable, the proximity to street cars, sewer, gas and water mains, etc., and must be accompanied by a diagram indicating the principal street, the north point, the dimensions and grades of the land, the widths and paving of adjacent streets and alleys, whether the alleys are public or private, and whether or not the city owns land occupied by sidewalks. The vendor must pay all expenses connected with furnishing evidences of title and deeds of conveyance.

Improvements on the property must be reserved by the vendor; but pending the commencement of the Federal building they may remain on the land upon payment of a reasonable ground rent. The grantor must, however, remove all improvements on thirty days' notice so to do.

The right to reject any proposal is reserved. Each proposal must be sealed, marked "Proposal for Federal building site at Fulton, N. Y., and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury (Supervising Architect), Washington, D. C. No special form of proposal is required or provided.

Coming to an Understanding.

In the amiable way of villagers they were discussing the matrimonial affairs of a couple who, though recently wed, had begun to find the yoke of Hymen a burden.

"'Tis all along o' these hasty marriages," opined one caustic old gentleman, who had been much to the fore in the discussion. "They did not understand each other. They'd nobbut knowed each other for a matter o' seven year."

"Well, that seems long enough," said an interested lady listener.

"Long eno'! Bah! Ye're wrong! When a body's courtin' he canna be too careful. Why, my courtship lasted a matter o' nineteen year!"

"You certainly were careful," agreed the lady listener. "And did you find your plan successful when you married?"

"Ye jump to conclusions," said the old man impatiently. "I understood her then, so I didna marry her!"—St. James' Gazette.

Greatly Underestimated.

"Bobby," asked his Sunday school teacher, "do you know how many disciples there were?" The little boy promptly said that he did and answered, "Twelve." Then he went on, "And I know how many Pharisees there were too."

"Indeed!"

"Yes'm. There was just one less than there was disciples."

"Why, how do you know that? It is nowhere stated how many Pharisees there were."

"I thought everybody knew it," said Bobby. "The Bible says, 'Beware of the leven of the Pharisees,' doesn't it?"—Youth's Companion.

Flavoring Tobacco.

Nearly all tobaccos are doctored in various ways in order to suit the tastes of different consumers. Each manufacturer—even in Havana—has his own secret methods, handed down from father to son, which are regarded as perfectly legitimate and necessary in the preparation of the soothing weed. Saltpeter is added to the tobacco to make it burn well. Licorice, honey, molasses and maple sugar to give sweetness to it for the special benefit of chewers and rum to make it keep well and preserve its properties. Nearly every plant which will afford a perfume is used in the preparation of what are known as "fancy" tobaccos. But it is not true, as some suppose, that opium and deleterious drugs are employed, save in a few brands of imported Turkish and Egyptian cigarettes. Among the flavors used are coffee, tea, valerian, lemon, orange, geranium, sassafras, thyme, anise, mint and cinnamon. Gum and glycerin are occasionally employed to bind the tobacco particles so that they shall not crumble into dust. The various ingredients are made into a kind of sauce, into which the tobacco leaves are dipped or with which they are sprinkled.—London Answers.

The Proper Adjective.

At the close of a revival service in Philadelphia the minister of the church went down the aisle, according to his custom, to greet the strangers in the congregation. "I don't think you are a member of our church," said he to one as he warmly shook his hand. "No, sir," replied the stranger. "Well, you will not think me unduly curious if I ask to what denomination you belong?" asked the minister. "I suppose," responded the other, "I'm really what you might call a submerged Presbyterian." "A submerged Presbyterian?" exclaimed the minister. "I should be glad if you would explain." "Well, I was brought up a Presbyterian, my wife is a Methodist, my eldest daughter is a Baptist, my son is the organist at a Unitarian church, my second daughter sings in an Episcopal choir, and my youngest goes to a Congregational Sunday school." "But," said the minister, aghast, "you contribute doubtless to some church?" "Yes; I contribute to all of them," was the answer. "That's what submerges me."

A Trying Moment.

Professor Leopold Schroetter was called to see the Crown Prince Frederick in 1887 before Sir Morrell Mackenzie had reached San Remo. The prince, evidently suspecting the worst, turned to Schroetter after the examination and said, "I request the truth as to my ailment." Schroetter hesitated and made an effort to direct the conversation in another direction, but Frederick insisted. "I am a soldier," he said, "and can look death in the eye. I ask you now plainly, to the point, Is my complaint cancer?" Schroetter could hardly contain himself, and years after the scene when he recalled it he spoke of it as the most painful in his life. He conducted the crown prince to a chair and asked him to be seated. Then he said, "Your imperial highness, you are suffering from a serious complaint, and it is possible that it may develop into carcinoma, but that cannot be determined positively at this moment." Frederick became deathly pale, but never for a moment lost his self control and smiled grimly when he thanked the physician for his honesty.

Crazy.

Wigwag—I believe there's a tinge of insanity in all religious enthusiasts. Henpeckke—Yes; take the Mormons, for instance. Any man that wants more than one wife is plumb crazy.—Philadelphia Record.

The Spoor.

"I'm gunning for railroads," announced the trust buster.

"Then come with me," whispered the near humorist. "I can show you some of their tracks."—Southwestern's Book.

Beware of the man who does not return your blow; he neither forgives you nor allows you to forgive yourself.—George Bernard Shaw.

THE OLD FASHIONED WAY OF BANKING has been ours for twenty years. No matter what others may do we do not change. The old fashioned way of doing things in banking has always proven to be the best. The old time friendships, the old home, the old memories and the things we love, and the old fashioned bank we never can forget. Some folks change their ideas or methods from the old to the new once in a while, but somehow after a time they wander back to the old home where they feel acquainted, where the hand clasp is firm, the look from the eye is straight, and they feel secure. In these days of speculation and extravagance, of storm and stress, it behoves every man and woman to stop and think. Saving is but a habit, acquire it, and teach it to your children and your friends.

The Rise In Life of TAFT The Man of The Hour

A Big Man Physically and Mentally, Who Has Made His Mark as Lawyer, Judge, Diplomat, Globe Trotter and Statesman—Few Men In American History Have Been So Notably Identified With Great Events as He.

By ROBERTUS LOVE.

[Copyright, 1908, by Robertus Love.]

WILLIAM H. TAFT, GLOBE TROTTER.

FEW men in American history have been so notably identified with big events as William Howard Taft. If there is such a thing as a born public man, this Cincinnatian is one. It is popular to call Mr. Taft big. Physically he is a heavyweight, a three hundred pounder, standing six feet two inches tall. Mentally also he is a big man. The salient facts in his career prove this.

Unlike most men of presidential aspirations, Mr. Taft never knew what it was to be poor. He was not born rich, but he was born well to do. There is no log cabin period in his life nor in the lives of his ancestors for generations back. His paternal grandfather was a Vermont lawyer of distinction. His father was Judge Alphonso Taft of Cincinnati, who served for brief periods as secretary of war and attorney general in the cabinet of President Grant and afterward was minister to Austria and to Russia.

William H. Taft was born in Cincinnati Sept. 15, 1857. He grew up in his native city and was prepared for college in the local schools. His mother was a highly educated woman. It is said that the Taft family always made a specialty of education. The judge and his wife determined that all their children should receive the best scholastic training that was to be had. William was a diligent student who mastered his studies by dint of hard digging. He entered Yale in 1874 and was graduated four years later with second honors in a class of 121 members. In college he was known as a clean manly youth, always ready to take part in athletics, but never neglecting his studies for sport. Classmates declare that Bill Taft was the most popular fellow in the class of 1878.

The young man returned to Cincinnati with his diploma and passed through a law school. In 1880 he was admitted to the bar. While waiting for clients he worked as a court reporter on the Cincinnati Times and later on the Cincinnati Commercial. The prosecuting attorney met the young lawyer reporter and took such a fancy to him that he appointed Taft his assistant. That was in 1881. Not long afterward the young man was appointed collector of internal revenue for his district. During the administration of President Harrison the Cincinnati lawyer made his first official appearance in Washington as solicitor general for the United States. President Harrison appointed him in 1892 a judge of the United States circuit court. Prior to this Mr. Taft had sat on the bench of the superior court in Ohio, first through appointment by Governor Foraker, now United States senator, and later by election.

Though in public office for about fifteen years, up to the year 1900 William H. Taft had won only a local reputation. To be sure, he was widely and favorably known among lawyers as a judge possessing in an unusual measure the judicial mind, but he was in no sense a national figure.

Copyright by J. E. Purdy, Boston.

WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT, FROM HIS LATEST PICTURE.

He had ambitions toward the supreme bench, and there were eminent men who predicted that Taft some day would sit in that tribunal.

In 1898 the war with Spain threw into American possession the Philippine Islands. President McKinley and his cabinet passed anxious hours in discussion of the problem "What shall we do with the Philippines?" When finally it was determined to create a commission to organize civil government in the islands, then in revolt and under military rule, the president looked about for a man big and broad and deep enough to hold the chairmanship of that body. "Big Bill" Taft of his own state was recommended as the very man for the place. Judge Taft was called to Washington. He frankly told the president that he had not been in favor of acquiring the islands in the first place. Notwithstanding this, Judge Taft was deemed the best available man to undertake the administration of the islands. He accepted appointment to the chairmanship of the Philippine commission as a matter of public duty and proceeded to Manila with his family.

WILLIAM H. TAFT AT THREE YEARS.

Thus in 1900 William H. Taft became an international figure. Speaking almost literally, the eyes of the world were upon him. It devolved upon him to administer the affairs of a turbulent archipelago but lately released from centuries of despotic misrule and still struggling violently against the manifest destiny of American guardianship. No other American statesman ever was called upon to undertake a like task. How well Judge Taft fulfilled his mission is indicated by the present situation in the islands. After bringing about a semblance of civic organization Taft was appointed civil governor of the Philippines. He remained four years in the islands. When finally he returned to the United States to become secretary of war in the Roosevelt cabinet he had molded form out of chaos and had given the Filipinos a running start toward ultimate self government of the most approved American brand.

Before departing for the Philippines Judge Taft had said at a dinner that his sincere purpose was to help the people of those islands. When he was governor of the archipelago some American residents complained of certain rulings made by him. Taft replied:

"These islands are being governed for the benefit of the natives. If you don't like the government you can get out."

And he said it firmly, though, of course, good naturedly. An ill natured remark from Taft is a thing altogether unknown. It is not of record that the big Ohioan ever got angry save upon that one memorable occasion when as a young lawyer he thrashed a fellow who had libeled Taft's father. Even then Taft took his own time about getting good and mad.

THE SECRETARY OF WAR AND THE ARMY MULE.

The little Filipinos were awed by the immense size of the American who had been sent to guide them into the paths of progress. At first they held aloof. Presently they began to come closer. There was something in the Taft smile irresistibly attractive. This big American was by no means so fierce as his size suggested. He was in fact docile and affable, a friendly sort of fellow, who seemed to want to help folks along. Moreover, he had no exaggerated sense of his own importance. He wore no uniform, no gold lace, no badges of distinction. White flannels or duck sufficed for Governor Taft's garb, with a cap or a straw hat to cover his expansive head. He went around among the natives just like an old friend, studying their needs, informing himself as to their history, so that he might the better appreciate their point of view, and always passing upon matters of administration in the spirit of the jurist on the bench who weighs carefully both sides of a case before delivering his opinion.

The result of the Taft methods and the Taft manners was that the Filipinos came to love the large and liberal American who was sent to rule over them. They called him "Saint" Taft, and when he departed for the United States they were not to be comforted. Governor Taft had remained long enough to prove to the islanders that the United States has no intention to exploit them or their resources for the benefit of anybody other than themselves. He had made good his expressed desire to do something to help the Filipino people. He had shown that the archipelago's new government was for the benefit of the native people and not in the interest of the American settlers. This attitude of a guardian nation to a ward was something new under the sun, and it required some time for the fact to percolate into the Filipino understanding and into the appreciation of the skeptic world.

When William H. Taft in 1904 returned to enter the cabinet he already was a man with a career. He had achieved enough to place his name securely in American history. But his career was still in the making. The United States found it necessary under treaty provisions to interfere in the affairs of Cuba in the interest of peace and a stable government. Secretary Taft proceeded to the island and nursed it through the throes of a civic revolution. In Cuba, as in the Philippines, Taft spelled "tact."

Though in public life for a quarter of a century, Mr. Taft's only elective office was that of superior court judge in Ohio. That office he resigned to accept a presidential appointment. The fact that four presidents of the United States have selected him for important posts indicates the capabilities of the man. Taft was but twenty-four years of age when President Arthur made him collector of internal revenue for the district in which he lived. This position, which the average politician would be delighted to get, Taft resigned after less than a year in order to practice law.

Some of his friends felt that in accepting the chairmanship of the Philippine commission and quitting the bench he was forfeiting a fine career as a jurist. Twice during his stay in the Philippine Islands he could have ascended the supreme bench had he been willing to quit his work in the islands. But he was in the midst of highly important duties there in molding a civil government for the native peoples and refused to return to the United States merely for his own advantage.

In the Philippines Mr. Taft had a serious illness. When convalescent he cabled Elihu Root, then secretary of war, "Feel fine; rode eighteen miles on army mule today." Mr. Root cabled back: "Glad you are all right. How is the mule?" This, of course, was an official joke on the Taft avoirdupois.

No Need of Suffering from Rheumatism.

It is a mistake to allow any one to suffer from rheumatism, as the pain can always be relieved, and in most cases a cure effected by applying Chamberlain's Liniment. The relief from pain which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. It makes sleep and rest possible. Even in cases of long standing this liniment should be used on account of the relief which it affords. Do not be discouraged until you have given it a trial. For sale by E. A. Putnam.

The Bottle at Ship Launches.

Down to Charles II.'s time it was customary to name and baptize a ship after she was launched, sometimes a week or two after. The old Tudor method used for men-of-war was still in use. Pepys' "Diary" shows that. The ship was safely got afloat, after which some high personage went on board with a special silver "standing cup" or "flagon" of wine, out of which he drank, naming the ship, and poured a libation on the quarter deck. The cup was then generally given to the dockyard master shipwright as a memento. When did the present usage of naming and baptizing a ship before she is sent afloat come in? I trace the last explicit mention of the old method to 1604, when the Royal Katherine was launched (see Pepys). The first mention of smashing a bottle of wine on the bows of a British man-of-war that I have found is in a contemporary newspaper cutting of May, 1780, describing the christening of H. M. S. Magnanime at Deptford, but nothing is hinted that it was then a new custom. —London Notes and Queries.

Almost at Rest.

A kind hearted but somewhat close fisted man who was sorely afflicted with a conscience came to a friend, holding a visiting card in his hand. He looked deeply troubled. "I know," said he, "this man wants to borrow money. I know he will drink it. What am I to do?"

"It is perfectly simple," said the friend. "Send down word that you are out."

"I cannot," he said. "I have never told a lie in my life."

"Then," said his friend, "lend all your money to me, and you can tell him you haven't a penny in your pocket."

After some hesitation the kind hearted man complied and, having seen his caller, returned.

"Well," asked his friend, "are your conscience and mind at rest?"

"Not quite, man," he replied, "but they will be as soon as you have given me my money back."—Bellman.

He Writ.

A well known dramatic critic visiting Stratford on Shakespeare's birthday and, hearing the clangor of the bells which, from their tower in the old church where the poet lies buried, awoke the little town to its devotions approached a wintry headed street sweeper in front of Irving's inn and said: "Who is the fellow they're making this fuss about? I see you have Shakespeare hotels, Shakespeare gingerbread, and only the other day I saw a man driving to town some pigs called 'Shakespeare's best.' Who is he—the fellow who lived in that tumbledown shanty yonder?" The "oldest inhabitant" megaphoned his ear and, wheezing, replied, "I think he writ." "Oh, he writ, did he? What did he write—books, confessions of a dare stealer, magazine articles—what?" "I think he writ for the Bible."

Memory Training.

If men only realized how great an asset in life is a retentive memory they would take care to see that their children's were properly trained. The simplest method consists in learning every day a few lines by heart. None of our faculties can be trained so easily as that of memory.—Stuttgart Familienblatt.

A Surgical Operation.

The customer raised his hand, and the barber, pausing in the operation of shaving him, inclined his head. "Sir?" "Give me gas," said the customer.—London Globe.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 17, 1908

If there were any lingering doubts as to the interest and friendship of the United States government for its Japanese neighbor in the Orient, they have been most effectually dissipated by the action of Congress in making liberal provision for representation by the United States at the great national exposition to be held at Tokio from April 1, to October 31, in the year 1912. All departments of the goverment will cooperate in meeting the desires of the president, the Secretary of State and the Congressmen for a complete and successful exhibit of the artistic, industrial and imaterial resources of the United States.

A decision has been rendered by the War Department which will exclude militia commands from sharing in the profits accruing from the conduct of bakeries and other establishments at army posts or joint maneuver camps. When a regular troop or company is serving temporarily at post it does benefit by profits of the bakery and other establishments at that station, the profits going to the troop regularly on duty there, and it is considered no greater favor may be extended, with propriety, to the militis

It now seems probable that the action of the Republican National Committee in cutting down the representation of the territories and insular possessions from six to two delegates will be reversed and that all six will be seated. While the Republican call has always provided for only two delegates from the territories and insular possessions, the Convention, ever since 1892, has seated six from each.

The personal interest taken by President Roosevelt in the Japanese exposition was indicated in his message to Congress at the beginning of the last session, when he formally presented the matter to that body with a strong recommendation for such legislation "as will provide in generous fashion for the representation of this government and its people in the proposed exposition."

Monetary conditions continue remarkably satisfactory, funds being readily available for all purposes at easy terms. June opened with a decidedly better feeing in Wall Street, and in two days the market recovered an average of $2 a share for the sixty most active railway stocks, while the few leading securities made gains of $5 to $10.

John D. Rockefeller has at last put himself on record as liking reporters. For many years he evaded them and thought they were a bad lot, but he has now come to the conclusion that they are not hired for the sole purpose of misrepresenting things and that they are a rather good sort.

COMING EVENT.

On Thursday afternoon at three o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Bartlette, in Mount Pleasant, will occur the marriage of Miss Ethel B. Bartlette and Mr. Willis C. Streeter, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Duane Streeter, of the same place. The Rev. W. H. Pullen, a former pastor of the young couple, will be the officiating clergyman and the ring service will be used. Evergreen arches and ropes of ground pine have been placed at intervals throughout the house and the color scheme of red and white will be carried out in ribbons and cut flowers. The bridal party will enter the parlor to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Florence Distin. The ribbon bearers will form a ribbon-girt aisle through which the bride and her maid of honor will proceed to the bridal arch where they will meet the groom, his best man, Mr. George Bartlette, and the minister. The ribbon-bearers will be the Misses Maude, Mearle, Ruth and Ida Bartlette, Hazel Darling and Emma Ives. They will be gowned in white organdie, lace trimmed. The bride will be gowned in white chiffon with applique and lace for garnature. She will carry brides rose. The maid of honor, Miss Ruth A. Streeter, will be gowned in white mull and she will carry white sweet peas.

After the ceremony and congratulations, a bridal dinner will be served and the young couple will leave for an extended bridal trip west. Upon their return they will be "at home" to their friends in their newly furnished home in Mount Pleasant. The bride's going away gown will be a tailored suit of blue with hat to match.

The bride is a graduate of the Training Class, Fulton, and is very popular with a large circle of friends. The groom has been a successful school teacher and has a wide circle of friends all of whom will extend congratulations and hearty good wishes to the young couple, in which The Times cordially joins.

CHARRES W. TAFT, CANDIDATE FOR SHERIFF

Mr. Charles W. Taft of Williamstown has been spending several days in this city looking up his chances in the race for the Republican nomination for Sheriff, and denies most emphatically a statement circulated by his opponents that he his contemplating removal from Oswego County. He says he has resided here all his life with the exception of eight years; that he has conducted his drug store in Williamstown for sixteen years and has no intention of selling out. He is president of the Oswego County Volunteer Fireman's Association, is Postmaster at Williamstown, has been supervisor for four years from that town and in 1907 he was chairman of the Board.

Mr. Taft has nothing to say against his opponents but he is a very serious candidate and has many assurances of support.

Born in Iowa.

Our family were all born and raised in Iowa, and have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy (made at Des Moines) for years. We know how good it is from long experience in the use of it. In fact, when in El Paso, Texas, the writer's life was saved by the prompt use of this remedy. We are now engaged in the merchantile business at Narcoossee, Fla., and have introduced the remedy here. It has proven very successful and is constantly growing in favor.—Ennis Bros. This remedy is for sale by E. A. Putnam.

The Times is under obligations to Mr. E. C. Whitaker for a box of indescribably delicious strawberries picked from his vines which are noted for the superior quality of fruit which they produce.

Bicycle riding upon sidewalks should be prohibited at once. There is a disregard for the rights, life and limbs of pedestrians, especially after dark, that will be productive of serious disaster unless precautions are taken. The crossing of lawns by the riders is arousing indignation upon the part of residents and the impudence of the law breakers is stupendous when pedestrians and property owners request their rights. The Board of Fire and Police should take immediate steps in this matter.

Health Officer S. A. Russell in May submitted a sample of city water to the State Department of Health for analysis. Last week Dr. Russell received the following summary of the analysis: Color, 2; odor, hot, 1 musty; odor, cold, 1 musty; turbidity, clear; solids, total 304; loss on ignition, 110; mineral residue, 194; nitrogen, as free ammonia, .002; ammonia albuminoid, total .008; nitrates 0.80; oxygen, consumed 0.70; chlorine, 80.5; hardness, total 130; bacteria per c. cm., 42. Remarks: The organic contents is low. The total solids are high. There is a high mineral content and the water is hard. The bacterial count is low, and bacilli of the B. coli type were absent from all inoculations.

The Oracle, published by the Senior Class, Fulton High School, is being printed in this office and will be on sale in the Foster Theatre Tuesday, Class Night, at 15 cents per copy. The magazine contains much matter of interest, a page photograph of the graduating class, half page photograph of the guitar and mandolin club, as well as much more live matter. The merchants have been generous with their advertisements, and the 40-page magazine is replete with good material. Scattered among the advertisements are misspelled words. The one who first hands the complete list to Laskaris will receive a 50-cent box of chocolates. The Editorial and Business staff responsible for the compilation of this magazine is as follows: Clair Whitbeck, Editor-in-Chief; Grace Neails, Assistant Editor; Associate Editors: Merrell Wells, Harry Partrick, Grind Department; Mabel Seymour, Charles Chesbro, Literary Department; Business Staff: George Johnson, Business Manager; Verner D. MARRIED

On Wednesday evening at the Congregational parsonage, the Rev. Charles Olmstead officiating, was solemnized the marriage of Miss Bertha M. Southard of this city and Mr. George D. Warner of Niagara Falls. The bride was attended by Miss Mary Fitzgerald and the best man was Mr. Claude Lathrop. Mr. and Mrs. Warner will reside at Lyonsdale.

The marriage of Miss Mayme Pomphret, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Pomphret, to Mr. Louis F. Cornell, son of Editor and Mrs. F. M. Cornell, took place on Wednesday morning at the Catholic parsonage, the Rev. Father Lindsman officiating. The bride, who was gowned in a princess gown of white Messaline with garniture of lace and applique, was attended by her sister, Miss Anna Pomphret. The maid of honor wore blue silk. The best man was Mr. John C. Murphy. Following the ceremony, a bridal breakfast was served at the home of the bride to the immediate relatives, after which Mr. and Mrs. Cornell left on a two weeks bridal trip. Upon their return to this city they will reside at No. 9 Third street.

We are now prepared to show you a large assortment of soft-collar shirts.

For a Sprained Ankle.

As usually treated, a sprained ankle will disable the injured person for a month or more, but by applying Chamberlain's Liniment and observing the directions with each bottle faithfully, a cure may be effected in many cases in less than one week's time. This liniment is a most remarkable preparation. Try it for a sprain or a bruise, or when laid up with chronic or muscular rheumatism, and you are certain to be delighted with the prompt relief which it affords. For sale by E. A. Putnam.

NARROW ESCAPE.

The following item clipped from the HeraldeRecorder, Potsdam, of May 29, will be read with interest:

"Rev. C. C. Townsend for the third time delegate to the General Conference had a narrow escape from death or serious injury last week at Baltimore. For the third time he was elected assistant secretary of the General Conference. Of the twenty assistants he is No. 2. This brings him long hours of continuous writing. Returning to Lyric hall Wednesday afternoon to finish a report he found the secretary's room too noisy. Going to the tables of the main room he saw the sweepers at work, so went to the Bishops' room which was vacant at that time. This room was temporarily built for the General Conference. Enjoying its quiet Rev. Townsend had worked for some time when he was alarmed by a cracking and crunching of timber above. With characteristic quickness of motion he snatched his papers and sprang through the door way, just as the entire ceiling fell to the floor. The shock of the escaped great danger left him unable to work the rest of the day, but very thankful for his life preserved. Had the Bishops been occupying the room the results must have been very serious as some of them are aged men."

Mr. Bert VanBuren was united in marriage on Tuesday at the home of the bride's paients in Lyons, with a Miss Putnam, a very popular young lady of that village. Mr. VanBuren has a host of friends in this city who will extend hearty congratulations. Mr. and Mrs. Ralf VanBuren and Alderman and Mrs. VanBuren were among the Fulton relatives who attended the wedding.

It is pleasing to note the advancement of the Union Pacific Tea Company's store in public confidence since it has been under the management of Mr. Fred Rudd. Neatness, business methods and uniformly courteous treatment of patrons, coupled with the excellence of the goods sold, is rapidly making the store a favorite with users of tea, coffee, flavorings, sugars &c. The premiums this year are especially desirable, too.

Palladium, Saturday: "The relations of the Fulton and Oswego baseball teams have been anything but cordial, and this feeling came to a culmination when Graves and Brown for reasons unknown, attempted to put Centerfielder Brenner of the Fulton aggregation, out of business. Brown received a black eye in the fracas. The other members of both teams prevented what looked for a time like a free for all fight. Brown is at times inclined to be pugnacious, but he generally has a good reason.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lamson of West Second street have enjoyed the mild and pleasant climate of California the past winter. They have some fine views of public buildings, parks, palm and pepper trees orange and lemon trees, with scenes of picking and packing the luscious fruit; with mountains with snow in the back ground only four miles away. They visited friends in Corona, Riverside and Los Angeles. Mrs. Lamson's son, Harvey Baldwin, is in the employ of a railroad company.

Two hundred and eighty children were confirmed in the Church of the Immaculate Conception on Sunday, Bishop Ludden being present. It was a most impressive sight to witness the little children in their new gowns and suits, each feeling the responsibility of the step to be taken and each possessed of the serious spirit of the occasion. The church edifice was crowded to the doors with the children and their friends and the choir rendered an especially fine program. The Rev. J. L. Lindsman and the instructors have faithfully worked with the little ones and they did credit to their instructors. During the course of his remarks, Bishop Ludden advocated a parochial school for Fulton.

Manager J. W. Stevenson of the local plant of the American Woodenware company proved himself a right royal host on Wednesday when he entertained several officers of and the agents of the company. President Wood expressed himself as delighted with the appearance of the mills and grounds and with the grade of the help employed; he was hopeful that the worst of the depression in the country was over and that normal prosperous conditions would soon prevail. After a thorough inspection of the mills, the party was entertained at dinner on the Fair grounds and later a trip to Syracuse was enjoyed. Those who participated in the event were Messrs. William M Wood, Charles A. Handy, James Ingram, A. H. Eddy, J. W. Stevenson, Jr., William M. Masbury, J. W. Coggeshall, A. B. Patton, Otis P. Wood, W. W. Weeden W. A. Inman, George A. Tombs of the Patriarchs.

No spot in all Palestine is so jealously guarded as the haram or sacred area built above the cave where, according to tradition, lie buried the bodies of Abraham and Sarah, Isaac and Rebecca, Jacob and Leah. This haram is inclosed within a double wall, an outer one of Arab workmanship, dating from the fourteenth century, and an inner very massive one with many buttresses, which competent authorities ascribe to the days of the Herods. No Christian or Jew is, except by very special permission, allowed within these walls. The most the "unbelievers" may ordinarily do is to ascend from the street to the seventh step on one of the staircases between the walls. At a spot near the stair is a stone with a hole in it, down which, it is said, a long Bedouin lance can be thrust its whole length without reaching any obstruction. This, the Jews believe, reaches to the sacred cave itself, and in its neighborhood they assemble every Friday to mourn and pray, as they do before the wall of that other haram—the temple area—in Jerusalem.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Proving His Honesty.

"You say you have confidence in the plaintiff, Mr. Smith?"

"Yes, sir."

"State to the court, if you please, what caused this confidence."

"Why, you see, sir, there's allers reports 'bout eatin' house men, and I used to think"—

"Never mind what you thought. Tell us what you know."

"Well, sir, one day I goes down to Cooken's shop and sez to the waiter, 'Waiter,' sez I, 'give's a weal pie.' Well, just then Mr. Cooken comes up, and sez he: 'How do Mr. Smith? What ye going to have?'

"'Weal pie,' says I. 'Good,' says he; 'I'll have one to.' So he sets down an' eats one of his own weal pies right afore me."

"Did that cause your confidence in him?"

"Yes, indeed, sir; when an eatin' house keeper sets down afore his customers an' deliberately eats one of his own weal pies no man can refuse to feel confidence. It shows him to be an honest man."—London Scraps.

A Philosopher In a Cyclone.

"I believe in optimism," said the cheerful citizen, "but there is a limit even to that. I saw a man the other day whose house had been carried away by cyclone, and he was the most cheerful citizen in town. 'Why,' I said, 'I thought you had lost your house?'

"'I did lose it,' he replied, 'but thar wus nobody in it but me at the time, an' thar wuzn't a hair o' my head hurt. The cyclone lifted the house high, all but the ground floor where I was sleepin' peaceful in my bed, an' I hain't never seen nor hearn o' that house sence! An', anyhow, I didn't have any fire insurance on it an' wuzn't able to put up a lightnin' rod, an' ef the wind hadn't took it away who knows but lightnin' would 'a' hit it, an' I've got the rheumatism so bad I couldn't run in case o' fire.'"—Atlanta Constitution.

Dream Troubles.

"Once when I was blue," said a business man, "a friend told me I was worrying over imaginary troubles. He cheered me up with a yarn about his little nephew. This little fellow's sister said one morning:

"'Oh, Gussie, I had such a lovely dream last night! I dreamed I was at a cake shop, and I had such loads of good things—ice cream, pie, strawberry shortcake, chocolates, jelly macaroons, kisses and lots of other things besides.'

"The little boy's eyes glistened. He smiled with delight.

"'And what was I eating?' he asked eagerly.

"'Oh, you wasn't there, Gussie.'

"Then, overwhelmed with sorrow, little Gussie hid his face in his hands and wept bitterly."

Hercules' Labors.

The twelve labors of Hercules were: To slay the Nemean lion; to kill the Lernean hydra; to catch and hold the Arcadian stag; to destroy the Erymanthian boar; to cleanse the stables of King Augeas; to destroy the cannibal birds of Lake Stymphalus; to capture the Cretan bull; to catch the horses of Diomedes; to get possession of the girdle of Hippolyte, queen of the Amazons; to capture the oxen of the monster Geryon; to get possession of the apples of the Hesperides and to bring up from the infernal regions the three headed dog Cerberus.

The Irresponsible Child.

Small Boy (noticing the Phi Beta Kappa key hanging from the minister's watch chain)—Did you find it again, or is this another?

Minister—Why, my little man, what do you mean? I never lost it.

Small Boy—Oh, mother said you had lost the charm you had when you were young.—Judge.

Saw Things.

Oculist (trying various glasses)—How do they look now? See them any better? Mr. Wunmore—Well, the green giraffe I can shee firsh rate, but that red el'phant an' the purple 'potamus still look kinder—kinder blurred.—Puck.

Sympathy.

"What made you kick Jimpson?"

"He called me an ass."

"Oh, well, kicking is a characteristic of asses, but I shouldn't think you'd want to confirm Jimpson's statement so quickly."—London Telegraph.

Why It Was There.

Aunty—Tommy, I put three pies in here yesterday, and now there is only one. How is that? Tommy—Please, it was so dark, aunty, I didn't see that one.—Punch.

The bride-elect was presented with divers and many articles, each course in the menu being prefaced with a verse from an original poem and a gift appropriate to the sentiment. Last but not least, she was tendered a "donation" consisting of a basket of groceries. The menu and place cards were unique and attractive in the extreme.

Mr. W. Maurice Dunham, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Dunham of this city, graduated from Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, on June 4. Mr. Dunham completed his course in Steam and Machine Designing with credit to himself, having been selected as the representative of his class for excellence of work. He is at present considering accepting a position in either Providence, R. I., or Harrison, N. J., where most desirable offers have been made him. Mr. Gardner Dunham is also doing splendid work in Pratt Institute.

A Close Range View of TAFT And The Taft Family

His "Pussonal Magnitude," His Unfailing Good Nature, His Democratic Qualities, His Industry and Devotion to Duty and His Remarkable Record as Statesman-Traveler—Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott's Tribute—A Laugh For Earth's Sad Places

By ROBERTUS LOVE.

(Copyright, 1908, by Robertus Love.)

CHARLIE TAFT.

PERSONAL popularity counts for much in this world. Particularly does it bear weight in politics. No unpopular man ever was elected to office. Still, there are degrees of popularity, and there are men who possess the quality of likableness far above the average of their fellows. William H. Taft is one of these. "Personal magnetism"—he has it in great abundance. An old darky in the south was discussing Mr. Taft's chances for the presidency. He was for Taft because Taft is popular.

"What makes Mr. Taft so popular, uncle?" asked a bystander.

"His pussonal magnitude," promptly replied Uncle Rastus.

It cannot be denied that there is much of personal magnitude about Mr. Taft, who weighs in the neighborhood of 300 pounds when he is in fighting trim. He is a big man, and he was a big boy. Somehow men of extra avoirdupois usually enjoy a greater degree of popularity than do their brethren of the shrunk shank and the lean and hungry look. Most large men are good natured and jolly. When bigness runs to frame, to head and to heart the combination is irresistible. That is the Taft sort of bigness, for the secretary of war combines with his big frame a large and active intellect and a heart of human kindliness that beats for all.

The Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott says: "It is this intensely human quality in Mr. Taft that gives him his popular sobriquet of Bill Taft. He likes men, and he likes all sorts of men except those that are dishonest or disloyal. He was the most popular governor the Filipinos have ever had. This was not wholly because he was absolutely just, was loyal to their interests, urged the earliest possible substitution of civil law for military law and offered an invincible opposition to all schemes of exploiting the islands for the benefit of unscrupulous American pioneers. He was the personal friend of the Filipinos; he believed in them, defended them, befriended them, trusted them and—danced with them. This last fact, I am inclined to think, went as far as any, perhaps as all the others combined, to make the Filipinos idolize him, as they certainly do, for Judge Taft is in the best sense of the term a democrat. He is as free from race and class prejudices of every description as any man I have ever known. He is as thoroughly a believer in the motto, 'A man's a man for a' that.'"

Those who know Mr. Taft either intimately or casually testify to his unfailing good nature, his spirit of comradeship. He is a man who likes a joke and upon occasion can crack one himself. The Taft smile is famous because of its reproduction in newspaper and magazine pictures. The Taft laugh cannot be reproduced thus, but a recent caller at the war department said after having heard the big cabinet officer laugh, "A great, deep voiced laugh—the Taft laugh, in fine—which ought to be put on a phonograph record and sent to all those sad places on this earth where folks never smile."

But Mr. Taft can be stern when sternness is required. He knows how to enforce discipline in the army or out of it. When Taft was placed in charge of the Panama canal work as secretary of war he received a delegation of steam shovel engineers who were threatening to strike for more pay. The spokesman said:

"We'll strike right now if you don't agree to give us this raise."

"Do I understand you rightly, gentlemen?" inquired the secretary. "Do you mean to say that you want that raise before I have decided and that if you don't get it you'll strike?"

"Yes; that's right," replied the other, with a swagger.

"Then, gentlemen," said the secretary, "will you kindly step over to that table and write out your resignations?"

The man didn't want to resign. They reconsidered. The upshot was that they went back to work. Taft investigated their claims and after due consideration determined not to grant them the increase until such time as all other classes of labor employed on the canal could have a proportionate raise in pay.

Though Mr. Taft's home has been in Cincinnati all his life and he still votes in the city where he was born, it is probably a fact that no man ever considered for the presidency of the United States has been such a globe trotter. Mr. Taft has been nearly everywhere. He is essentially a world citizen, having hobnobbed with kings and commons, with princes and peasants. In various countries. It is estimated by a careful statistician that in his official capacity since his appointment as chairman of the Philippine commission Mr. Taft has traveled approximately 150,000 miles, or half a dozen times around the earth. It seems as easy for him to undertake a journey halfway around the world as it is for the average person to make a hundred mile trip. And Mr. Taft always works hard right up to the last minute. When he was about to start on the journey to the Philippines which became famous as the "matchmaking trip" because the president's daughter and other young ladies found their life romances en route the secretary of war was exceedingly busy. He had much work to do in his office in the war department. A messenger notified him that it was but twenty minutes to train time.

"All right," cheerily responded Taft, continuing at work.

Five minutes later the messenger announced the flight of time.

"All right," said Taft.

When there were but ten minutes to spare a second messenger rushed in and tried to hurry up the chief personage connected with the journey.

"Train leaves in ten minutes, Mr. Secretary."

"Very well," said Mr. Secretary, still working at his desk.

About eleven minutes later the first messenger walked in and remarked:

GOLFING TAFT ON THE PUTTING GREEN.

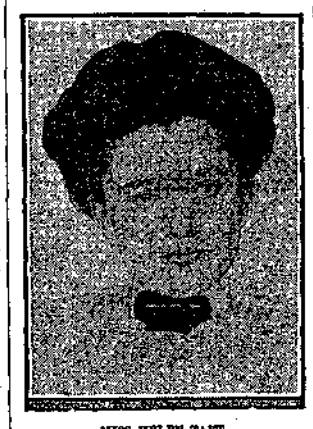
"Your train has just pulled out of the station, Mr. Secretary."

"Fine!" cried Taft, with the Taft laugh. He knew very well, of course, that his train would wait for him, and he was not worried. Twenty minutes later he bundled up the department papers on which he could work en route, stepped into his carriage and went to the railroad station.

"A train can wait," he remarked to his private secretary, "but the United States war department business can't."

Though Mr. Taft is a very busy man, he finds time to keep well acquainted with his family. He is a fine family man, with a fine family. Mrs. Taft, the first lady in the land in the event of her husband's election to the presidency, is a daughter of John W. Herron, who was President Hayes' law partner. The Hayes and Herron families were on terms of close intimacy. During the Hayes presidency young Miss Helen Herron, now Mrs. Taft, spent the Christmas holidays in the White House, the president being "uncle" to her and Mrs. Hayes "Aunt Lucy." This visit remains Mrs. Taft's pleasantest recollection of girlhood times. "Nothing in my life," she has said, "reaches the climax of human bliss which I felt as a girl of sixteen when I was entertained at the White House."

Mrs. Taft is handsome, intellectual, talented, witty and vivacious. She has been a student of music all her life and for seven years was president of the Cincinnati Symphony orchestra. She believes in the higher education for both men and women, and it is her proudest boast that all her children are studious. Her daughter, Miss Helen Herron Taft, now sixteen, has elected to take a full college course and is at Bryn Mawr. The eldest son, Robert Alphonso Taft, is nineteen and is a junior at Yale. He took two entrance prizes when he entered the university. He has chosen the law as his profession. The other child is Charlie, a boy of ten, who now dreams of West Point.



"I am old fashioned enough," says Mrs. Taft, "to believe that woman is the complement of man and that what is most feminine about her is most attractive to man and therefore of the greatest utility to the world. It does not seem to me that a college course makes a girl unfit for domestic obligations or masculine in her tastes. All women are not called on to preside over a home or to rear children, but I think that all broad minded women concede that this is the loftiest type of usefulness."

Mrs. Taft says she never has had time for fads or to cultivate eccentricities—she has been too busy. She delights in traveling and in studying foreign tongues. During her residence in Manila she studied Spanish very diligently, and also some of the Tagal dialects. As Mrs. Taft has accompanied her husband on most of his long journeys, she, like him, is an exceptionally experienced traveler. She is still a young woman, having been married but twenty-one years, and is the most youthful looking lady in the cabinet circle. Until the accession of Mrs. James R. Garfield she was, in fact, the youngest.

The home life of the Tafts is described as ideal. Miss Helen, like her mother, is bookish and intellectual. Robert, like his father, is ambitious to excel in the law. It is remembered that up to a few years ago Judge Taft's great ambition was to become a member of the supreme court. He has turned aside from two opportunities to reach that exalted position owing to his devotion to the duty immediately before him. He declined to quit the Philippines until he had completed the work for which he was sent to the islands.

In religious matters the Tafts are divided, but not at all inharmoniously. The secretary is a member of the Unitarian church. Mrs. Taft is an ardent Episcopalian. Miss Helen has been confirmed in her mother's church, while young Robert Taft is a parishioner of All Souls' Unitarian church in Washington along with his father. Little Charlie's religion at present has to do chiefly with forts, arsenals and guns, but that may be due to the fact that his father is secretary of war. Mrs. Taft and her daughter attend St. John's Protestant Episcopal church in Washington.

Secretary Taft is a hard and systematic worker. He is accredited with doing an enormous quantity of work every day in the war department. When he is absent from Washington he usually carries great packets of public documents along upon which to work en route. When in Washington he frequently takes public papers home so that he can work in the privacy of his study.

Mr. Taft has been considered always by his friends as a remarkably lucky man. He has not known the bitterness of defeat in any of his endeavors toward distinction. As a matter of fact, with the single exception of his election to the Ohio judgeship, all his preferments have come to him by appointment. It is a remarkable fact that when he was but thirty-two years of age his name was considered seriously for appointment to the supreme bench of the United States, and it was only his youth that caused the president to reconsider and finally name an older man.

Tulip Soup.

"What makes this vegetable soup taste so different?" asked the young husband of the pretty bride.

"Only the leeks you sent home," replied the bride. "You remember you said you were going to order leeks."

"I didn't order any leeks," growled the husband, but he finished his bowl of soup rather than disappoint her.

That afternoon he stopped at the grocery store.

"How did you come to send leeks up to my house this morning?" he demanded. "I didn't order them."

"Great Scott! Did you eat them?" exclaimed the grocer.

"Sure, we ate them."

"Oh, for land's sake. They were Mrs. Jackson's tulip bulbs. She left them on the counter and they got into your basket by mistake."—Detroit Free Press.

A Queer Practice.

A queer practice which is general throughout all the tribes of Australia is the ribbing of the skin. When the children are still young long cuts are made across the chest, down the upper arm and leg and even across the back and ribs. While the wound is quite fresh the cut is opened and a mixture of mud is grafted in, the skin being pulled as far as possible over it. The skin eventually grows completely round the mud filling and forms ridges varying in length and size from an ordinary lead pencil to the thickness of a man's little finger and extending from armpit to armpit. I am informed that while the healing process is going on the pain is exquisite, but the result seems to satisfy all parties concerned.—London Standard.

The Brave Butterfly.

Here is an unorthodox story of King Solomon: One day a butterfly sat on the king's temple and boasted to his wife. "If I chose I could lift my wing and shiver this building to the ground," he swaggered. Solomon, overhearing, sent for the boaster. "How dare you?" he thundered. The butterfly groveled. "I did it to impress my wife," he pleaded. The great monarch was instantly appeased and let him go. "What did Solomon say to you?" gasped a quivering wife five minutes later. "Oh, he begged me not to do it," said the butterfly airily. And Solomon, again overhearing, smiled.—Chicago News.

Wifely Curiosity.

"Henry, dear, I tried on a suit of your clothes the other day, and it fitted me to perfection."

"May I ask your object in taking such a liberty with my garments?"

"Why, Belle Greene said she heard Tommy Tolliver say that you wasn't much bigger than a shrimp, and I was just wondering how big a shrimp is."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Alike in One Way.

"He's quite wealthy and prominent now," said Mrs. Starvem, "and they say he rose practically from nothing."

"Well, well!" remarked Mr. Border. "That's just what I rose from—at the breakfast table this morning."—London Answers.

COMMON COUNCIL

Fulton, N. Y., June 9, 1908.

Adjourned meeting Common Council. Present, Mayor Quirk, Aldermen Marvin, Crahan, Van Buren, Wolever, Dwyer, Lockrow.

Minutes of previous meeting read and approved.

Moved by Alderman Lockrow, seconded by Alderman Wolever, that the bids received for building shed in yard of City Hall be rejected.

Carried.

Moved by Alderman Van Buren, seconded by Alderman Marvin, that the Mayor appoint a committee to draft specifications for shed in rear yard of City Hall.

Carried.

Mayor appointed Aldermen Marvin, Van Buren and Lockrow.

Alderman Lockrow introduced the following and moved its adoption.

Resolved, That whereas, at a meeting of the board of education of the city of Fulton, held on September 23, 1907, a resolution was adopted declaring it to be necessary to enlarge the State Street school building in the Third Ward, such addition to cost not more than ten thousand dollars, and whereas said resolution was duly certified to the Common Council, and whereas the Common Council on the 15th day of October, 1907, passed a resolution directing that a proposition to raise ten thousand dollars for that purpose be submitted to the qualified voters of the city of Fulton, at a special election to be held in connection with the general election on Nov. 5, 1907, and whereas said proposition was duly submitted to such qualified voters and was duly carried at said election.

Now, therefore, be it resolved, that bonds of the city of Fulton of the par value of ten thousand dollars be issued and sold and the proceeds thereof used for the purpose of enlarging the State Street School Building.

Be it further resolved that said bonds be of the par value of one thousand dollars each, that they be registered in form, that they be dated July 1, 1908; that they bear interest at the rate of four per centum per annum, payable semi-annually on the first days of January and July in each year, that said bonds shall become due and payable as follows: one bond on the first day of July, 1923, and one bond on the first day of July in each year thereafter until said bonds are paid, and that said bonds and the interest thereon shall be made payable at the office of the Chamberlain of the city of Fulton, N. Y.

Be it further resolved that a tax be levied and collected annually on the taxable property of the city, which tax shall be sufficient an amount to pay the principal and interest on said bonds as the same becomes due, and which shall be applied to the payment of said principal and interest and to no other purpose whatever.

Be it further resolved that the City Clerk be and he hereby is authorized and directed to cause a notice to be published in the official papers of the city for at least one insertion, inviting sealed proposals for said issue of bonds, or any part thereof, each proposal to be accompanied by a certified check on an incorporated state or national bank of this state, payable to the order of O. S. Bogardus, City Chamberlain, for the sum of $1,000.00, and that the checks of unsuccessful bidders be returned to them, and that the check of the successful bidder be retained by the city and applied in payment for said bonds, or, in case the successful bidder fails to accept and pay for said bonds, shall be retained by the city as and for liquidated damages for such failure, and that this Council reserves the right to reject any and all proposals for said bonds.

Be it further resolved, that such proposals be received until 8 o'clock p. m. on the 1st day of July, 1908, and that this Council meet at the council room in the City Hall, Fulton, N. Y., at 8 o'clock p. m. on the 1st day of July, 1908, and publicly open the sealed proposals for said bonds, and that said bonds be delivered to the successful bidder therefor on the 2d day of July, 1908, at 11 o'clock a. m. at the office of the Chamberlain of the city of Fulton, N. Y.

Aldermen Marvin, Crahan, Van Buren, Wolever, Dwyer, Lockrow, aye.

Alderman Marvin introduced the following and moved its adoption:

Resolved, That whereas in a proceeding in the Supreme Court entitled The People ex rel. Victoria Paper Mills Company vs. Fred Summerville et al. Assessors, etc., judgment was entered in the Oswego County Clerk's Office December 16th, 1907, adjudging that the assessment of the Victoria Paper Mills Company for the year 1906 was erroneous and unequal, and that the same should be reduced to Sixty-Thousand Dollars ($60,000), and

Whereas there is another proceeding now pending in the Supreme Court under the same title for the purpose of procuring the reduction of the assessment of the Victoria Paper Mills Company for the year 1907 to the sum of Sixty Thousand Dollars ($60,000), and

Whereas the Victoria Paper Mills Company has paid the taxes assessed against it for the year 1907 upon the basis of an assessment of Sixty Thousand Dollars ($60,000), and declines to pay the balance of said tax assessed against it for the year 1907 on the ground that the same is illegal, unjust, erroneous and unequal.

Resolved, That the tax assessed against the Victoria Paper Mill Company for the year 1907 based upon an assessment greater than Sixty Thousand Dollars ($60,000), or the sum of One Thousand Ninety-Nine Dollars and forty-three cents ($1099.43), be and the same is hereby released and discharged, and the Victoria Paper Mills Company released and discharged from the payment thereof, provided, however, that the Victoria Paper Mills Company discontinue said proceeding relating to the assessment for the year 1907, without costs, and that the city Chamberlain be and he hereby is authorized and directed to correct the assessment roll and warrant accordingly.

Aldermen Marvin, Crahan, Van Buren, Wolever, Dwyer, Lockrow, aye.

Alderman L. Van Buren introduced the following and moved its adoption:

Resolved, That the City Clerk be authorized and directed to order for the Police department Cook's Criminal and Penal Code, Annotated, with 1908 amendment.

Aldermen Marvin, Crahan, Van Buren, Wolever, Dwyer, Lockrow, aye.

Moved to adjourn till Tuesday, June 16, 1908, at 8 p. m.

City of Fulton, ss:

I hereby certify that the above resolutions were duly adopted at a meeting of the Common Council of the City of Fulton, held at the City Hall, on the 9th day of June, 1908.

W. A. HARRISON,
City Clerk.

Approved this 9th day of June 1908.

EDWARD QUIRK,
Mayor.

Nature has provided the stomach with certain natural fluids known as the digestive juices, and it is through these juices that the food we eat is acted upon in such a way as to produce the rich, red blood that flows through the veins of our body and thereby makes us strong, healthy and robust, and it is the weakening of these digestive juices that destroys health. It is our own fault if we destroy our own health, and yet it is so easy for any one to put the stomach out of order. When you need to take something take it promptly, but take something you know is reliable—something like Kodol for Dyspepsia and Indigestion. Kodol is pleasant to take; it is reliable and is guaranteed to give relief. It is sold by all druggists.

Wild Animals and Medicine.

A writer in the British Medical Journal thinks that an interesting essay might be written on the addition to medical remedies made by animals. It is said that it is to dogs we owe the knowledge of the fever abating properties of bark, while to the hippopotamus is attributed the use of bleeding. The story as told in Philemon Holland's translation of Pliny is as follows: "The river-Horse hath taught physitions one deuice in that part of their profession called Surgerie, for he finding himself ouer-grosse and fat by reason of his high feeding so continually gets forth of the water to the shore, hauing spied afore where the reeds and rushes haue bin newly cut and where he seeth the sharpest cane and best pointed bee ets his body hard on to it to pricke a certaine veine in one of his legs, and thus by letting himself blood maketh evacuation whereby his body, otherwise inclining to diseases and maladies, is well eased of the superfluous humor, and hauing thus done hee stoppeth the orifice against with mud and so stancheth the bloud and healeth the wound."

The South Sea Whiskers Trade.

"In the south seas whiskers is a rarity," said a sailor. "Most of them there Maoris has hairless faces, like a girl's. When a young Maori, at the age of sixteen or so, finds himself endowed with whiskers he blesses the day when he was born, for now, by tar, he knows his whiskers will keep him from want in his old age.

"Puzzlin', ain't it? I'll explain it out to you.

"The Maori chiefs down Tahiti way wears a complicated headdress, and a necessary part of this here headdress is a lot of stiff tufts of white whiskers. The headdress makers pays for white whiskers their weight in gold.

"So, you see, old fellers with snowy spinach is in demand in the south seas. Contractors keeps herds of these old fellers, the same as drovers keeps sheep, and reg'lar in June and December the semiannual shearin' comes off.

"The curly white harvest is loaded on to pirogues, and the contractors puts out over the roarin' coral reefs, and from island to island sells to the chiefs big handfu's of that there snowy fluff for its weight in French gold."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Retort Courteous.

A young man in a hurry went through the left side of a pair of swinging doors in the senate wing of the capitol at Washington last session and almost knocked over a senator who was about to push through the right side.

The young man apologized profusely. "I'm very sorry—I didn't know I was—I am in a great hurry."

"That's all right, son," said the senator. "But let me give you a piece of advice about going through doors like these. Always go through on the right side and turn to the right. Then if you meet anybody coming through and bump into him you needn't apologize. He'll be a durned fool, and it won't be necessary. Good morning."—Saturday Evening Post.

PAN-ANGLICAN CONGRESS.

The Great Religious Gathering in London This Month.

All over the world religious interest is centered in the pan-Anglican congress in London called to consider the problems of Christendom, and especially those which closely affect society in its relations to the church. The Anglican communion has many different branches, and the delegates to this congress represent nearly all parts of the habitable globe. The congress has no authority in matters of belief or discipline and is simply a means of bringing together the most able and aggressive workers of the whole Anglican communion, both clerical and lay, for conference on the way to spread the gospel and meet the religious and social needs of the people.

In view of the growth in socialistic ideas in recent years much interest is taken in the discussion by the delegates of the attitude the church should assume toward socialism. "Morality and Social Life," "Monopolies and Trusts," "The Drink Traffic," "Religion and Wages" and "The Attitude of the Christian Church Toward Islamism, Pantheism and Agnosticism" are other topics of prominence on the programme. The honor of presiding on the first day was awarded to the archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Randall Thomas Davidson, who visited this country four years ago, and the presidents for other days are the bishop of Calcutta, Bishop Tuttle of Missouri, presiding bishop of the American Episcopal church; the archbishop of the West Indies, archbishop of Cape Town, archbishop of Sydney, bishop of London, bishop of Stepney and bishop of Kensington. The meeting place, Lambeth palace, is a historic structure and has been the residence of the archbishops of Canterbury for 700 years.

A CARDINAL'S MIRTH

The Primate of All Ireland, Who Loves a Laugh.

During his visit to this country in connection with the Roman Catholic centennial ceremonies in New York that witty Irishman, Cardinal Logue, archbishop of Armagh and primate of all Ireland, showed that a high ecclesiastic does not always need to wear a long face. He convulsed many an assemblage by his witticisms, and his humor is so irrepressible that his hearers expect he will say something to make them smile at almost any moment. Just before sailing for home the cardinal visited institutions of his church at Tarrytown, N. Y., where John D. Rockefeller's big country place is situated. The cardinal was introduced to several priests who were waiting there to see him. One of them was Father Lennon, who has a church in Mr. Rockefeller's grounds and often plays golf with the rich man.

"This is one who fraternizes with Mr. Rockefeller, the richest man in the world," Cardinal Logue was told.

"I wonder if he is like one of my priests in Ireland," said the cardinal, smiling. "He often played with a rich man, and he always lost the game. But when the rich man died he left the priest $1,000. Do you win or lose, Father Lennon?"

The accompanying snapshots of Cardinal Logue caught him in three moods—first serious, second smiling and third when the smile has changed to a grin.

Words of Praise

For the several ingredients of which Dr. Pierce's medicines are composed, as given by leaders in all the several schools of medicine, should have far more weight than any amount of non-professional testimonials. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has THE BADGE OF HONESTY on every bottle-wrapper, in a full list of all its ingredients printed in plain English.

If you are an invalid woman and suffer from frequent headache, backache, gnawing distress in stomach, periodical pains, disagreeable, catarrhal, pelvic drain, dragging-down distress in lower abdomen or pelvis, perhaps dark spots or specks dancing before the eyes, faint spells and kindred symptoms caused by female weakness, or other derangement of the feminine organs, you can not do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

The hospital surgeon's knife and operating table may be avoided by the timely use of "Favorite Prescription" in such cases. Thereby the obnoxious examinations and local treatments of the family physician can be avoided and a thorough course of successful treatment carried out in the privacy of the home. "Favorite Prescription" is composed of the very best native medicinal roots known to medical science for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments, contains no alcohol and no harmful or habit-forming drugs.

Do not expect too much from "Favorite Prescription;" it will not perform miracles; it will not disolve or cure tumors. No medicine will. It will do as much to establish vigorous health in most weaknesses and ailments peculiarly incident to women as any medicine can. It must be given a fair chance by perseverance in its use for a reasonable length of time.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this remedy of known composition.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence is guarded as sacredly secret and womanly confidences are protected by professional privacy. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets the best laxative and regulator of the bowels. They invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. One a laxative; two or three a cathartic. Easy to take as candy.

His Idea of the English.

The following illustrates Louis Philippe's idea of England and the English. He one day asked Hugo if he had ever been in England and on receiving a negative reply continued:

"Well, when you do go—for you will go—you will see how strange it is. It resembles France in nothing. Over there are order, arrangement, symmetry, cleanliness, well mowed lawns and profound silence on the streets. The passersby are as serious and as mute as specters. When, being French and alive, you speak in the street these specters look back at you and murmur with an inexpressible mixture of gravity and disdain, 'French people!' When I was in London I was walking arm in arm with my wife and sister. We were conversing in a not too loud tone of voice, for we are well bred persons, you know, yet all the passersby, bourgeois and men of the people, turned to gaze at us, and we could hear them growling behind us: 'French people! French people!'"—"Memoirs of Victor Hugo."

Stomach troubles are very common in the summer time and you should not only be very careful about what you eat just now, but more than this, you should be careful not to allow your stomach to become disordered, and when the stomach goes wrong take Kodol. This is the best known preparation that is offered to the people today for dyspepsia or indigestion or any stomach trouble. Kodol digests all foods. It is pleasant to take. Sold by all druggists.

Rossini and the Drum.

When Rossini's "Cazza Ladra" was performed for the first time the drum in the orchestra not only excited much comment, but caused the enemies of the composer, whom they denounced as a "foolish inventor of unmusical novelties," to threaten Rossini with bodily violence. One young man, a pupil of Rolla's, gained admission to the composer's presence and declared that art had been so violently outraged by the invention that he must kill the offender. He drew a weapon, but consented to listen to argument. He had been a soldier, and when the composer asked him why there should not be a drum where there are soldiers he sheathed his knife. "Promise me, though," he said, "that you will put no drums in your future music." Rossini promised, but forgot.

Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup is the one that children like so well to take as it tastes nearly as good as maple sugar. It is different from the others as it does not constipate, but on the other hand it acts gently yet freely on the bowels and thereby it drives the cold out of the system. It is sold by all druggists.

Persian Burials.

In Persia two sticks a foot long are placed in the coffin to prop up the arms of the corpse when it rises from the grave and is being questioned by the angel Gabriel. After it has satisfied the angel that it is the body of a true Mussulman it will receive strength to stand alone. A glance from a dog is necessary to drive away the spirit of defilement, and for this purpose a street cur is brought into the room of death and its eyes led to the corpse by a tempting bit of bread laid on the still breast.

DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills are prompt and thorough and will in a very short time strengthen the weakened kidneys and allay trouble arising from inflammation of the bladder. They are recommended everywhere. Sold by all druggists.

MT. PLEASANT.

A full church greeted the children last Sunday morning and if words of praise is any indication of how well they did, we are sure they did their best. It is remarkable how far people will drive to hear the little ones recite and sing.

Flora, or children's day will be observed at the Grange on Saturday evening of this week under the supervision of Miss Ruth Osborne who holds the office of Flora. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Miss Lottie Powell of Rose Hill was the recent guest of her aunt, Mrs. Albert Paddock.

Mrs. Harriet Foster visited relatives in Mexico recently.

Edgar Ives recently purchased a valuable horse of George Grant.

Mrs. Charles Osborne spent last week in Pennellville, the guest of Miss Godfrey, a former nurse in the Fulton hospital.

Daughters have been born the past week to Charles Howard and Chester Ives, both of whom are carrying their heads considerably higher.

Mrs. Cass Snyder and son Haynes, and Mr. and Mrs. Allan Osborne attended Pomona Grange in Phoenix last Tuesday and report the most interesting meeting they had ever attended. State Speaker Watkins of Herkimer was in his usual humor and kept the Grangers laughing almost too hard, considering the weather. State Lecturer Lowell gave a fine talk, beside the recitations of Misses Bradt of Hannibal and Regan of Phoenix, who did not detract from the previous numbers. Six members took the fifth degree after which the session closed, voting the Phoenix Grange handsome entertainers, and accepting an invitation to meet with Hope Grange in Oswego Town in September. The question of Granges competing for premiums at the County Fair was discussed and a good representation will be present.

Mr. and Mrs. Job Earl and Miss Neva Earl were in Auburn last Wednesday attending the marriage of Mr. Frank Earl to Miss Dean of that place. The bride and groom accompanied them home for a few days' visit, after which they will reside in Auburn. On Thursday night Mr. Earl's boyhood friends of the male sex gave them an old-fashioned serenade.

Miss Ethel McDougall is the guest of Miss Emma Brownell this week while taking regents.

Miss Lila Dumont is visiting in Scriba this week.

George Davis had a narrow escape from drowning one night last week. He made a dive into deep water at Trask's millpond and those with him thought he was fooling them, but when he came up the third time Byron Distin jumped in and after a struggle succeeded in getting him out of the water but not without danger to himself, as he was drawn to the bottom once. Young Davis had been to the pond before and the water was not over his head then, but for some reason it was deeper when he tried it last week and only heroic measures saved him or his rescuer.

Zodac Austin has improved his premises with a new coat of paint.

Mr. and Mrs. Benton Cole entertained Misses Jones and Hart and Messrs. Middleton and Sheldon of Lansing last Sunday.

Sunday's storm was the worst one in years in some respects. Highway Commissioner says that $500 will not repair the damage done the roads.

Word received from Alfred Hudgin, who is spending some time in the metropolis, is that he is enjoying his visit and goes sight seeing every day.

Mrs. Ardie Hinckley and daughters Gladys and Millicent, of Lansing, were recent guests at Allan Osborne's.

Work on the Grange Hall is progressing rapidly and will be ready to use the Fourth, when Mount Pleasant will have the largest kind of a celebration. All kinds of races, old-fashioned parade, fireworks, ice cream, Coney Islands and everything imaginable to make a "howling" success. Don't fail to visit the Burg on July 4th, 1908.

If you want good value, buy Dutchess trousers from B. S. McKinstry.

LEGISLATIVE REVIEW.

Senate Record Better Than Assembly's During Extra Session.

HUGHES' RACE VICTORY.

Though Defeated on Other Important Measures, Governor's Success in Enacting Agnew-Hart Bills Gives Him Great Satisfaction — Many Booms A-booming.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

Albany.—The special session is considered a success by Governor Hughes in spite of the defeat of the direct nominations bill, the act aiming to place the public service commission in charge of telephone and telegraph companies and the bill stated to place added restrictions over the control of political parties. The passing of the Hart-Agnew anti-racing bills was the achievement the governor most desired to accomplish, and his success has been a surprise to him as well as to many of his friends, who, at first confident, gave up hope after the vote in the senate during the first session of the year. Governor Hughes himself was known to be discouraged at the outlook even after his candidate for the senate, Wallace, was elected in the Niagara-Orleans district, owing to indications that another vote had been obtained for the racing interests from among those who voted for the bills on the first roll call.

Foelker Divides Applause.

It is doubtful whether Governor Hughes or Senator Otto G. Foelker of Brooklyn, who braved death and defied the warnings of his physician and friends who knew of his critical condition, in order that he could vote for the bills, received the most plaudits from the supporters of the bills. Certainly the governor was willing to share his success with the senator, who said, "If I am alive and able to hold up my head and speak I will be on hand to vote for those bills."

SENATOR SETH G. HEACOCK, WHO HAS A GUBERNATORIAL BOOM.

Racing Backers Lost Chances.

The racing interests, confident that they would win in the senate against the governor, made but a weak effort to delay the bills in the assembly during the special session. They had two chances to materially delay the bills in the assembly, but failed to take advantage of them or else they did not know that the chances existed, which latter supposition, owing to Senator McCarren's watchfulness over both sides of the legislature, is unlikely. One of the Hart bills, for instance, had a slight typographical error, which probably should have been amended. But no one in the assembly made any effort to amend the bill in this particular.

A Hughes Senator's Views.

A New York senator who voted for the Agnew-Hart bills said to the writer:

"There should not be too much hurrahing done by the governor and his friends. To my mind the fight was only just begun by the passage of the anti-betting bills. After passing a measure, the next thing to do is to enforce it or see that the proper authorities enforce it. After a law is enforced it should be kept enforced.

"The situation in St. Louis when the present governor, Joseph Folk, was district attorney of St. Louis county and stopped race betting should prove instructive to Governor Hughes, and undoubtedly it has. The law was ample, but the St. Louis police would not enforce it. Betting and racing continued. Finally the very police themselves had to be arrested by county officers, I believe.

"As to a test of the constitutionality of the law, while the court of appeals found a defect in the Percy-Gray statute, which permitted racing to go on in the form desired by the turf promoters, there is hardly any chance, in my opinion, that a similar decision will occur now. The bills are apparently drawn so that no loopholes can be found. But of course there is no telling what the court of appeals would decide regarding a case brought before it testing the merits of the measures.

"It will be interesting to watch the developments, no doubt, of the racing folks' efforts to nullify the effect of the new laws. That they will fight out this subject to a finish seems evident to me."

Work of Both Houses.

An analysis of the work of both houses during the special session shows that the record of the senate is better than that of the assembly. The senate passed the direct nominations bill, the Page bill putting telephone and telegraph companies under the control of the public service commission and the bill providing for additional court control over political parties, etc., and as a climax placed the enactment of the Agnew-Hart bills to its credit. The senate possibly did not originally intend to have such a record, but there it is.

In the Assembly.

The assembly record is not good because public opinion in general wanted the public service law amended to conform to the governor's ideas and wanted the direct nominations bill passed.

Of the governor's twenty-two different recommendations to the legislature eleven were of general importance, and these eleven were disposed of as follows:

Bills Passed.

Preventing betting on the race tracks.
To stamp out tuberculosis in cattle.
Providing for the better identification of voters.
Compelling signers of petitions for independent nominations to be voters in the counties in which they reside.

Bills Defeated.

Placing telephone and telegraph companies under the control of the public service commissions.
Providing for direct nominations at primaries.
Prescribing an official ballot for primaries.
To provide for the government of political parties and to protect the rights of the minority.
Placing department stores under the supervision of the state labor department.
Creating a commission to investigate the stock gambling evils of Wall street.
Creating a commission to investigate the condition of the unemployed and to provide measures of relief.

Another Session?

Will the governor call another special session to consider the direct nominations and public service act amendment bills?

This is a mooted question. Some of the anti-Hughes legislators fear that he will do so in July. Others predict that September will be the time. But the governor is the only person in Albany who can answer that question.

The fact that the governor responded to request and recommended legislation toward wiping out bovine tuberculosis will greatly advance this worthy cause. The farming interests of the state are in urgent need of further and well directed state aid.

The Boom Season.

Any person who attempted to keep a record of the various booms for higher office that have been considered or started on their way at Albany during the year would get writer's cramp before he had half finished the task. He would not finish the task. The task would finish him.

Aside from Governor Hughes' two booms, one for president and one for vice president, there have been those of Lieutenant Governor Chanler for vice president and governor, those of Speaker Wadsworth for vice president and governor, that of Senator Saxe for attorney general, those of the minority leader in the assembly, George Palmer, for attorney general and lieutenant governor, those of Assemblymen Francis, Bennett and Hamilton for senator.

Another "boomee" is Secretary of State John Whalen, who is being hailed as the next governor of New York by his Democratic friends in Albany.

Al Smith's Minority Leadership Boom.

Assemblyman Alfred E. Smith, Democrat, who has represented the Second assembly district for five years, is being pushed forward by his friends in the legislature as a candidate for minority leader for next year. Mr. Smith is one of the most effective speakers on the Democratic side of the house, combining recognized ability with an inexhaustible fund of humor. His knowledge of parliamentary law and of legislative strategy is equaled by that of few other members.

Mr. Smith is a member of the following committees: Cities and water, gas and electricity. A large number of Democratic members are of the opinion that Mr. Smith would prove the most valuable leader the party has had in years in the lower house.

Mr. Smith has been frequently called to occupy the speaker's chair by Speaker Wadsworth during the latter's absence from the assembly chamber, a compliment rarely extended to a minority member by any speaker. During the last session Mr. Smith while acting speaker conducted the business of the house with dispatch that caused wide commendation. Triflers of the Cuvillier order received scanty consideration.

Mr. Smith was born in the Fourth ward of New York city in 1873 and graduated from the St. James parochial school. In 1895 he was appointed a clerk in the office of commissioner of jurors, which position he held until his election to the assembly in 1903. He is as popular among the Republicans in the assembly as he is among the Democrats, because, while he is a hard fighter for his party, he always fights squarely on the point at issue and does not indulge in personal abuse.

Senator Seth G. Heacock, Republican, of Herkimer county, who represents the Thirty-third district in the upper house, is one of the many legislators who have had booms of some description during the session. Senator Heacock has a gubernatorial boom, and privately he confesses that he would not refuse the nomination if it were offered to him.

Senator Heacock has been a stanch supporter of Governor Hughes during the year and passed important legislation. He voted in favor of the Agnew-Hart anti race track bills. He was born in Buffalo on March 1, 1857, and in 1880 graduated from Hamilton college. He is one of the wealthiest men in the legislature, and has been an independent oil producer.

VETERANS' REUNION.

The annual reunion of the 184th Regiment, N. Y. V., which was held on the Fair grounds on Wednesday, was attended by an unusually large number, seventy eight veterans answering to roll call. The Rev. F. A. Miller delivered an able address before the assemblage and dinner was served by the wives and daughters of the members present. The afternoon was pleasantly spent in rehearsing incidents of the stirring times during the war. The following officers were elected:

Honorary President, Col. W. G. Robinson.
Active President, Major W. D. Ferguson.
Secretary, Robert Simpson, Jr.
Treasurer, Amos Youmans.
The Vice Presidents, one from each company were re-elected.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES

Baccalaureate Sermon by the Rev. W. L. Sawtelle of the Presbyterian Church — Interesting and Instructive Address.

On Sunday evening the First Methodist church was filled with the members of the class of '08, the faculty and the friends of the graduates, the occasion being the baccalaureate sermon by the Rev. W. L. Sawtelle of the Presbyterian Church.

Palms and cut flowers were arranged on the chancel, and the members of the class sat in a body near the front of the church. Special music was rendered by the Presbyterian Church choir.

Mr. Sawtelle selected the following text:

Text:—"Ye have been called unto liberty; only use not liberty for an occasion to the flesh, but by love serve one another." Galatians, 5: 13.

Mr. Sawtelle said in part: All life is continually vibrating between the two great principles of bondage and freedom. The prisoner wants release from the dungeon; the youth wants to be released from his youthful limitations; the poor man is struggling toward competency; the scholar hates ignorance and is struggling toward knowledge. Life is an unceasing effort to escape from bondage and attain unto freedom.

REV. W. L. SAWTELLE.

Freedom is a word of no recent coinage. It has been the watchword of the age. "Freedom" was Israel's cry in the long ago ages." Freedom" was the slogan of the Reformation. "Freedom" was the serf's fair dream in the night of feudalism. "Freedom"—not all the world's distress and squalor, nor all its stormy grief and grinding pain, its foul unfairness and its numbing fear can slay the word or its fairer self, because God did not ordain men to chains, nor women to shame, nor children to tears, but when He gave them life He gave with it a dauntless and unconquerable love of freedom."

But freedom must be carried forward into its moral and spiritual ranges. All teachers of truth love the word. No program of social reform but lays its foundations upon promise of some sort of freedom. All religious teachers incorporate the word into their vocabulary. Jesus said:—"The truth shall make you free and ye shall be free indeed."

When Paul called his auditors into this spiritual liberty he broke with the old traditions and conventionalities of the Jews and ushered them into a new service. He freed their hands from the minute detail of Phariseeism, he unlocked their hearts to a love for all men, he opened their minds to perceive that their's was a new problem, a world problem for them to solve. He said to them,—"cease to be selfish; live in other men's lives; cease to hold the old outlawed doctrines of race election; cease to be inferior. Subjects of Rome, yours is the Kingdom of God. Occupy."

But liberty offers a great temptation to "occasion to the flesh." Liberty has worked her woe as well as her weal. Witness the infamy of the Florentine house of the Medici when Lorenzo, the Magnificent, prostituted his opportunity to sordid greed. Witness also the champion of right in the person of Savonarola who thundered from San Marco his invectiveness against the proud scion of the Medicis.

Freedom from toil and from the rigid obligations of economy offers the occasion for conscienceless wealth and untold crimes of luxury and extravagance.

Freedom from fear made Napolean a monster when he should have been a world benefactor.

Freedom from restraint has been the wreck and ruin of many a youth suddenly unleashed from home. And freedom from the dictation of law has made of the ideal theory of anarchy a veritable reign of terror.

Paul suggests this insidious temptation to the misuse of liberty temptation to the misuse of liberty and then indicates its exalted use "by love, serve one another."

Service is freedom's word. It is also Christ's word—"If any man among you be great, let him be servant of all."

A slave cannot serve; a slave has never served. He has obeyed orders, but service is voluntary. It must be so even though the idea remuneration enters into it.

Freedom is a call to service. More than this, freedom indicates the place of service. A man serves best where he has greatest freedom.

Freedom from penury and want indicates and enables a service in philanthropy. Freedom from grinding social conditions indicates and enables a wholesome sociological service.

At this point of the sermon Mr. Sawtelle addressed himself particularly to the members of the graduating class, who were in a body. While the preacher indicated to them the service which society might expect from them because of the freedom they had achieved in the liberating process of their education. These students had experienced an intellectual freedom. There had been a widening of their opportunities. Their sympathies have been unfettered and their mental and moral horizon has been pushed back.

Mr. Sawtelle urged them not to defeat the objects of this new liberty by making them to be "occasions to the flesh." He said, "Don't exploit your fellowmen because your wits have been sharpened. Don't take this new power, given to you by the good heart of a Christian republic and the grace of a Christian commonwealth, and use it for ignoble or selfish ends. If riches for you means the seisure of the rights of a less intelligent purpose, be a pauper first. If success for you means any consequent loss to a fellow man, be a failure first. And such glorious failures will be your success. Now as you are vexing the future to tell you what you are to do to earn your right and your honor to be alive in this golden age, be assured that whatever your work shall be, it shall be worthy only as it can be classified under the general head of service. Go and serve—serve as you are fitted by the liberty that has been granted to you. And in your service may God be with you and bless you."

Public Library

During July and August the Library will be closed every afternoon, also every evening except Monday and Saturday. Thus the open hours for this vacation are 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. daily: 7 to 9 p. m. Monday and Saturday.

The approach of vacation months is made evident by the frequent calls for and use of summer resort booklets, railway guides and pamphlets on camping canoeing, fishing and itineraries of various kinds Those possessed by the library are placed where they are easy of access to all who wish to consult them.

Here also are placed school and college bulletins and catalogs, and a good directory of the private and public schools of the United States, all intended to help solve the problem "where to go" to school, college or university.

Patrons of the library who are planning a vacation and desire to take a supply of reading matter with them, are priveleged to borrow a number of volumns at one time, with extra time limit. Information concerning this plan can be obtained at the library.

Pathfinder Field Day.

The following menu will be served on Friday at Pathfinder club house:

Veal croquettes, new green peas creamed sweet potatoes, rolls, June salad, strawberries, cake, coffee, Pathfinder milk. The bus will leave the City Hall at 2:30, 3:30 and 5:30.

Dancing will be enjoyed.

Board of Supervisors.

W. W. Spencer, Clerk of the Board of Supervisors, is sending out notices for a special meeting of the Board on Monday, June 29, at 2 o'clock. Plans will be considered for a new jail and arrangements will be made for raising the necessary funds for the county's portion of the new Utica Street bridge. The salary of the mortgage tax clerk at the County Clerk's office will also be fixed. A bill fixing the salary was adopted at the last session of the Legislature.

GREAT EXCITMENT ON SOUTH SALINA STREET

Never in the history of Syracuse has a sale of millinery goods created so much excitment as the semi-annual clearance sale of Summer millinery now on at the big stores of the Palmer-Reeve Company, 418-420 South Salina street, Syracuse, N. Y.

They have a large wholesale department to draw from and they load their counters with fresh bargains every morning. The crowd is growing in size every day.

MARRIED

On Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's sister, Miss Cornelia Sanders in Hannibal, occurred the marriage of Mrs. Ella Haviland of Hoosick, N. Y., to Mr. Otis Allen Kipp. Only the immediate relatives and friends were present. Mrs. Kipp is a sister of Mrs. M. V. Connell of this city, who was present.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Crouch in Phillips street on Wednesday evening was the scene of a pretty wedding when their daughter, Elizabeth Madeline, was united in marriage with Mr. Forest Bellinger of Vernon. The home had been prettily decorated in yellow and white, green foliage forming the back ground. The marriage ceremony was performed under an arch of pine from which was suspended a bell of daisies. The wedding march was played by Miss Lillian Crouch and the Rev. F. A. Miller was the officiating clergyman. The Misses Mildred, Rhoda and Charlotte Crouch and June Lindsley, cousins of the bride, were ribbon bearers and preceded the bride to the bridal arch. They wore white frocks. The bride was gowned in white silk, entraine, with garnature of lace and she carried a boquet of bride's roses. Her veil was caught with a coronet of white rosebuds. Her maid of honor, Miss Clara A. Earnshaw, was gowned in light blue silk, with lace trimmings and she carried cream roses. The best man was David J. Bellinger of Vernon and the flower girl was Miss Naomi Lamb of Scriba. She wore blue silk. A bridal dinner was served by a cateress to the many guests present. Mr. and Mrs. Bellinger will reside at No. 111 Harrison street, Syracuse.

Thursday morning at 11 o'clock at Zion Episcopal church, Miss Charlotte David, daughter of Attorney and Mrs. C. H. David, was united in marriage with the Rev. Alexander Haswell Grant, rector of Zion church. The ceremony was witnessed by a large number of relatives and friends of the popular young couple. The church edifice had been beautifully decorated by the Girls Friendly Society of the church, ferns, daisies and other field flowers being artistically arranged. The chancel rail was hidden beneath bunches of rye, forming a pathway through which the bridal party passed The Rev. Warren C. Hubbard of Brooklyn and Rev. Mr. Longley of Binghamton were the officiating clergymen and the service was most impressive. During the seating of the guests, Prof. Schofield rendered selections on the pipe organ and as the bridal party entered the church the bridal march was played by Mrs. Torney. Several appropriate selections were also rendered by the choir prior to the ceremony. The bride entered the church on the arm of her father and by him she was given away. She looked stately in her bridal gown of white chiffon satin over silk with a bertha of Rose point lace. The gown was cut Princess in Empire effect and she wore a long tulle veil. She carried an ivory bound prayer book, several long stemmed bride's roses being folded in good effect in the book. The bridesmaid, Miss Lucy Hamson, of Syracuse, was gowned in white net over silk, lace trimmed, and she carried a shower of white sweet peas and maiden hair ferns. The groom was attended by Dr. E. A. Gladman as best man, and the ushers were Messrs. R. C. Scott, W. H. Hornbrook, and Vincent Hall of this city and Dr. Barnes of Syracuse. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents to which over a hundred guests had been bidden. A bridal breakfast was served by cateress Winkleman of Syracuse. The home was prettily decorated in ferns, smilax and white roses and during the reception hours Mrs. Berwald of Syracuse sweetly rendered a vocal selection. Rev. and Mrs. Grant eluded the villigence of their friends with the assistance of the groomsman and the maid of honor, and they were enroute to Selkirk-on-the-Lake before they were missed. Many magnificent gifts were received from friends and hearty congratulations are being showered upon them. They will reside in the Episcopal parsonage in Second street upon their return from their honeymoon.

On Thursday evening at 7 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Dr. and Mrs. William Louis Wallace, Syracuse, occurred the marriage of their daughter, Miss Ella Blakeslee Wallace to Mr. Friend Lord Wells, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert L. Wells of this city. The Rev. Dr. Calthrop was the officiating clergyman and the ring service was used. The home had been artistically decorated with palms and white roses, the mantle before which the young couple pledged their vows being banked with palms and white roses in profusion. Prior to the ceremony Miss Maude Clarke rendered several harp selections and as the bridal party entered the parlor the bridal march was played by an orchestra stationed in the reception hall. The bride entered the room on the arm of her father who gave her away. She was very beautiful in her bridal robe of white messaline satin over silk, made princess, entraine, with trimming of Duchesse lace. She carried a boquet of bride's roses and wore the groom's gift, a brooch of diamonds and pearls. The maid of honor was Miss Georgia Wells, who wore a gown of white organdie over pink taffeta and carried a shower of pink and white carnations. She wore the bride's gift, a beautiful brooch of Etruscan gold with pearl setting. Little Miss Marjorie Wells was flower girl and she was very winsome in pink silk, carrying a graceful basket of white roses. The bride's gift to the flower girl was guimpe pins with setting of torquoise. The groom was attended by Mr. Frank Wallace as best man. The groom's gift to him being gold cuff links. After congratulations a bridal collation was served, fourteen of the guests being seated at the bride's table. During the serving the bride and groom escaped their friends coming to the groom's home in this city where they were joined the following day by the parents. Mrs. Wells is a graduate of Syracuse University, class of '07, and she is a popular member of the Kappa Kappa Gamma fraternity. Mr. Wells is a graduate of Fulton High School, class of '02, and of Syracuse University, class of '06. He is also a member of the Delta Upsilon fraternity. He is a member of the firm of Wells, Kaine & Co., of Grand Bay, Ca., where he has a summer home. He and his bride are spending a few days in Quebec enroute to Grand Bay. The young couple have a host of friends who are extending earnest congratulations.

Committed Suicide.

Coroner Marsh was called to Phoenix on Sunday where Mrs. Emma Morehouse while suffering from mental trouble had committed suicide by drowning in the cistern. The death of her husband about a year ago is thought to have been the cause for the mental condition. The deceased is survived by one daughter and two sons. She was esteemed by all who knew her and her untimely death is regretted.

DIED.

A telegram was received by Mrs. May Willard on Tuesday announcing the death from consumption of Mrs. Kittie Lathrop Hogan, aged 28, in Denver, Col. Two sons and a daughter, who have been adopted into different homes, survive. The remains will be interred at Clifton Springs.

The 5-months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Kane of Worth street, died on Wednesday and the funeral services were held on Friday afternoon, the Rev. John Richards officiating. Interment was made at Vermillion.

John Dana Spaulding, the 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Spaulding, died at their home in Syracuse on Thursday. The remains were brought to the home of an uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Crahan, from where the funeral was held on Saturday. Interment was made in St. Mary's.

A cablegram was received at the Nestle plant in this city on Monday announcing the sad death of Mr. S. Grand of Vevey, Switzerland, a former resident of this city. Mr. Grand was stricken in February with a malady which baffled the skill of physicians and his death was not wholly unexpected, although none the less regretted. The deceased came to Fulton with the installation of the Nestle plant and he remained here until last Spring when the Borden's took over the infants food part of the business. With his family he then removed back to Switzerland where he held a confidential position with the firm.

Charles, the 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Dyer of West Second street, died on Thursday from an injury received while wrestling with a companion on Monday. The boy was unusually bright and attractive and in his death the relatives have the earnest sympathy of the community. The boy took his first communion on the Sunday previous to his injury and was in perfect health A week from that day his body was laid to rest. The funeral services were held from the Church of the Immaculate Conception on Sunday afternoon and interment was made in St. Mary's. Besides the parents, two sisters, Ida and Alice, survive.

On Tuesday morning at her home in Phoenix occurred the death of Miss Ella Gregg, aged 60 years, after a two days illness with acute indigestion. Her death is deeply deplored by a large circle of acquaintances throughout this county. The deceased was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Gregg and her death leaves as an immediate survivor only one brother, Supervisor Willis P. Gregg. She received her education in Falley Seminary and successfully taught for several years. Miss Gregg was for years a member of the Shakespeare club of this city and she was also a member of the Topics club of Phoenix. The funeral services were held on Thursday from the brother's home and interment was made at Pennellville.

The sudden death of Gertrude, the 9-months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. O'Brien, occurred on Friday at one o'clock at the home in Third street. The little one had been frail since birth but during the past month had seemed to gain rapidly and that she would have perfect health soon was the hope of the parents. The sudden change in climatic conditions, however, was too much for the weak heart and weak vitality and she passed away only a few hours after she was stricken with pneumonia. The funeral services were held on Sunday afternoon, exquisite floral offerings from friends completely surrounding the little white casket; the body was laid away in the family lot in St. Mary's.

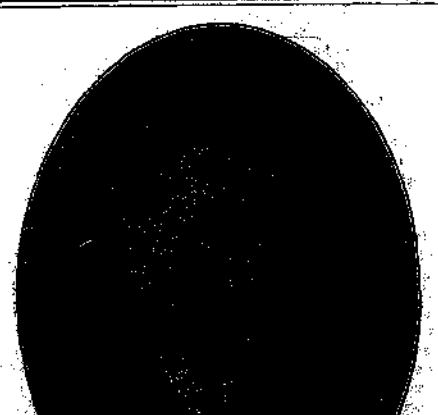
Home Memories



A Good Old York State Story by Eli Barber

Every one is reading it. If you are not, you are behind the times. Critics say it is the best story of rural life that has been written for years.

It is nearly bound in dark green and gold, contains 420 pages, and sells for $1.50.

Mention this paper and we will send you a copy at the special rate of $1.00. Postpaid.

Keep Cool!
Cook With Gas

Heat, soot and ashes are inseparable from the use of a coal or wood range. Do away with these terrors of the housewife.

Perfect comfort, cleanliness and convenience can only be attained in one way—cook with Gas.

No worry about kindling or ashes, no muss on the floor, no coal or wood to carry and a saving of time and money—when using gas. Are these points not worth considering? If they are—send for our representative—a postal card or phone will get him, fully prepared to give complete information as to merits and workings of the Modern Gas Range.

A large and complete stock of the latest improved gas ranges on display at our office. Call and see them.

ADVERTISING FOR FEDERAL BUILDING SITES

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
WASHINGTON, D. C., June 2, 1908.

Proposals will be received, to be opened at 2 o'clock P. M., June 30, 1908, for the sale or donation to the United States of a suitable site, centrally and conveniently located, for the Federal building to be erected in Fulton, N. Y.

A corner lot of (approximately) 140x140 feet is required.

Each proposal must give the price, the character of foundations obtainable, the proximity to street cars, sewer, gas and water mains, etc., and must be accompanied by a diagram indicating the principal street, the north point, the dimensions and grades of the land, the widths and paving of adjacent streets and alleys, whether the alleys are public or private, and whether or not the city owns land occupied by sidewalks. The vendor must pay all expenses connected with furnishing evidences of title and deeds of conveyance.

Improvements on the property must be reserved by the vendor; but pending the commencement of the Federal building they may remain on the land upon payment of a reasonable ground rent. The grantor must, however, remove all improvements on thirty days' notice so to do.

The right to reject any proposal is reserved. Each proposal must be sealed, marked "Proposal for Federal building site at Fulton, N. Y., and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury (Supervising Architect), Washington, D. C. No special form of proposal is required or provided.

GEORGE B. CORTELYOU,
Secretary.
